If we have to protect our armed forces from subversive literature we must admit we are the poorest salesmen of democracy in the world. We have every advantage in this country. Our armed forces are better equipped, better paid, and better entertained. Are we going to say that we are incapable of selling our armed forces, who joined the service voluntarily, on the advantages of democracy, that we have to watch their mail, and that we have to supervise their reading, for fear that they who are enjoying the advantages of our armed service and doing so on their own volition will be sold on the advantages of going toward a form of government where they lose the very liberties they now have in this Nation? [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. Mr. Chairman I rise in opposition to the pro forma amendment.

Mr. Chairman, we have been on this bill now for 4 hours. As the author of the bill, let me say that I think we ought to have exhausted about all the necessary sob stuff about the poor alien and we might now begin to consider something about the American people.

The particular item that is under discussion at this time was not written by me. It was first written by the Mc-Cormack committee, as the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. McCormack] has told you earlier in the afternoon, after an investigation authorized by this Congress into subversive activities. It lay dormant after that for several years and this year the Navy Department redrafted that bill and sent it to the Congress asking for its adoption.

Do you prefer to take the statement of gentlemen who dislike this kind of legislation as to what the Army and the Navy need, or will you take the statement of the experienced officers of the Army and the Navy who tell you their need and tell you that they need legislation of this kind. This is the simple question presented to this committee on this motion, and I took the floor simply to read a statement from the officer of the Navy who appeared before the Judiciary Committee in advocacy of this legisla-

Mr. IZAC. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. SMITH of Virginia. Not at this time.

I take the time now to read this statement to you because gentlemen who have undertaken to quote from the statement of the Navy Department on this subject have, for some reason, omitted to read this particular statement of Lieutenant Nunn. When he appeared before the Judiciary Committee he said:

The last time we came before Congress with this request we were forced to say there had been no apparent damage done. I am afraid now, gentlemen, that we have to report that damage is being done, and that is the reason this measure was renewed after it was allowed to lie dormant during the Seventy-fifth Con-

The choice is yours, whether you will take the word of the Army and the Navy who have had experience with this matter, or take the word of those who dislike legislation of this character.

Mr. IZAC. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. Yes; I yield if I have any more

Mr. IZAC. The gentleman named the officer who appeared before the Judiciary Committee. Will the gentleman state it again, please?

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. I think it was Lieutenant Nunn, but I am not sure.

Mr. HOBBS. Lieutenant Nunn and Commander Bledsoe. Mr. IZAC. Did it ever occur to the gentleman that these are very subordinate officers, and that you did not hear from the head of the Navy, the Secretary of the Navy, or The Assistant Secretary of the Navy?

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. We did hear from everybody in the Navy Department from the Secretary down. When any officer of the Navy is sent to appear before a committee of the House advocating legislation which the Department wants, he is representing the head of the Navy.

Mr. IZAC. Does the gentleman know there is a strong conflict of opinion in the Navy Department and in the War Department, and this is the first year the War Department ever asked for legislation of this kind, being against bills similar to this?

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. We cannot go behind the man who comes here representing a department, and if there was any such division of opinion, it never came to the notice of this committee.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from California [Mr. Izac].

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. Izac) there were-ayes 30, noes 115.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. HOBBS. Mr. Chairman, at the suggestion of the gentleman from New York [Mr. MARCANTONIO], which I appreciate very deeply, I ask unanimous consent that the further reading of the committee substitute be dispensed with, and that the committee substitute be printed in the RECORD at this point and be subject to amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama?

There was no objection.

The matter referred to follows:

Mr. STARNES of Alabama. Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment which I now offer.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Starres of Alabama: On page 20, strike out lines 5 to 10, inclusive, and insert the following: "enter the United States in violation of law; any alien who has been convicted of, or who has admitted in writing that he has engaged in espionage or sabotage for a foreign government since entry into the United States; any alien who, at any time after entry, has been convicted of a violation of or conspiracy to violate any narcotics law of the United States or of any State, Territory, insular possession, or of the District of Columbia, or has been judicially committed to a public or private institution as a habitual user of narcotic drugs; any alien."

Mr. STARNES of Alabama. Mr. Chairman, I shall not take all the time. This is another perfecting amendment.

One of the greatest problems we have today is the question of espionage by aliens. Recent press dispatches disclose the tremendous growth of the activities of alien spies in this country during the past 12 months.

This House has already passed by unanimous consent a bill which I introduced (H. R. 6724) to deport alien spies and saboteurs and alien violators of State narcotic laws, and the Senate Immigration Committee has reported that bill favorably and it is now on the Senate Calendar. This language is to cause the language of the present bill dealing with the same problem to conform with the language of the bill which the House has already approved.

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. STARNES of Alabama. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. CELLER. I may say to the gentleman that the author of the bill, the distinguished gentleman from Virginia [Mr. Smith] and myself and the distinguished gentleman from Alabama [Mr. Hobbs], in charge of the bill, are pleased to accept his amendment.

Mr. STARNES of Alabama. I thank the gentleman.

I simply want to say that this is another evidence of our intention to require court conviction in order to protect an alien charged with a violation of the law from unwarranted deportation. We seek to place around an alien the protective arm of the law and reaffirm our faith and confidence in the courts of the United States. Some of those who have been so bitter in their opposition to this very bill, less than 2 years ago voted down an amendment by the distinguished gentleman from Alabama [Mr. Hobes] which sought to place the protecting arm of the courts around American citizens and the property of American citizens. [Applause.]

Mr. THORKELSON. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the amendment. I am glad to vote for any amendment that has for its purpose the obliteration of un-American activities in the United States. It is only a few days ago, July 19, that I inserted in the daily Record the report of the Department of Justice on German bund activities in the United States. We have heard a great deal about the socalled Nazi, Fascist, and bund organizations in the United States. In referring to the report of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, which fills 14 volumes, I find there are only about 7,000 members of the so-called German bund. They are not considered sufficiently dangerous by the Department of Justice to deserve any special attention. The real danger in the United States is not from activities of that sort, although I must grant that they are un-American activities. The danger lies entirely in communism as it exists now and as it has existed for over 26 years, and for the last 20 years very actively. If the Members will look back they will find in Senate Document 14 a complete résumé of communistic activities prepared by the United Mine Workers of America. The gentleman from Michigan [Mr. HOFFMAN] inserted that same report in the RECORD of June 1, 1937.

I shall call attention now to some of the un-American organizations and extend their names in the RECORD. We have the National Economic and Social Planning Association; the Committee on Neutrality Legislation; the Peoples Lobby; the American Commonwealth Political Federation; the American Commonwealth Plan; the Commonwealth Federation of New York, Inc.; the Commonwealth Federation, April 1937; the Survey Associates; the League for Industrial Democracy; the Public Ownership League; the American Civil Liberties Union, the national committee and board of directors of that union; the cooperative movement; the Utilities Consumers and Investors League (of Illinois); the Committee on National Economic Policy; the Communist Party headed by Earl Browder, William Z. Foster, Herbert Ben-jamin, Sidney Hillman, Israel Amter, and so forth; the Workers Alliance, with David Lasser, Herbert Benjamin, Angelo Herndon, Earl Browder, and others; the Committee for Industrial Organization, C. I. O., John L. Lewis, Charles P. Howard, John Brophy, Sidney Hillman, David Dubinsky, and others; the New School for Social Research, William Leiserson and Rev. Kenneth Lyons; the Public Affairs Committee, financed by the Falk Foundation; the National Religion and Labor Foundation; the Washington Friends of Spanish Democracy, with Leon Henderson, president, and William Leiserson and Rev. Kenneth Lyons; the National Popular Government League; the American Association for Economic Freedom; National Popular Government League; American League Against War and Fascism; the Brookings Institution; North American Committee to Aid Spanish Democracy.

These are some of the groups that are connected with the so-called pink, red, and scarlet activities. Some of the Members of this House are also connected with some of these organizations, and if anyone would like to know who they are I would be glad to give the names of them.

Mr. DONDERO. The gentleman does not intend to include the Brookings Institution in that list?

Mr. THORKELSON. Yes.

Mr. DONDERO. Engaged in subversive activities?

Mr. THORKELSON. Yes; through membership.

Mr. DONDERO. Against the Government of the United States?

Mr. THORKELSON. Yes; through membership.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Montana has expired.

Mr. GEYER of California. Would the gentleman like to give the names of the gentlemen in this House who are Communists?

Mr. THORKELSON. I would be very glad to give the names of the organizations with which they are connected if the gentleman so desires.

Mr. GEYER of California. Suppose the gentleman puts them in the RECORD.

Mr. THORKELSON. I shall if there is no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Montana has expired.

Mr. HOBBS. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate upon the pending amendment close in 5 minutes. The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. DUNN. Mr. Chairman and Members of the Committee, a great deal has been said on the floor today about communism, socialism, fascism, nazi-ism, and so forth. I do not believe that those who advocate a philosophy of Government which is different than our own can be successful in undermining our Government provided we can find employment for the 12,000,000 people who are unemployed and provide adequately for the 30,000,000 people who, according to statistics, are in need of food, shelter, and clothing. Any person who has studied ancient, medieval, and modern history knows that a government which has properly taken care of its subjects was never undermined by an outside power.

If a revolution would come to pass in our country—and I hope that such a thing will never occur—it will happen because the legislative bodies in the United States have failed to do their duty toward their fellow men.

There is not any reason why millions of people in our great, rich land should be deprived of the necessities of life. Our great country has an abundance of everything which is necessary to provide adequately for its people. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Alabama.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HANCOCK. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment. The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Hancock: Page 21, line 1, strike out the word "crime", and insert in lieu thereof the word "felony."

Mr. HANCOCK. I have another amendment, Mr. Chairman, and I would like to have it read so that the Members may know how they fit together.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment. The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment proposed by Mr. Hancock: Page 21, line 2, strike out the words "at any time", and insert in lieu thereof "within 5 years"; in line 3, after the word "States", insert "or who is sentenced more than once to such term of imprisonment because of conviction in this country of any felony involving moral turpitude committed at any time after entry."

Mr. HANCOCK. Mr. Chairman, my amendments simply write into the bill the present language of the law, with this exception, that the word "felony" is substituted for the word "crime." That is to take care of several imaginary hardship cases that the gentlemen from New York IMESSIS. DICKSTEIN and CELLER referred to the other day. They seemed to fear that some little boys were going to be deported for stealing apples, or older aliens for violating traffic rules. There is nothing in the law or the bill which would permit deportation for any such trifling offenses as those, but nevertheless, so that there will be no ambiguity whatsoever, I suggest that we substitute the word "felony" for the word "crime."

I think the present law is sufficiently drastic on the point we are considering. If we take the bill as proposed it means that an alien will be deportable, no matter how long after his admission to this country he may commit one of the crimes specified in this bill. It means that an old man, after being here 40 years, with his roots planted deep in this country, with children and grandchildren American-born, and with no ties at all in the old country, would be deportable. In fact, the deportation would be mandatory if he commits a crime involving moral turpitude and is sentenced to imprisonment for 1 year or more. I think we ought to be moderate about this. I think the present law is sufficiently severe and that the bill, as proposed, goes altogether too far. This amendment should be adopted. simply preserves the present law in this one respect.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from New York wish the two amendments to be considered together?

Mr. HANCOCK. If that is possible.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. HOBBS. What is the other amendment?

Mr. HANCOCK. The other one strikes out the language "at any time" and rewrites the present limitation, which has been the law since 1917.

Mr. HOBBS. Where?

Mr. HANCOCK. In line 2. It means you could not deport a man, after he had been here a lifetime, for one crime and imprisonment. I substitute the limitation provided in the present law.

Mr. HOBBS. Your amendment would leave that part of the section reading "after entry of the alien to the United States"?

Mr. HANCOCK. No. My amendment would provide that if an alien, who had been less than 5 years in this country, were convicted of a crime involving moral turpitude and sentenced to imprisonment for 1 year or more, he could be deported. After that he could not be deported for one such conviction, but could be deported for two or more. It merely continues the present statute of limitations on deportation for conviction of a felony involving moral turpitude which is a very broad term. Also, to satisfy the gentleman from New York, I change the word "crime" to "felony," so that there will be no misunderstanding about that.

Mr. CELLER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HANCOCK. I yield.

Mr. CELLER. I am naturally in accord with the gentleman's viewpoint, and I naturally would vote for such an amendment. I do want to call attention to the fact that on page 23, subdivision (b), it indicates the amendments which are in subparagraph (a) are prospective and not retroactive. However, it is well to include the gentleman's amendment, because that would remove all doubts.

Mr. HANCOCK. My amendment does not change present law except to change the word "crime" to "felony," and I do not believe that changes the meaning of the statute.

Mr. KEEFE. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HANCOCK. I yield.

Mr. KEEFE. Do I understand the first amendment relates to line 1, page 21?

Mr. HANCOCK. That is correct.

Mr. KEEFE. In which you seek to change the word "crime" to "felony"?

Mr. HANCOCK. Yes. I do not think it will change the meaning of the law at all. It will disabuse some people's minds of hallucination and dispell unwarranted fears.

Mr. KEEFE. So that the line would read "conviction in this country of a felony involving moral turpitude"?

Mr. HANCOCK. That is correct.

Mr. KEEFE. And you would exclude all of those classes of crimes which may not be felonies, yet which involve moral turpitude?

Mr. HANCOCK. If the gentleman will read the whole phrase, he will see that both the bill and the present law have reference only to aliens who have been convicted of crimes involving moral turpitude and have been sentenced to imprisonment for 1 year or more. I do not believe it was ever intended to deport aliens for misdemeanors.

Mr. HOBBS. Mr. Chairman, title II is a rewrite of existing law. The trouble which the Immigration Service has had both under Republican administration and Democratic administration, ever since there has been an immigration service, has been with that provision of the original law which says "within 5 years." This committee bill is a sincere attempt to make this a better law. We put in here "committed at any time after entry into this country." I have no objection to the substitution of the word "felony" for the word "crime," because they are synonymous, but I certainly hope that the amendment offered by the distinguished gentleman from New York [Mr. Hancock]—for whose opinion I have the highest regard—will not prevail for it strikes at the heart of this section of the committee substitute. I ask you to vote down his amendment.

Mr. MICHENER. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry. The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.
Mr. MICHENER. I ask that the amendments be divided on the vote.

Mr. HANCOCK. Mr. Chairman, I have no objection to the gentleman's request.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read the first part of the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Hancock: Page 21, line 1, strike out the word "crime" and insert the word "felony."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment. The question was taken; and the Chair being in doubt, the Committee divided, and there were—ayes 111, noes 3.

So, the amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read the second part of the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Hancock: Page 21, line 2, strike out the words "at any time" and insert in lieu thereof "within 5 years", and in line 3, after the word "States", insert "or who is sentenced more than once to such term of imprisonment because of conviction in this country of any felony involving moral turpitude committed at any time after entry."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment. The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. Hancock) there were—ayes 62, noes 68.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment, which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Martin of Colorado: On page 24, line 11, after the word "anarchists", strike out the period, insert a comma, and add the words "Communists, Nazis, or Fascists."

Mr. HOBBS. Mr. Chairman, I move that the Committee do now rise.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the Committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. Chapman, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that Committee, having had under consideration the bill (H. R. 5138) to suppress certain subversive activities, had come to no resolution thereon.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

By unanimous consent leave of absence was granted as follows:

To Mr. Powers (at the request of Mr. Seger), indefinitely, on account of important business.

To Mr. Lesinski, indefinitely, because of illness in family.

PROMOTING NAUTICAL EDUCATION

Mr. BLAND. Mr. Speaker, I call up the conference report on the bill (H. R. 5375) to promote nautical education, and for other purposes, and ask unanimous consent that the statement be read in lieu of the report.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, will the gentleman explain the amendments?

Mr. BLAND. The Senate added two amendments. One made a grammatical correction. On this amendment the House receded. The other amendment required that in working out these nautical-school matters it should be done subject to the rules and regulations of the Navy. It will be recalled that the Coast Guard is under the Treasury Department.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Virginia?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the statement of the managers on the part of the House

The conference report and statement are as follows:

CONFERENCE REPORT

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 5375) to promote nautical education, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendment numbered 2.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 1 and agree to the same.

STATEMENT

The managers on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 5375) to promote nautical education, and for other purposes, submit the following statement in explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon by the conferees and recomof the effect of the action agreed upon by the conferees and recommended in the accompanying conference report.

The House bill authorizes the Commandant of the Coast Guard to detail persons in the Coast Guard for duty in connection with maritime instruction by the United States and by the several States. The Senate amendment No. 1 makes a textual correction, and the House recedes from its disagreement to the amendment and agrees to the same. The Senate amendment No. 2 added a provision that such detail of any person shall be subject to the same rules and regulations as are provided by the Navy in regard to such tours of duty. The Senate recedes from its amendment.

The conference report was agreed to. A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

AMENDMENTS TO MERCHANT MARINE AND SHIPPING ACTS

Mr. BLAND. Mr. Speaker, I call up the conference report on the bill (H. R. 6746) to amend certain provisions of the Merchant Marine and Shipping Acts, to further the development of the American merchant marine, and for other purposes, and ask unanimous consent that the statement may be read in lieu of the report.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. BLAND]?

There was no objection.

The conference report and statement are as follows:

CONFERENCE REPORT

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 6746) to amend certain provisions of the Merchant Marine and Shipping Acts, to further the development of the American merchant marine, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate and agree to the same with the following amendments: On page 2, line 17, of the Senate engrossed amendment, strike out "ten" and insert five; on page 4, line 16, after the words "vessels and" insert a comma, the words for instructional purposes only and a comma; and the Senate agree to the same.

S. O. BLAND. ROBERT RAMSPECK, FRANCIS D. CULKIN, Managers on the part of the House.

JOSIAH W. BAILEY, MORRIS SHEPPARD, WALLACE H. WHITE, JR. W. WARREN BARBOUR, BENNETT C. CLARK, Managers on the part of the Senate.

The managers on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 6746) to amend certain provisions of the Merchant Marine and Shipping Acts, to further the development of the American merchant marine, and for other purposes, submit the following statement in explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon by the conferees and recommended in the accompanying conference report.

The Senate amendment struct out all effer the exacting clause

The Senate amendment struck out all after the enacting clause of the House bill and inserted a substitute which is identical with the House bill, except in sections 3 and 5. The House recedes from its disagreement to the Senate amendment and agrees to the same with amendments.

Section 3 of the House bill amends section 201 (e) of the Merchant Marine Act, 1936, as amended, to authorize the Marines and Marine Act, 1936, as amended, to authorize the Marines and Marine Act, 1936, as amended, to authorize the Marines Act, 1936, as amended, to authorize the Merchant Marine Act, 1936, as amended, to authorize the Maritime Commission to appoint a limited additional number of expert employees without regard to the civil-service laws or the Classification Act of 1923, as amended. The Senate amendment in addition provides for a clerk to the general counsel as an exempt position. The conference agreement adopts this Senate provision. The Senate amendment adds a new subsection (b) to section 3 of the House bill, giving the Maritime Commission authority to detail annually not to exceed 10 members of its staff for advanced technical training at institutions for scientific education and research. The conference agreement adopts the Senate provisions with an amendment reducing the number of persons who may be so detailed for training from 10 to 5.

Section 5 of the House bill amends section 216 of the Merchant Marine Act, 1936, as amended, to authorize the Maritime Commis-

Section 5 of the House bill amends section 216 of the Merchant Marine Act, 1936, as amended, to authorize the Maritime Commission to provide for the training of cadets on ships and for extension and correspondence courses for merchant marine personnel and cadets. The Senate amendment further amends section 216 to extend the class of eligible trainees in the existing maritime service to include persons without previous experience. The conference agreement adopts the Senate provision.

The Senate amendment (sec. 5), in addition to the authority granted in the House bill to train cadets on ships, authorizes the training of such cadets in shipyards, plants, and industrial and educational organizations. The conference agreement adopts the Senate provision with an amendment clearly restricting the use of shipyards, plants, and industrial and educational organizations, in the training of cadets, to instructional purposes only.

S. O. BLAND, ROBERT RAMSPECK, FRANCIS D. CULKIN, Managers on the part of the House.

The conference report was agreed to. A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

AMENDMENT TO FEDERAL HOME LOAN BANK ACT, HOME OWNERS' LOAN ACT OF 1933, AND TITLE OF THE NATIONAL HOUSING ACT

Mr. SABATH, from the Committee on Rules, submitted the following privileged resolution (Rept. No. 1413), which was referred to the House Calendar and ordered to be printed:

House Resolution 280

Resolved, That upon the adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of H. R. 6971, a bill to amend the Federal Home Loan Bank Act, Home Owners' Loan Act of 1933, title IV of the National Housing Act, and for other purposes, and all points of order against said bill are hereby waived. That after general debate, which shall be confined to the bill and continue not to exceed 2 hours, to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Banking and Currency, the bill shall be read for amendment under the 5-minute rule. At the conclusion of the consideration of the bill for amendment the Committee shall rise and report the bill to the House with such amendments as may have been adopted and the previous question shall be considered as ordered on the bill and amendments thereto to final passage without intervening motion, except one motion to recom-Resolved, That upon the adoption of this resolution it shall be passage without intervening motion, except one motion to recommit. with or without instructions.

ADMINISTRATION OF UNITED STATES COURTS

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Speaker, I call up the conference report on the bill S. 188, to provide for the administration of the United States courts, and for other purposes, and ask unanimous consent that the statement may be read in lieu of the report.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York [Mr. CELLER]?

There was no objection.

The conference and statement are as follows:

CONFERENCE REPORT

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the House to the bill (S. 188) to provide for the administration of the United States courts, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House, and agree to the same with amendments as follows:

On page 2 of the engrossed House amendment, in line 17, after the word "supervision" insert "and direction".

On page 4, in line 23, after the word "Budget" insert the following sentence: "All estimates so submitted shall be included in the Budget without revision (but subject to the recommendations of the Bureau of the Budget thereon), in the same manner as is provided for the estimates of the Supreme Court by section 201 of said Act."

On page 7 in line 8 strike the word "constitute" and insert in

On page 7, in line 8, strike the word "constitute" and insert in lieu thereof the words "be deemed to be".

On page 7, in line 14, insert quotation marks at the end of the line following the words "for such circuit".

On page 7, in line 15, strike "Sec. 309" and insert in lieu thereof "Sec. 2".

On page 8, in line 8, strike "Sec. 2" and insert in lieu thereof "Sec. 3".

On page 8, in line 21, strike "Sec. 3" and insert in lieu thereof "Sec. 4".

On page 9, in line 6, strike "Sec. 4" and insert in lieu thereof "Sec. 5."

On page 9, in line 12, strike "Sec. 5" and insert in lieu thereof "Sec. 6."

On page 9, in line 17, after the words "of the courts," insert the words "and such other employees of the courts not excluded by section 304 of Chapter XV as hereinbefore set forth,".

On page 9, in line 19, strike "Sec. 6" and insert in lieu thereof "Sec. 7."

And the House agree to the same.

EMANUEL CELLER. WALTER CHANDLER, SAM HOBBS EARL C. MICHENER, JOHN W. GWYNNE, Managers on the part of the House. CARL A. HATCH,
M. M. LOGAN,
EDWARD R. BURKE,
WARREN R. AUSTIN,
JOHN A. DANAHER, Managers on the part of the Senate.

The managers on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the House to the bill (S. 188) to provide for the administration of the United States courts, and for other purposes, submit the following statement in explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon by the conferees and recommended in the accompanying conference by the conferees and recommended in the accompanying conference report:

The House amendment struck out all after the enacting clause of the Senate bill and inserted the provisions of the companion House bill (H. R. 5999) with committee amendments. The Senate recedes from its disagreement to the House amendment and agrees to the same with the modifications hereinafter explained.

The Senate bill provided that Budget estimates for the courts should be included in the Budget without revision. The House amendment struck out this provision, leaving the estimates subject to the revision of the Bureau of the Budget. As agreed upon in conference, the estimates are to be included in the Budget without revision, but the Bureau of the Budget may submit recommendaevision, but the Bureau of the Budget may submit recommenda-revision, but the Bureau of the Budget may submit recommendations thereon.

The House amendment placed all employees except the Director and Assistant Director under civil service, a provision which the Senate bill did not contain. The House provision is retained.

Both the Senate bill and the House amendment provide that all administrative powers and duties now conferred upon the Department of Justice with reference to certain employees shall be transferred to the administrative office of the United States courts. In the Senate bill the employees listed are clerks of courts, their deputies, and clerical assistants, law clerks, secretaries and stenographers to the judges librarians in charge of libraries of the courts. uties, and clerical assistants, law clerks, secretaries and stenographers to the judges, librarians in charge of libraries of the courts, and all other employees of the courts. The House amendment struck out the words "and all other employees of the courts." The conferees agreed to substitute for the quoted words the following: "and such other employees of the court not excluded by section 304 of chapter XV as hereinabove set forth." Section 304 referred to provides that nothing contained in this act shall be construed as affecting the authority of the courts to appoint their administrative or clerical personnel, or the authority of the Attorney General respecting United States marshals and their deputies, United States attorneys, and their assistants.

The House amendment contained a provision not found in the Senate bill repealing a part of the current appropriation act for the Senate bill repealing a part of the current appropriation act for the Justice Department, which provided that no part of the appropriasustee Department, which provided that no part of the appropriation should be used to pay any probation officer whose work falls to comply with orders and regulations of the Attorney General and unless the district judge shall have, so far as possible, required the appointee to conform with qualifications prescribed by the Attorney General. The House provision is retained.

There are several changes made in the wording of the House amendment to attain more precise expression without substantial change in meaning. Several section numbers are also changed.

EMANUEL CELLER WALTER CHANDLER, SAM HOBBS. EARL C. MICHENER, JOHN W. GWYNNE, Managers on the part of the House.

The conference report was agreed to. A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. MURDOCK of Utah asked and was given permission to revise and extend his own remarks in the RECORD.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the Record and to include copies of three telegrams.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California [Mr. SHEPPARD]?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I wonder if some of these unanimousconsent requests might be postponed until tomorrow. We had anticipated holding a conference at 5 o'clock, and it is getting far beyond that time now.

The SPEAKER. That is a matter that rests entirely with the Members who seek recognition. The Chair cannot control that matter.

Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California [Mr. SHEPPARD]?

There was no objection.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members who spoke on the bill today may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their own remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MARTIN]?

There was no objection.

Mr. Coffee of Washington, Mr. Patrick, Mr. Bender, and Mr. Leavy asked and were given permission to revise and extend their own remarks in the RECORD.

ENROLLED BILL SIGNED

Mr. PARSONS, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that that committee had examined and found truly enrolled a bill of the House of the following title, which was thereupon signed by the Speaker:

H. R. 1996. An act to amend the National Stolen Property

BILLS PRESENTED TO THE PRESIDENT

Mr. PARSONS, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that that committee did on the following dates present to the President, for his approval, bills of the House of the following titles:

SENATE

SATURDAY, JULY 29, 1939

(Legislative day of Tuesday, July 25, 1939)

The Senate met at 11 o'clock a. m., on the expiration of the

The Reverend Duncan Fraser, assistant rector, Church of the Epiphany, Washington, D. C., offered the following prayer:

O God, our refuge from one generation to another, in whose sight a thousand years are but as yesterday; regard in mercy, we beseech Thee, those who have served Thee in this Senate, and now sleep in peace. Rest eternal, grant unto them, O Lord, and let light perpetual shine upon them. And to these Thy servants who succeed them grant Thy grace, that, in the best and surest traditions of this land, they may pursue their labors, mindful of Thy glory and the trust bestowed upon them. Through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

THE JOURNAL

On request of Mr. BARKLEY, and by unanimous consent, the reading of the Journal of the proceedings of the calendar day, Friday, July 28, 1939, was dispensed with, and the Journal was approved.

Mr. MINTON. I announce that the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. REYNOLDS] and the Senator from Arizona [Mr.

ASHURST] are detained from the Senate because of illness in their families.

The Senator from Arkansas [Mrs. Caraway], the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. Lee], and the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. SMATHERS] are absent on important public business.

The Senator from Ohio [Mr. Donahey], the Senator from Virginia [Mr. Glass], the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. Logan], and the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. Overton] are unavoidably detained.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Eighty-four Senators have answered to their names, a quorum is present.

ROY F. LASSLY

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senator a letter from the Acting Secretary of the Interior, transmitting a draft of proposed legislation for the relief of Roy F. Lassly, former Acting Chief Disbursing Clerk, Department of the Interior, which, with the accompanying paper, was referred to the Committee on Claims.

JUNE REPORT OF THE RECONSTRUCTION FINANCE CORPORATION

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a letter from the Chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, transmitting, pursuant to law, a report of the activities and expenses of the Corporation for the month of June 1939 and statement of condition as of the close of business on June 30, 1939, which, with the accompanying papers, was referred to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

PETITION AND MEMORIALS

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a resolution of the board of governors of the Advertising Club of Baltimore, Md., favoring the return of the U.S. frigate Constellation to the port of Baltimore and requesting that the frigate be assigned a permanent berth at Fort McHenry, Md., which was referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Mr. CAPPER presented a memorial of sundry citizens of Topeka, Kans., remonstrating against the enactment of the bill (S. 2864) to provide for the financing of a program of recoverable expenditures, and for other purposes, which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented a paper in the nature of a memorial from the National Grange, signed by Fred Brenckman, Washington representative, remonstrating against the enactment of the bill (S. 2864) to provide for the financing of a program of recoverable expenditures, and for other purposes, which was ordered to lie on the table.

PROGRAM FOR FINANCING RECOVERABLE EXPENDITURES-MEMORIAL

Mr. HOLMAN. Mr. President, I have a circular from the National Grange, of which I am a member as an Oregon farmer. The circular protests against the enactment of the pending bill known as the spending-lending bill. I ask unanimous consent to have it lie on the table and be published in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the paper in the nature of a memorial was ordered to lie on the table and be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

> THE NATIONAL GRANGE. Washington, D. C., July 28, 1939.

To Members of Congress:

We desire to register an earnest protest against the enactment of the pending bill for the construction and financing of self-liquidating projects, H. R. 7120 and S. 2759. After a careful reading of this measure, we are thoroughly persuaded that it would be contrary to the best interests of the country to pass it.

contrary to the best interests of the country to pass it.

It must simply be regarded as a camouflage to hide the mounting figures of the public debt, and it is intended to circumvent and violate the provisions of an act of Congress, passed at the time of the World War, fixing the limit of national indebtedness at $45,000,000.000. According to official estimates, that limit will be reached before the end of the present fiscal year.

It cannot be successfully denied that the repeated efforts that have been made to "prime the pump" by Government lending and spending on an unprecedented scale have been a colossal failure. While each fresh shot in the arm was followed by temporary improvement, after the effects had worn off our basic condition was rendered more desperate than before.

The truth is that in pursuing this unsound and misguided policy

The truth is that in pursuing this unsound and misguided policy the people of the United States are progressively being reduced to one of the most hopeless forms of slavery—the slavery that goes with debt. Even at the low average rate of 2.57 percent, the interest on the national debt amounts to the staggering sum of a billion dollars a year. Roughly, 20 cents out of every dollar collected by the Government in taxes goes in payment of interest. The pending bill would make permanent the present lending and spending policy of the Government, and all the losses involved would automatically be taken out of the Federal Treasury.

There can be no doubt that the vast lump-sum appropriations that have been voted in recent years have done more to destroy the independence and self-respect of Congress than all other factors combined. This system of making appropriations has made a grab bag of the Federal Treasury and has had a demoralizing effect on the people. Surely the time has come when Congress should resume its constitutional prerogatives and put an end to this orgy of deficits, waste, and unbridled extravagance.

its constitutional prerogatives and put an end to this orgy of deficits, waste, and unbridled extravagance.

Mentioning just one of the self-liquidating projects contained in the bill now being considered, the Bureau of Public Roads, in a voluminous report published some months ago, clearly indicated that the dream of a system of superhighways, supported by tolls, was not feasible on the financial side, because the revenues to be derived from tolls would not pay for the cost of constructing and maintaining such roads. There are scarcely any toll roads left in the country and there is a prejudice against toll bridges. It may, therefore, be taken for granted that if the proposed roads should be built in a few short years the attempt to recover the cost of construction through the collection of tolls would be abandoned, saddling a heavy financial responsibility upon the Treasury.

Another item contained in the bill authorizes the sum of $500,-000,000 for rural electrification projects. The Grange has given its hearty support to the plan launched in this connection several years ago. We consider it one of the soundest steps ever taken by the Government to improve conditions in the farming sections. However, since the basic act for rural electrification, passed in 1936, authorizes the appropriation of $40,000,000 annually over a 10-year span for loans on such projects, there would seem to be no necessity for this provision in the measure now being debated in Congress. Several other items contained in the bill are open to many objections.

One of the fundamental reasons why this bill should not be enacted is that it would discourage private initiative and would take us farther along the road toward making America a collectivist state. If President Roosevelt should issue a clear, definite, and positive statement to the effect that it was our fixed purpose to continue our traditional American system of private enterprise, and if such legislation as this were thrown into the discard, it would do more than anything else could to bring about such an upturn in every branch of American industry and business as would give cause for universal rejoicing.

Yours very sincerely,

THE NATIONAL GRANGE. FRED BRENCKMAN Washington Representative.

PUMP PRIMING

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, I present a communication in the nature of a petition from Mr. J. B. Sager, of St. Louis, Mo. Attached to it, by way of illustration, is a leather gadget which I understand is technically known as a sucker in connection with pump priming. The message is as follows:

WANTED: MORE SUCKERS FOR NEW DEAL THEORIES

This thing may have a technical name, but every real farmer (like the Squire of Hyde Park) calls it a sucker.

Continued pump priming indicates that new suckers are needed—the old ones are worn out.

Maybe it would be better to fix the pump-or get a new one. A WORN OUT SUCKER.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

Mr. HOLMAN, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to which was referred the bill (S. 2295) authorizing the President to reappoint and honorably discharge David J. Sawyer, second lieutenant, National Army, as of May 11, 1919, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 1037) thereon.

Mr. MINTON, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to which was referred the bill (S. 2433) for the relief of Frank Casey, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 1038) thereon.

CONTINUATION OF SPECIAL COMMITTEE ON TAXATION OF GOVERN-MENTAL SECURITIES AND SALARIES

Mr. BROWN, from the Committee on Finance, to which was referred the resolution (S. Res. 172) continuing the Special Committee on the Taxation of Governmental Securities and Salaries (submitted by Mr. Brown on the 27th instant), reported it without amendment, and, under the rule, the resolution was referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate.

NOMINATION OF EDWARD E. DEWEY-RECONSIDERATION

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, a few days ago the nomination of Edward E. Dewey to be postmaster at Decatur, Ark., was confirmed by the Senate. Upon the request of both Senators from that State, I ask unanimous consent, as in executive session, that the vote by which the nomination was confirmed may be reconsidered and the nomination restored to the Executive Calendar.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Tennessee? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

BILLS INTRODUCED

Bills were introduced, read the first time, and, by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred as follows:

By Mr. McKELLAR:

S. 2917. A bill for the relief of the Dixie Margarine Co., a Tennessee corporation, of Memphis, Tenn. (with accompanying papers); to the Committee on Claims.

PROGRAM FOR FINANCING RECOVERABLE EXPENDITURES—STATEMENT OF SENATOR THOMAS OF OKLAHOMA AS TO YEA-AND-NAY VOTES

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, on yesterday I was necessarily absent from the Senate, and during my absence several votes were taken. I desire to state for the RECORD how I would have voted had I been present.

On the Wheeler-La Follette amendment to help farm owners through the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation, which appears on page 10261 of the Record, and the vote on which appears on page 10295 of the Record of yesterday, Friday, July 28, 1939, had I been present, I would have voted "yea."

On the motion to reconsider the vote by which the so-called Byrd amendment was rejected. On the motion of the Senator from Indiana [Mr. Van Nuys] to reconsider the vote by which the amendment of the Senator from Virginia [Mr. Byrd] proposing to strike out the roads provision of the pending bill, on which motion the yeas and nays appear on page 10297 of the Record of yesterday, had I been present, I should have voted "nay." On the vote on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Virginia, which appears on the same page, had I been present, I should have voted "nay."

Then, late last night, on the Wheeler amendment relating to funds to be loaned to the railroads, the vote on that amendment is found on page 10349 of yesterday's Record. Had I been present, I should have voted "nay."

PROGRAM FOR FINANCING RECOVERABLE EXPENDITURES

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (S. 2864) to provide for the financing of a program of recoverable expenditures, and for other purposes.

The VICE PRESIDENT. When the Senate took a recess late last evening the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. O'MA-HONEY] was occupying the floor and yielded, apparently, for the purpose of permitting a motion to be made for a recess of the Senate. The Chair feels that he should recognize the Senator from Wyoming.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, when I rose last night I asked that the clerk state the amendment offered by me. Before that is done, however, I desire to call attention to the fact that when the amendment was presented it consisted of two provisions, the first of which had to do with the maintenance of free private enterprise generally, while the second was an amendment to the provision dealing with rural electrification. The latter amendment was afterward offered by the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. Barkley] and adopted. Therefore, it should be omitted from this amendment.

I think it becomes necessary also to alter a word in the amendment. May I ask the Senator from Kentucky what is the title of the head of the Public Works Administration?

Mr. BARKLEY. The title of the organization is "Administration of Public Works."

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I meant the title of the chief.

Mr. BARKLEY. It is "Public Works Commissioner."

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Let the amendment be modified, on page 2, line 2, by inserting the word "Commissioner" in lieu of "Administrator."

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be modified as requested by the Senator from Wyoming.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Now, may the amendment be stated?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 4, line 17, after the word "act", it is proposed to insert a colon and the following:

Provided, That in order that the competitive system of private enterprise for profit shall be maintained and encouraged, loans under this subsection shall be so administered as not to promote any undertaking in a field now adequately supplied by existing competitive private enterprise or by existing noncompetitive private enterprise at reasonable rates or prices, unless in the latter case a reasonable offer is made to acquire the facilities of such noncompetitive enterprise and such offer has not been accepted, and a finding to that effect has been made after public hearing by the Public Works Commissioner.

Mr. RADCLIFFE. Mr. President-

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I yield to the Senator from Maryland. Mr. RADCLIFFE. It is my understanding that the provision for a finding in the latter part of the amendment refers both to the reasonableness of the rates and also to the matter of the nonacceptance of the offer.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. The Senator is quite right. Mr. RADCLIFFE. There might be some slight element of doubt in regard to it. In order that the matter may be stated with a little more particularity and emphasis, I ask the Senator whether he would object to the following lan-

Amend by striking out the last word on page 1 of the amendment and also by striking out the first two lines on page 2 of the amendment and by inserting in lieu thereof the following language:

Finding, as to both the reasonableness of said offer and also as to its failure of acceptance, has been made after a public hearing by the Public Works Commissioner.

In other words, that would clearly tie in the word "finding" with both the matter of the reasonableness of the rate and also the question of acceptance.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Will the Senator be good enough to send me the language he proposes?

Mr. RADCLIFFE. Certainly.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. The Senator desires to strike out the word "finding," in line 10, page 1, and lines 1 and 2 on page 2 and substitute in lieu thereof these words:

Finding as to both the reasonableness of said offer and also as to its failure of acceptance, has been made after a public hearing by the Public Works Commissioner.

I have no objection to that language, although I do not think there is any need for it.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. The addition makes the language a little complicated, Why would it not be simpler to say "and a finding to that effect as to both conditions," the reasonableness and the acceptance or nonacceptance of the offer, so that it would tie in without repetition?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I think that is quite immaterial. Both suggestions are exactly the same, and I am quite willing to accept either one.

Mr. RADCLIFFE. I thought the meaning was clear; but there is some danger that the word "finding" might be given a restricted interpretation, and for that reason I thought it might be advisable to make the language explicit.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, I am willing to accept the modification.

Mr. BARKLEY. If the Senator will yield, I have no objection to the amendment. In fact, we attempted in the committee, not very satisfactorily, to work out a provision, which was later eliminated, and we have been working on one. I see no objection to this one. I think it accomplishes what we are seeking to do. But I wonder why the Senator, in line 1, on page 2, has provided that the finding must be had after a public hearing. In all the provisions of this kind in the bill heretofore we have not required public hearings, as I understand, and under this language, even where both parties agreed that there had been an offer and a failure to accept, there would still have to be a public hearing.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I think notice of a public hearing would be quite sufficient. I feel very strongly that the holding of a hearing in public upon any matter of public business is of the utmost importance. I do not believe it would be wise to delete that phrase. As a matter of fact, I think it would open the amendment to a great deal of attack, because it would raise the question whether or not it was desired on the part of the Public Works Commission to make these loans and encourage public enterprises and public construction without public hearings and without public knowledge.

Mr. BARKLEY. I do not think there has been any abuse of that power.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I think the Senator is quite right.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Wyoming accepts the suggestion of the Senator from Maryland. The clerk will now report the amendment as modified.

The Legislative Clerk. As modified, the amendment is on page 4, line 17, after the word "act", to insert a colon and the following:

Provided, That in order that the competitive system of private enterprise for profit shall be maintained and encouraged, loans under this subsection shall be so administered as not to promote any undertaking in a field now adequately supplied by existing competitive private enterprise or by existing noncompetitive private enterprise at reasonable rates or prices, unless in the latter case a reasonable offer is made to acquire the facilities of such noncompetitive enterprise and such offer has not been accepted, and a finding as to both the reasonableness of said offer and also as to its failure of acceptance has been made after a public hearing by the Public Works Commission.

Mr. BARKLEY. I think the word "its" ought to be "the."

Mr. O'MAHONEY. The Senator is quite right.

Mr. BARKLEY. I think there is one unnecessary "also" in the amendment.

Mr. RADCLIFFE. The word "also" is not necessary, but it does not detract or otherwise modify. It points out merely with a little more particularity what is intended. I do not object, however, to its being eliminated.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, will the Senator from Wyoming yield?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I yield.

Mr. TYDINGS. I am thoroughly in sympathy with the amendment offered by the Senator from Wyoming; but let me ask for a little explanation of some things which to me are not quite clear.

I suppose that the philosophy of the amendment is that the R. F. C., or any other agency, shall not make loans for the purpose of Government operation unless the field is inadequately supplied by private industry, or in accordance with the other restrictions here set out. Am I correct in that assumption?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. The Senator is correct in the assumption so far as it deals with the Public Works Administration. The amendment is not connected with the section which deals with the R. F. C., because the R. F. C., as I understand, has been universally accepted from the very beginning as dealing with private enterprise. The Public Works Administration was taken out of the hands of the R. F. C. when the N. I. R. A. was established, and it has not since gone back.

Mr. TYDINGS. To what agencies would the amendment apply?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. The amendment as I originally offered it applied to the Public Works Administration and to the Rural Electrification Administration. The second amendment, found in the last three lines on page 2, was afterward offered by the Senator from Kentucky and adopted. So the amendment now before the Senate applies to the Public Works Administration.

Mr. TYDINGS. The provision, however, is that loans shall not be made under this subsection so as to promote any undertaking "in a field now adequately supplied by existing competitive private enterprise or by existing noncompetitive enterprise." What is noncompetitive private enterprise?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. A noncompetitive private enterprise would be a public utility serving a city where there is no competition.

Mr. BARKLEY. And having a monopoly.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. And having a monopoly.

Mr. TYDINGS. Does not the Senator think that the exigencies of this case demand that the amendment be forthright, to the effect that where private enterprise is now serving a community or a need set forth in the application of the proposed borrower, the agencies lending the money on the part of the Government should be precluded directly, and that there should not be any latitude?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I do not agree with that suggestion, for this reason: I believe still in local self-government, and the largest possible amount of local self-government, and, if a city anywhere in this country should desire to establish a municipal electric-light plant, I know of no reason why Congress should adopt language in this amendment which would prevent the city from doing it, or from getting the advantage of a loan for the purpose of doing it. I have protected in this amendment the right of private enterprise from being unjustifiably pushed out of the field by Government competition.

Mr. TYDINGS. Of course, under the amendment or without it, any city can establish a municipal enterprise, and there is no law which has been passed by Congress or which is contemplated, which would stop any city from going into an undertaking which has heretofore been administered by private enterprise itself. But why should we lend the money under the thought that we are helping industry in the country—and I understand that is the philosophy of the proposed loans—if to any extent at all the undertaking is to be merely a duplication of what private industry is doing?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I think the answer to that is simple. There are cases of utility companies which have been granted franchises in particular communities operating those franchises without due regard to the needs of the consumers.

Mr. TYDINGS. Understand, I am not complaining at all at the Senator's objective. I am thoroughly in sympathy with the lending of money for rural electrification. I think, properly administered, that is one of the best things we have done.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. The amendment does not deal with rural electrification.

Mr. BARKLEY. And it is not necessary that it do so, because in the rural electrification law itself—

Mr. TYDINGS. I was only saying that for the purpose of illustration. I did not contend that the amendment dealt with rural electrification. I am merely expressing a philosophy that, inasmuch as the loans are to be for the help of business and for making work and making jobs, the money should not be used in taking over existing concerns, but in building new ones. That is the thought I am trying to express, and I have no idea at all of getting into a debate on the utilities question either one way or the other.

The purpose of the amendment is to help industry and to provide jobs, and I do not think that loans should be made under it—perhaps they might be under another measure—or that any of this money should be taken to finance the duplication of something already in existence. That ought to be covered in some other bill. The object of the amendment is to aid business and to make jobs. That is my thought, and I am not quarreling at all with the Senator's objective. I was wondering whether or not the language as drawn would not permit the lending agencies to lend money to take over something which already exists, when the purpose of the amendment is to help industry and to provide jobs, and in that case it would not provide jobs.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, I doubt very much whether there would be any great danger of what the Senator apprehends. Protection is thrown around private enterprise in the amendment by requiring that in such cases as the Senator describes, before any public-works enterprise can be undertaken, there must first be a reasonable offer to acquire the facilities of the noncompetitive enterprise and the offer not accepted, and then the noncompetitive enterprise shall be given the opportunity at a public hearing to explain the entire situation. I am strongly of the opinion that the provision for a public hearing is one of the most effective provisions in the amendment.

Mr. TYDINGS. I am not going to detain the Senate to take issue with the Senator's philosophy, because I am basically in accord with it. I think I can take my seat with the general conclusion that the Senate, in adopting the amendment, is hoping and expecting and demanding that it be administered in line with the colloquy which has here taken place, and any other interpretation put upon it will be foreign to the intention of the Senate.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, I quite agree with the Senator. The adoption of this amendment, together with the action of the Senate throughout the consideration of the bill, is a clear declaration that in the opinion of the Senate free private enterprise should be protected and encouraged by government.

Mr. TYDINGS. And not competed with by government.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Exactly.

Mr. MINTON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I yield.

Mr. MINTON. Let me see if I understand the position of the Senator from Wyoming on his amendment. If a municipality wanted to build an electric-light plant and do it under this provision, and there existed a competing utility, there would have to be a determination by the Commissioner of Public Works that the rates were unreasonable, and that a reasonable offer had been made to purchase the utility's property. Is that correct?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. No; the provision is, "or by existing noncompetitive enterprise at reasonable rates or prices, unless in the latter case a reasonable offer is made to acquire the facilities and such offer has not been accepted." Those are the two primary conditions.

Mr. MINTON. In other words, if a municipality wanted to erect an electric-light plant, and there was already a public utility in the community, under this provision, before the municipality could get it there would have to be a determination by the Commissioner of Public Works that the rates of the utility in that community were unreasonable, and that the municipality had offered to purchase the utility at a reasonable price?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. No; I do not think that interpretation is justified. Let me read it:

Provided, That in order that the competitive system of private enterprise for profit shall be maintained and encouraged, loans under this subsection shall be so administered as not to promote any undertaking in a field now adequately supplied by existing—

I am omitting a phrase now-by existing noncompetitive enterprise at reasonable rates or prices, unless— $\,$

So the question of the rates does not enter.

Mr. MINTON. I understood the amendment of the Senator from Maryland [Mr. RADCLIFFE] to be such as to tie in two conditions.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. No; the amendment of the Senator from Maryland merely provides that it shall be quite clear that the finding of the Public Works Commissioner must be upon the two qualifying factors; namely, that a reasonable offer has been made, and that such offer has not been accepted.

Mr. MINTON. Are those two findings preliminary to the right of the municipality to seek aid under this bill?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. No. I think the application could be made, and after the application had been made, that would be the final act and not the preliminary act.

Mr. MINTON. In any event, before the municipality could have a final determination of the right to receive aid under this act, would there not have to be a determination by the Public Works Commissioner that the rate charged by the utility was unreasonable?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I think not. That is not my interpretation of this language. Is that the interpretation of the Senator from Maryland?

Mr. RADCLIFFE. The Senator from Wyoming is entirely correct. The word "reasonableness" there has to do only with the matter of the offer of purchase. It has no concern with the question of the rates charged by the utility or any other company. It is restricted to the matter of price of the sale of the company.

Mr. MINTON. Let me ask the Senator from Wyoming a further question.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I yield.

Mr. MINTON. Who, in his judgment, would be the judge of the reasonableness of the price?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. The Public Works Commissioner, after public hearing.

Mr. MINTON. Does the Senator think that would be final?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Yes.

Mr. MINTON. Could the finding not be taken into the courts?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I do not think so, unless the court action were based upon an allegation that the finding was arbitrary, and the public hearing, I think, eliminates that suggestion.

Mr. MINTON. Would not the Senator feel that the amendment would be safer if there were inserted in it a provision that the finding of the Commissioner should be final?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, I hope the Senator will not make that suggestion, because the purpose of this amendment is perfectly simple. It is to give notice to the people of the Nation that it is not the intention of this body, of the Congress, or of the Government to do anything which will interfere with free private enterprise.

I feel that the time has come when we should make it clear that, having won the objectives of maintaining the rights of popular development, we should not proceed to crush private enterprise. The unfortunate fact is that a feeling is growing in this country that the purpose of the Government is not to encourage private enterprise, but to crush it, and to substitute big government for private business.

The amendment suggested by the Senator from Indiana would, in my opinion, have a very unfortunate effect.

I say that, because there has been declaration after declaration by the President of the United States, by Members of this body, by Members of the House, by officials in the executive arm of the Government, that the purpose of the Congress and of the Government is to encourage free private enterprise. Now, let there be no doubt about it.

Mr. HILL. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I yield to the Senator from Alabama. Mr. HILL. Does the Senator know that we have the Federal Works Agency and then we have the P. W. A. under the Federal Works Agency? Mr. Carmody is head of one and Colonel Clark is at present the head of the other. The finding would be made by the head of the P. W. A. or the head of the Federal Works Agency, would it not?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. It would be by the Public Works Commissioner, who, I understand, is Mr. Carmody.

Mr. HILL. We have the Public Works Administration under the Federal Works Agency. Is it the idea that the finding would be by the head of the Federal Works Agency?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Whoever is the Public Works Commissioner. I adopted that title at the suggestion of the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. Barkley].

Mr. HILL. That is the "Public Works Administrator." Is that the language in the amendment?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. No; it is "Public Works Commissioner," as the amendment now stands.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. Under the Reorganization Act, the plan adopted by the President, the name is changed. This would come under the Public Works; it would be the Public Works Commissioner. He is the same official. He has charge of the Public Works Administration. He has charge of the entire public-works program—roads, or whatever may be in progress in the way of construction. He has an over-all charge of it.

Mr. HILL. That is the office held today by Mr. Carmody. Mr. BARKLEY. Yes; the office held by Mr. Carmody.

Mr. HILL. May I ask the Senator from Wyoming another question?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I am happy to yield.

Mr. HILL. It is the Senator's intention to strike out the word "Commission" and put in the word "Commissioner"?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. That has already been done.

Mr. HILL. Then, as I understand it, the finding of the Public Works Commissioner will be final in the matter; and in making the finding the question will be solely as to whether or not a reasonable offer has been made.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Yes; unless, of course, I must acknowledge, that if there were arbitrary action there would still be appeal to the courts. But, Mr. President, in drafting this amendment, with the assistance of officials in the executive arm of the Government, it has been my purpose to avoid certain other restrictive amendments, which, in my opinion, have a lawsuit in every line. The language of the amendment avoids that difficulty.

Mr. HILL. I am glad to hear the Senator say that, because that is the very thought I had in mind.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I thought the Senator had that in mind.

Mr. HILL. We have had many lawsuits, particularly where any matter of public power has been involved. We have had many splendid projects held up for years through injunctions and lawsuits, and I want to see every safeguard is provided to prevent and inhibit lawsuits.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I yield.

Mr. KING. I am somewhat in doubt with respect to the words "at reasonable rates or prices." I am in doubt who is to determine the reasonable rates or prices. Is this intended to supersede the authority possessed by the public-utilities commissions of the respective States?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. No, indeed.

Mr. KING. Because they might say that a certain price is reasonable, and I should be very sorry to take from them that authority.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. No; I should say that the decision of the public-utilities commission in any State would be controlling as to the reasonableness of the rates.

Mr. KING. I should preserve that authority, and would be very much opposed to transferring the authority of the States and their public-utilities commissions, to determine the reasonableness of rates, to some functionary in Washington, whether it was Mr. Carmody or any of his assistants.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I quite agree with the Senator. There is no possibility of that under this amendment.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I yield.

Mr. NORRIS. There is so much confusion in the Chamber that I am not clear as to just what modification has been made.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I will read the modification.

Mr. NORRIS. Let me ask the Senator a question before he does that. There are two parts to the amendment as printed. One has already been agreed to.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. The amendment which is covered by the last three lines on page 2 has already been adopted and is not now before the Senate.

Mr. NORRIS. Yes; that is not a part of the pending amendment.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. That is not a part of the pending amendment.

Mr. NORRIS. I should like to know how the amendment now reads.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I shall read the amendment to the Senate, beginning in line 2, page 1:

Provided, That in order that the competitive system of private enterprise for profit shall be maintained and encouraged, loans under this subsection shall be so administered as not to promote any undertaking in a field now adequately supplied by existing competitive private enterprise or by existing noncompetitive private enterprise at reasonable rates or prices, unless in the latter case a reasonable offer is made to acquire the facilities of such noncompetitive enterprise and such offer has not been accepted, and a finding—

This is the change-

as to both the reasonableness of said offer and also as to the failure of acceptance has been made by the Public Works Commissioner.

The Senator from Maryland [Mr. RADCLIFFE] was of the opinion that the original language in the amendment, "a finding to that effect," might be subject to misinterpretation, and his amendment was merely clarifying.

Mr. NORRIS. I think the change does not in reality alter the amendment at all.

Mr. President, I do not want to take the time of the Senator in making an argument—

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, there was an apparent omission. I did not read the language correctly. It should read:

And also as to the failure of acceptance has been made after public hearing by the Public Works Commissioner.

Mr. NORRIS. I ask the Senator whether his amendment has any other object than to prevent the construction by a municipality of a municipal electric light plant?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, I beg the Senator's pardon. My attention was diverted by my conversation with the clerk. May I ask the Senator to repeat his question?

Mr. NORRIS. So as to obtain an understanding as to what the amendment is driving at, is there any other object in the amendment except to prevent a municipality from obtaining assistance if it wants to put in a municipal electric light plant when one already exists and is privately owned?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. That is not the purpose of the amendment. The purpose of the amendment is to carry out this sentence in the letter of the President of the United States to the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. Byrnes]:

I have caused estimate to be made of the extent of the field for investment of funds in revenue-earning channels on a self-liquidating basis, and in no way competitive with private enterprise.

Mr. NORRIS. Even though the Senator's amendment may have some other objects that might be very worthy, would not one of the effects of his amendment be that it would for all practical purposes prevent a municipality from obtaining any assistance when it wanted to put in a municipal electric-light plant?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. No, Mr. President. I do not think it would by any possibility have that effect. I have in mind private hearings—that is to say, hearings which were open to anybody who wanted to come in—which were held by Public Works Administrator Ickes when questions of this kind arose while he was administering public works. I am sure no one will intimate that, so far as the Public Works Administration under Secretary Ickes was concerned, there was any attempt on the part of the Administration to restrain municipalities from development.

Mr. NORRIS. Let me ask the Senator another question. Assume that municipality A is now supplied with electricity by a privately owned company; assume that it wants to take advantage of the proposed act and put in a municipally owned electric-light plant; if this amendment were agreed to, for practical purposes would not that be impossible?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I do not think so. I do not think there is any possibility of such an interpretation.

Mr. NORRIS. In other words, the determination of the citizens to put in a municipal light plant would not be the final determination as to whether or not it could be put in?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. It would be the final determination so far as they were concerned, with their own money.

Mr. NORRIS. Yes.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. However, under this amendment they could not come to the United States and borrow the money if they were unwilling to buy out the privately operated utility at a reasonable price, to be fixed by the Public Works Commissioner after a public hearing.

Mr. NORRIS. Yes; they would have to have a public hearing by the Public Works Commissioner. He would have to pass on those questions, whether or not the citizens had reached a determination to do it, before any assistance could be granted.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. The Public Works Commissioner would have to make a finding.

Mr. NORRIS. I do not want to take up the Senator's time. I am not questioning his motives in any way. However, in my own time I wish to show—and I think I can—that if this amendment is adopted, so far as municipal light plants are concerned they are out of the picture, and that for practical purposes it would be impossible for municipalities ever to go through the modus operandi provided in the amendment and obtain a municipal plant through any assistance which the municipality might seek under this particular provision.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. The Senator's amendment would not prevent a municipality from establishing a municipal hospital on the ground that it might compete with a private hospital?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I think not.

Mr. NORRIS. Why would it not?

Mr. BARKLEY. Nor would it prevent a university from building a dormitory for its students on the ground that it might compete with private boarding houses?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I think not.

Mr. NORRIS. Suppose there were a private hospital in the municipality and the municipality wanted to establish a municipal hospital; would it not be necessary to have a public hearing and a finding by the public works commissioner?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Not at all, because a hospital is not a competitive industry.

Mr. BARKLEY. I was about to suggest that it would come within the category of a noncompetitive industry.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Exactly.

Mr. BARKLEY. The amendment now before us is practically the same as the understanding we had when we passed a previous public-works program. The understanding was not put into the law, but, as the Senator may recall, I was authorized by the President to state, and I stated on the floor of the Senate, that none of the money would be used to establish a municipal light, water, or other utility plant where there was an existing plant, unless and until an offer was made in good faith to purchase the existing plant at a reasonable price. So far as I know, there has been no complaint with reference to the administration of that act or the keeping of that understanding. I have never had an instance brought to my attention of Mr. Ickes, as Administrator, undertaking to lend money to a municipality to establish a competitive utility system. I do not even know that he subsequently made any loans for that purpose. That arrangement or understanding was, of course, acceptable to him and to the President and was carried out in good faith, although it was not incorporated in the law itself.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. O'MAHONEY. I yield.

Mr. WAGNER. Let us assume a situation in which a ferry is providing transportation facilities for a community across a river; let us assume that the community itself decides that it would prefer to provide transportation for its citizens by a bridge, and to impose a toll for passage across the bridge sufficient to maintain it and liquidate the debt. I take it a ferry is a public utility. Its rates are regulated. Under the provisions of the Senator's amendment that community could not obtain a loan to construct the bridge unless first there were a hearing to determine whether or not the ferry was adequate to provide transportation across the river.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I do not think that interpretation is justified. Of course, the intention was to apply to enterprises of the same character. A bridge and a ferry both provide transportation, or means of transportation. However, they are not of the same character. I do not think the interpretation suggested by the Senator would be a reasonable one.

Let me say to the Senator that it is a tremendous mistake for him to raise small questions of detail. The preponderant question is whether the Government will stand behind free public enterprise, or whether there is an attempt to substitute Government for free enterprise of its citizens. The answer to that question must be made clear. If it is not made clear, the continued slide downward which has been manifest will continue.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, I did not know that I was inviting that sort of protest. My purpose in asking the question was to try to make it clear that an enterprise such as I have mentioned is not within the intent of the amendment offered by the Senator. I see a distinction. I think it would be a strained interpretation to say that a bridge offers the kind of competition with a ferry which would be included in the amendment. While I am quite happy to receive the admonition of the distinguished Senator, my purpose was entirely different from the view he has apparently taken of it.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. If I misinterpreted the Senator's attitude, I apologize.

Mr. WAGNER. I wish to make my attitude clear. I am sure the Senator does not intend that such a proposal as I have just mentioned should come within the intent of his amendment.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Such is not the intention; and I do not think it would be a proper interpretation.

Mr. WAGNER. The amendment should not be so interpreted?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. That is correct.

Mr. KING. Mr. President-

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I yield to the Senator from Utah.

Mr. KING. I take the opportunity to state in the Senator's time that he has just submitted a statement which I think will meet with the approval of all who believe in our form of government and with the disapproval of those who are determined to force state socialism upon our country.

I desire to make one further observation. I was wondering why the committee of which the distinguished Senator from New York is chairman did not invite Mr. Ickes, who is one of the ablest of the representatives of the Government in the executive department, to present his views respecting this bill. I have been advised, whether correctly or not I am not prepared to state, that he submitted to some organization or to the press a statement in which this bill was analyzed, and he pointed out many of its infirmities. I was wondering why this great committee, when dealing with the important question presented before it, did not have Mr. Ickes testify instead of Mr. Carmody, or others, for Mr. Ickes has had larger experience in conducting activities that come within the periphery of the influence of this bill than has any other man in the executive department, and he has exhibited a courage and an independence and honesty and efficiency that have not been paralleled, in my opinion, by the executive of any of the other departments of the Government. I wonder why the committee did not have him before it to testify instead of some of the other persons whose experience in dealing with these important questions is not comparable to that of Mr. Ickes?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, the question propounded by the Senator from Utah, I think, was propounded yesterday and answered by the Senator from New York, but, if the Senator from New York cares to make further reply now, I will be very happy to yield to him for that purpose.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, the question has heretofore been asked.

Mr. KING. I did not know that.

Mr. WAGNER. And I attempted to reply to it. In the first place, I want to concur entirely in what the Senator from Utah says about the administration of Secretary Ickes. There was a time when he was criticized in certain quarters for making loans to municipalities which enabled them to build electric generating plants, in order to supply electricity to communities as a public service rather than a private service. I am very glad that finally even the critics of that particular activity now accept that as a very sound policy to pursue.

I wish further to say that no one suggested the calling of Mr. Ickes. So far as I am concerned, I always value and treasure the advice of Mr. Ickes upon any of these matters; his advice would greatly influence my action; but Mr. Ickes has no part in the administration of any one of the activities provided for by the proposed pending legislation. We called before the committee those public officials who would have the administration of this proposed act in charge; we limited those called to witnesses of that character; but I am sure that, if anybody had suggested that Mr. Ickes might be able to give us valuable information, we would have at once invited him to appear. I do not know from what the Senator from Utah stated but that Mr. Ickes had made criticism of this particular act. I am not informed as to that, but I have never seen such a criticism on his part anywhere.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, after the Senator from Kentucky had indicated that this amendment was acceptable to him, I had hoped that the amendment might be adopted without protracted debate, and for myself I have no desire to occupy the floor of the Senate unnecessarily, but I am uncertain whether or not the Senator from Nebraska or some other Senators may desire to discuss it.

Mr. BARKLEY. I will say to the Senator that I am informed the Senator from Nebraska desires to address the Senate on the amendment.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Then I shall withhold further discussion of the amendment until later.

Mr. HILL. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I yield the floor.

Mr. NYE, Mr. AUSTIN, and Mr. HILL addressed the Chair.
The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from North Dakota [Mr. Nye] is on the list to be recognized at this time and the Chair recognizes him. Does he yield; and if so, to whom?

Mr. NYE. I yield first to the Senator from Vermont.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, for the information of the Senate, I wish to say that when this amendment shall have been perfected in its language I believe there will be a substitute offered for it.

Mr. HILL. Mr. President-

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from North Dakota yield to the Senator from Alabama?

Mr. NYE. I yield.

Mr. HILL. If I may, I should like to have the opinion of the Senator from Wyoming on the question raised a few moments ago as to who would make the findings. The Senator has, I believe, in his amendment now designated the Public Works Commissioner. I understood, however, from what the Senator from Wyoming said it was his idea that the head of the Federal Works Agency, which is the supreme Works Administration, should have the decision. If so, the official designated should be the Federal Works Administrator. That is the title of Mr. Carmody.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. That was the language which I originally incorporated in the amendment, but which I changed at the suggestion of the Senator from Kentucky. I am very happy to go back to the original language, if the Senator from Alabama so desires.

Mr. HILL. In that connection, I will say I consulted Document No. 262, of the House of Representatives, which contains the President's message embodying the reorganization plan, and, if it is the purpose of the amendment to put the head of the Federal Works Agency in the position of making these determinations, then it should designate the Federal Works Administrator, who is the head of the Federal Works Agency.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Having made the change at the suggestion of the Senator from Kentucky—

Mr. BARKLEY. I do not care what he is called, so that we get the right man.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I hesitate to change back again.

Mr. BARKLEY. I think we may straighten that out during the address of the Senator from North Dakota.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Very well.

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, will the Senator from North Dakota yield?

Mr. NYE. I yield to the Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, in line with the suggestion of the Senator from Vermont [Mr. Austin] that a substitute would be offered for the pending amendments submitted by the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. O'Mahoney], I should like to take a moment to read into the Record at this point the substitute. Then I shall confer with the Senator from Wyoming and ascertain from him whether or not an agreement can be evolved with reference to the exact language of the proposed substitute, which would be inserted in the general provisions clause of the pending bill on page 18, line 6, and which would read as follows:

No funds, whether loans or expenditures, shall be made available under this act to any Federal, State, or local public body, or to any person or corporation, for use by any such agency, person, or corporation to purchase, establish, construct, relocate, or expand any mill, factory, plant, or commercial enterprise which is or will be as a result of such loan or expenditure in competition with any existing industry or commercial enterprise, provided the limitation herein shall not apply to any such loan or expenditure for a public hospital.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, I want to make a comment on the proposed amendment which has just been read by the Senator from Connecticut. I am very fearful that the language which he has just read would be altogether too broad, because it would clearly prohibit all loans under the farm-security sections of this bill, because a farmer who obtained a grant on farm security would unquestionably be a person and he would unquestionably be in competition with every other farmer. I am sure the Senator does not want any such effect as that new, but I will be very glad to discuss the matter with the Senator during the address of the Senator from North Dakota.

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, if the Senator from North Dakota will yield a moment further, I should like to point out that the limitation applies against a plant or a commercial enterprise and certainly it is not generally considered that a farmer is either one.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Farmers erect plants on their farm, and certainly are engaged in a commercial enterprise when they sell their commodities.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, if the Senator from North Dakota will yield, I note that the Senator from Connecticut exempts hospitals in his amendment.

Mr. DANAHER. I do.

Mr. BARKLEY. That indicates the difficulty of drawing specific exemptions. Hospitals, I suppose, are included in his exemption, because in the committee when we were attempting to frame language and finally did adopt a section, it was so drawn that under the road program, which has been eliminated from the bill, a bridge could not be built if it competed with a ferry. Under the language of the Senator's proposed substitute I doubt very much whether a university could build a dormitory which might be held to be in competition with a hotel or a private boarding house, which are commercial enterprises. I think that the language of the Senator's substitute is so broad that it would be difficult to administer it without lawsuits and various legal efforts to prohibit the expenditure of money anywhere under this bill

The whole proposition ought to be limited to the public Works Administration and expenditures under it. It ought not to have any relationship to Rural Electrification, because there is already a provision which takes care of that. It certainly ought not to have any relation to Farm Security or Rural Rehabilitation. It can only be applicable, as a matter of fact, to expenditures by public bodies like the cities, counties, and States; and it seems to me the amendment offered by the Senator from Wyoming takes care of that. I should not want it to be broad enough to apply to R. E. A. or to Farm Security.

Mr. DANAHER. I thank the Senator.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Chaffee, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 5375) to promote nautical education, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 6746) to amend certain provisions of the Merchant Marine and Shipping Acts, to further the development of the American merchant marine, and for other purposes.

The message further announced that the House had passed a bill (H. R. 7171) to amend section 22 of the Agricultural Adjustment Act, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED

The message also announced that the Speaker had affixed his signature to the following enrolled bills, and they were signed by the Vice President:

H.R. 5375. An act to promote nautical education, and for other purposes;

H. R. 6746. An act to amend certain provisions of the Merchant Marine and Shipping Acts, to further the development of the American merchant marine, and for other purposes; and

H. R. 6984. An act to provide a feasible and comprehensive plan for the variable payment of construction charges on United States reclamation projects, to protect the investment of the United States in such projects, and for other purposes.

HOUSE BILL REFERRED

The bill (H. R. 7171) to amend section 22 of the Agricultural Adjustment Act was read twice by its title and referred to the Committee on Finance.

WHO SHALL MAKE WAR FOR AMERICA—THE PRESIDENT OR THE PEOPLE?

Mr. NYE. Mr. President, I am aware, of course, of the desire to expedite the passage of the pending bill; and yet, in the light of the fact that opportunity is becoming more and more limited, I think I owe no apology for the privilege I am taking today in support of the attitude and the determination which have resulted in abandonment of the effort of this winter and this spring to repeal the arms-embargo portion of the Neutrality Act.

In the light, though, of the desire to expedite matters, I am going to make a request unlike any I have ever hitherto made—a request to be privileged to make my remarks without interruption this afternoon, but with a definite understanding—indeed, a wish—that it be understood that when I shall have finished my remarks I shall gladly lend myself to answering any questions that may arise.

Perhaps there is substance in the contention that a situation might arise in Europe that would invite and warrant steps by the United States that would be helpful to one group of warring nations as against another group of nations at war. It does not follow, however, by any manner of means, that we should therefore so shape our American laws that we would be found automatically aiding one group of nations when they went to war. It seems to me that if experience has any message for us it is that the time and events inviting our participation in Europe's squabbles should be determined by Congress, never by the President and his Cabinet alone, and that repeal of laws intended to keep us from playing favorites in other people's wars, such as the arms embargo, should come only through decision by Congress after Congress has determined what are the facts, circumstances, issues, and causes involved and inviting us to participation in those wars.

That is a consideration which has played a considerable part in shelving the proposal of the Roosevelt administration to alter our neutrality law even to the extent of repealing that feature of it which forbids American exportation of arms, ammunition, or implements of war to nations at war. This repeal is asked as an aid to preventing war in Europe. It is called one of those "steps short of war" that will prevent war. History and experience tell us clearly that such a repeal at such a time as this would be a step to war. To repeal the arms embargo would be to encourage certain countries to go to war. This can be maintained as readily as interventionists can and do maintain that the repeal would discourage certain countries from going to war. To repeal the arms embargo and make our country the arsenal for certain countries in time of their wars may be a "step short of war," but it is likewise a definite step to war for our country.

I think no clearer defense is afforded of the issue that was presented in this challenge of repeal of the arms embargo than was that published some 10 days or 2 weeks ago by that eminent authority, John T. Flynn.

Under date of July 24 he wrote:

After all the shooting and the fireworks and the "fear for our national safety" in case the President's neutrality plans did not ass, a fact comes out which seems to put the whole subject in a pass, a lact collection of fairly clear light.

When the President found that he could not get the votes for when the President found that he could not get the votes for the feet of the collection of the collec his plan, a statement emanated from official quarters to the effect that, should any sort of European crisis develop or should war break out, Congress would be called in special session without delay.

And should Congress be called, what would it be asked to do? It would be asked to pass legislation or authorize acts respecting the attitude and policy of this country toward the belligerents.

Look at this again and what you see in this—that the legislation we now have prevents

Mr. President, I place emphasis upon the word "prevents"prevents the President or the State Department from putting this country on one side or the other of such a war.

If you are a very wise person you may be able to foresee just where war will break out and what about. But the chances are you cannot. The scene changes quickly. At one time it is Czechoslovakia that is threatened and destroyed. A little later it is Albania. Later still it is a question whether Germany and Poland will go to war over who shall control Danzig and Pomerze. Then suddenly the issue rises between Great Britain and Japan in Tientsin. And, almost before we know it, the threat appears in Mongolia between Japan and Puscie. between Japan and Russia.

What and where it will be tomorrow and what about we can only guess, and perhaps guess badly. And what we would do in case of any of these wars we can only surmise. If Poland and Germany of any of these wars we can only surmise. If Viality and Country fought over Danzig, where would our sympathies be and how far would we go to express and support them? What would we do in case Russia and Japan fought over Mongolia? Where would we stand if Germany and Russia fought over the Ukraine? Who can sav?

And who can say what the extraneous and unpredictable special issues will be so far as we are concerned in any case?

Now, all that being so, what possible objection can any American make to a situation in which the question of what our course will be is left to Congress? It is certain that if we renounce neutrality and throw our support to one side or the other we will almost certainly be drawn into the war. Where the issue is so grave and its consequences so appalling, should the decision be made by anybody less than the representatives of all the people—not the President alone, not the House alone, not the Senate alone, but the House, the Senate, and the President acting together in their legislative capacities? legislative capacities?

This is where we now stand. When war comes the Congress can be summoned. If it is a question of what we are to do, it ought to be summoned.

The President says his hands are tied. That is true; but they ought to be tied. No one man, however important or responsible, ought to be permitted to have the decision over the fate of 130,000,000 people. No man ought to want it. From every point of view the situation is now almost what it should be.

Mr. President, I declare a great fondness for so direct and splendid an exposition of the issue which was presented to the country by reason of this request involving repeal of the arms embargo.

The controversy over repeal of the arms embargo involves a principle that people generally have grasped with surprising sureness. The principle is one involving the question of restricting the powers of a President in fields that invite the danger of war for 130,000,000 Americans, the question whether Congress should have a voice with the Executive in shaping a foreign policy which might involve the interests and the very lives of our people and our national institutions.

RISKS PEACE FOR STOCK-MARKET BOOM

It is high time that the American people were given the opportunity to see through and beyond the pretenses and errors of what seems to be our current American policy in foreign affairs. They have a right to know why so large a part of Congress-perhaps a majority-believes that official short-sightedness is being disguised and paraded as international morality, and why participation in foreign quarrels is disguised as neutrality. They, the people, have every right to know why, to a great many minds, the peace of the United States is believed being risked on an unlikely gamble in Europe; and, incidentally, risked in possible part for the sake of some investment bankers' selfish hopes of a stock-market boom.

CONGRESS OPPOSITION NOT WILLFUL NOR PARTISAN

This statement of principle and views is presented in order that the people may have-some of them perhaps for the first time—an opportunity to know that the opposition of Congress to the President's policy of intervention in foreign entanglements is not willful or partisan, but is based on a thoroughly realistic conception of the forces at work in the world today.

It can fairly be asserted that the program of the American people is that of keeping out of other people's wars. It is also their purpose and program to keep this Nation democratic. To Congress these people look for their protection for both peace and democracy. Congress under challenge recently clearly indicates that it is aware of the obligation this trust imposes.

The people of America are not children to be easily quieted by the slogan that on these subjects of peace and democracy the Executive always knows best. They know that such a claim is not necessarily true in domestic affairs. They remember that it has not always been true in foreign affairs. The people are now adultly aware that a hundred crimes against democracy can be made in the name of saving the present world, in whole or in part, and another hundred crimes in the name of protecting the international status quo. Frankly, a lot of people are a bit suspicious that the State Department officials and others have learned nothing worth knowing since 1914.

Members of Congress who are interested in keeping America out of war and in preserving our democratic form and spirit, naturally want to make entirely clear to the people the reasons for the prevalent opposition to the proposals for turning the whole power over war and peace to the Executive. This statement is directed to that end.

TRAGEDY IN STEPS SHORT OF WAR

First of all, anyone who knows the American people, their love for and allegiance to principle, their aversion to international bluffing, their respect for the maintenance of integrity when the position of their country is involved—anyone who knows the American people knows that it is not remotely possible in the shaping of an American foreign policy to have their country first bluff and then run if and when their bluff is called. Is it reasonable to assume that we can, by so-called short-of-war steps, throw our weight to the advantage of one side in Europe and then avoid going directly to war if our steps fail to prevent war? Either we are in or out of Europe's hates and squabbles. If we would be out, then we ought to know that any steps showing favor in Europe, however "short or war" they may be, put us in.

But in these more recent months the President of the United States seems to be under the impression that he can by threats, strong language, and promises prevent the breaking out of war in Europe. That is not only a serious error of judgment, proven so by experience, but an error easily leading to a tragic gamble with American lives, property, and institutions. "Steps short of war" can so easily be steps straight into war, as they have been in the past. A war in Europe or Asia will not be averted by the mere promise of American munitions to the naval powers of that continent. Their wars have causes going much deeper. Once such a war comes, and comes for reasons quite completely divorced from American considerations, any President who has threatened or promised American help to certain nations involved in that war will never be able to back down with the mere assertion that they did not mean what they said. Instead he is committed to go steps further and give the utmost help to those whom he has encouraged. His first step "short of war" then becomes one forcing him to fullest effort to get American ships and soldiers into that war. It would be proven morally impossible for him, however well armed he may be in moral fervor, to refrain from making the attempt. And a Congress, never willing to let the country be in the light of unfaithful to promises made by its officials in foreign fields, would find itself without an alternative to a response in keeping with the President's effort, even though Congress had had no hand in that first step, the step that was "short of war."

Most emphatic must be disagreement with this major thought in the President's current policy, the thought that he or we can do "everything short of war" and also stay clear of a moral obligation to follow through after a war has broken out. I propose to further lend myself—and I know that others do—to the purpose of preventing the disastrous results which so largely promise and threaten to flow from such an error.

It would be only fair of the interventionists to acknowledge that there is utter lack of consistency on their part when in one breath they speak of doing "everything short of war" in foreign controversies and in the next breath vow a determination to stay out of war. Truth would require them to say, when speaking of acts intended to influence foreign events, such as the proposed act of aiding France and England as against Germany and Italy, "This is an act short of war, but it may and probably will lead to war."

ASSUMPTION-OUR GOING TO WAR INEVITABLE

In the second instance, there cannot be acceptance of those other assumptions that seem to underlie our present conduct of foreign policy. They seem to be very poorly thought out.

Specifically, I do not accept the idea that if war comes abroad we are bound to get in. To accept that idea is to overrate the propaganda powers at the disposal of even a President who might be morally committed to taking sides in such a war. That underrates the intelligence and experience of the people. It underrates, as well, the courage of elected Representatives and Senators in Congress. It underrates the determination of the American people to preserve their democratic forms of government and the peace of their country.

If we must agree that a war in Europe makes our entry inevitable, what is to be said of the ability of 55,000,000 Scandinavians, Hollanders, Spaniards, and Swiss to stay out of the last war and of their determination to stay out of the next war?

We can stay out of Europe's wars if we have the will to stay out and the wisdom to profit from experience. We can stay out of war if we will break the possibility of selfish profiteering by Americans from other people's wars, if we will curb Executive power to secretly move toward war. We can stay out of Europe's wars if we will refrain from those things that might encourage Europe to go to war.

The truth is that America has permitted itself to be made more excited about the possibility of war in Europe than Europeans have been excited. American officials have, through the medium of secret conferences and borrowed worries, managed to scare the country in a way wholly out of proportion with what the European situation warranted. All this winter the American direction has been war. There have been prophecies of war and more war. Each week some American official seemed to be possessed of information assuring that such-and-such a day would bring the war.

War has not come. The prophets have not been honored as such by the visitation of a catastrophe upon the world through Europe. The information of our scare-mongers has obviously been bad—very, very bad. Yet we can expect further prophecies along the same line.

Europe, obviously, is going to work out her own problems in her own way and this without war if only we will let her alone. If, leaving her alone, war nevertheless comes to Europe, it will be plenty of time for America to determine whether the war is in any way, shape, or manner our affair and determine what, if anything, we are to do about it.

The administration here in Washington has seemed to labor all this past year under inside information that was used as authority to substantiate their fears and their demands for more authority and power. Would it not be better for the health of America if the executive departments would share their information with Congress and the people? Such a course might serve the very healthy purpose of destroying the feeling that our involvement in war was inevitable.

ASSUMPTION-PROSPERITY THROUGH ARMAMENT

With aversion we must look on the seeming attempt to tie our own economic fate to an active participation in European affairs. Newspaper reports of July 22, 1939, from Hyde Park, said: Discussing the economic phase of the situation, the President quoted an unidentified investment banker to the effect that refusal in the Senate to revise neutrality legislation "will slow up the finest little economic boom we have had in some time."

This particular quotation is from the New York Times.

This is a painfully frank and open repetition of the successful attempts made in 1915 to scare the Nation into reversing its foreign policy to the extent of permitting loans to belligerents. We were told then, exactly as we are told now, that we could not have prosperity unless we did what the naval powers then at war wanted us to do, namely, reverse our foreign policy in their favor. The fact that the day of that bold Hyde Park statement marked a rapid rise on the stock exchange does not destroy the attempt to scare the Nation into believing that its financial and economic future is contingent upon the adopting of a foreign policy of active participation in the scraps, hates, and fears of Europe. This is regrettable and, to say the least, unworthy. We have been prosperous heretofore without yielding our independence from Europe, and we can and will be so again. It must never be our American wish to copy the Hitler program of prosperity through armament production and sale.

ASSUMPTION: ENGLAND, FRANCE HELPLESS WITHOUT US

Mr. President, speaking again of the erroneous assumptions seeming to underlie our present course in foreign policy, I do not for a moment believe the propaganda of these foreign and domestic missionaries among us who preach that a defeat of England and France is inevitable unless our foreign policy in changed and shaped to favor them. What reason is there for believing that a combination of the great naval powers plus Russia and the non-German states of eastern Europe cannot successfully withstand attack from the Central European Powers? Or is it possible that Russia, close to the danger of Fascist states, is not to take a hand, and that therefore we Americans must take Russia's place in the balance? I see no good purpose, and we have no wish to carry the military burden which would otherwise fall to Russia in the event that nation is as anti-Fascist as its friends here proclaim it to be. What good reason can there be for substituting American soldiers for Russian soldiers on the European front?

SURRENDER OUR INDEPENDENCE TO EUROPE

Third, I do not accept the notion apparently prevalent in the current foreign policy of the administration that a war involving France and England will necessarily have purposes either noble enough or important enough to America to be worthy of our automatic help to them. We only need remember and point to 1919, the secret treaties, the Treaty of Versailles, to Manchuria, Ethiopia, Austria, and Czechoslovakia to prove the justice of our disbelief in similarity of purpose. Again, we can well remember the entertainment by another President of a similar belief to the effect that British and French aims were the same as ours, his stated belief that after the Allies owed us billions they would be willing to take our advice and make a just and democratic peace. Is it not high time we acknowledged that these notions were and are tragic errors of judgment concerning the character of England and France? It would be pleasant, of course, to forget these errors of the past if only there were no present danger that another Executive had forgotten them.

MORE THAN AN ERROR OF JUDGMENT

Mr. President, it is important to note well in this connection that more than an error of judgment was involved in our last rally to English and French interests. Participation in war in Europe necessarily means that we become part of a giant machine. But in this machine the attributes of our sovereignty disappear. This will of our state is bent to the will of others, to their needs and purposes. We are necessarily tied to the self-interests of other nations. Our disinterestedness is lost in their errors, their fears, their defeats. American wealth and blood are put at the disposal of some Chamberlain whose sagacity and sense of democracy is at least subject to questioning by an overwhelming number of Americans. That is the essential truth about this assumption that English and French interests are at once American interests. To pursue that assumption today is only to invite tragic repetition which found us once throwing control over the Nation's welfare to big business as was done during the N. R. A. days out of the noblest of motives.

Plainly, the repeal of the arms embargo would be giving England and France a great deal of help without our winning repayment of anything in kind from them. That is more naive trusting than the situation warrants. We know of no plans communicated to our Government by them of a just and workable political and economic system for Europe to be proposed now or at any time before a war or to be imposed by the victors after a war. We have yet to be informed that English interests in such nations as the Argentine have become more friendly to our own than they are to German interests. Surely we are not to forget the indifference of the present British and French Governments to the fate of two democracies which existed before 1938 in Europe. Surely we are not to blind ourselves to the fact that France is already giving up many of her democratic forms, that England is expected to follow suit, even in peacetime.

GIVE EVERYTHING AND WIN NOTHING

Mr. President, for the United States to give, automatically when they go to war, help to the great European powers, or to any nation, without any clear understanding as to their purposes in wartime and in peacetime is, to say the least, more naively trusting than the real and practical situation existing in the world today warrants. By way of future evidence it is only necessary to point to the fact that every other nation, great and small, in Europe which has been involved in British negotiations of late, since September 1938, has demanded from the British a clear and definite guaranty of her aims and objectives.

RUSSIA SHOWS GREAT CAUTION

For example, Russia, far closer to the danger zone than we, is very cautiously and deliberately driving a bargain for every bit of help she is asked to give England. That we alone, of all the nations of the world, are told to give help without any clear commitment as to the interests of the present governments of the great European powers in democracy as such is too much indication that we are being governed by the power of slogans and of blindness to our own best interests, just as we were in 1917. We are, in fact, the only nation in the world that is assuming, without question, the interest of the Chamberlain government in democracy. Not even her own dominions are so free from doubt on this vital question as our State Department would seem to be.

INTERVENTION POLICY BOTH STUPID AND CRIMINAL

We have no assurance, no guaranty, today that after we have given our full help—even after we have gone to war in their behalf—the present governments of England and France would refrain from indulgence in a peace treaty that would impose the shackles of slavery on millions of Europeans if only their own overseas possessions were saved to them.

Mr. President, it is neither cowardly, selfish, nor immoral for the United States to look to American interests and security. Our automatic participation on the side of England and France, which would be the net result of the present administration's effort and policy, does not even give us the pleasure of fighting for things we believe worth fighting for. It would simply make it possible for us to force or influence a just, reasonable, and democratic peace upon our friends and possible enemies. It puts the character of the peace, just as in 1917, into the hands of the rabid war patriots of those nations. This is not only stupid policy, but criminal as well.

TRAFFIC IN ARMS SURE ROAD TO WAR

Fourth, I do not accept, and I think very few Members of Congress do, what seems to be another false supposition of the present foreign policy of the United States, that one to the effect that our country can do nothing important or worthy for the cause of peace except as we stand ready to risk war and participate in war on one definite side.

Once we send arms abroad we have, in the minds of the people against whom these arms are used, definitely taken part in the fighting. We can then no longer approach the people who have been bombed by American-made airplanes, gassed by American-made gas, and shot by American-made shells as friends of peace. To them, instead, we shall always be mere merchants of death, profiteers in human misery, seekers after "little economic booms" to be had through other peoples' wars. If our country is to count in a material way for the cause of peace we must stay clear of a traffic which, symbolically, is so important that indulgence in its profits will end our effectiveness as a peacemaker in wartime.

DESTROY OUR INFLUENCE FOR PEACE

It is amply demonstrated by experience that once this arms traffic is started, not only will the great naval powers refuse to listen to our proposals for peace, as England refused in 1916, because they know that our economic destiny is linked by war traffic to their own destiny, but their possible enemies will regard us with excusable distrust.

RESTRICTION ON WAR SALES ESSENTIAL

We must realize, of course, that the munitions traffic is only part of the war traffic in general, although it may run into billions of dollars. It does not follow that we must accept the prevalent idea that because the administration has so far successfully allowed full sales of war materials to some belligerents, we must, to be consistent, also allow full sales of munitions. On the contrary, as will be stated later, there is strong belief that, for the sake of our own peace, some restriction on the unlimited sales of war materials is essential, as was acknowledged and advocated by the present administration in 1936.

INTERVENTION FOR EUROPEAN DEMOCRACY MEANS LOSS OF AMERICAN DEMOCRACY

Finally, Mr. President, there cannot be unchallenged acceptance of that unspoken assumption of the present interventionist foreign policy that our country can risk a war and not stand in practically permanent danger of losing its own democratic powers. That danger is never spoken of by the interventionists. It is given the silent cure. It is ignored. But we ought to think deeply on the fact that there are more dictatorships today in the world than there are real democracies. History reveals that the most violent foe of democracy is war. We must note that England today is guaranteeing the life of nations which are little more democratic than are its alleged enemies—Germany, Italy, and Japan.

For us to fight for the independence of Poland, Russia, Greece, or Turkey is certainly not to fight for democracy. Nor is the squabble between Italy and the great naval powers about colonies in Africa a fight over democracy. The chances are that in order to maintain several tyrannies against similar tyrannies in Europe we shall be expected to yield our own democracy. It does not seem worthy of our common sense, nor of our high purpose of maintaining democracy at home.

A sizable number in Congress have made it clear that they do not propose to subject democracy in this Nation, already strained to a thin edge of endurance by unemployment and unhealthy conditions in general, to the colossal debt of another war, to the regimentation accompanying any major war, to the loss of its young men, to the accomplishment of a deadly peace, to the nationalistic and racial hatreds and intolerance which follow war in modern times. We believe in democracy, including the right of the people to have some say in what they are to die for, either directly or through Congress. I quote without mentioning the one whose language I quote:

There comes a time in the affairs of men when they must prepare to defend not their homes alone but the tenets of faith and humanity on which their churches, their government, and their very civilization is founded.

That time is before we have been taken into other peoples' wars by slogans, misconceptions, nebulous unrealities, and belligerent good will.

SAVE WHAT WE COUNT PRECIOUS

With vigor I challenge the assumption that our America, which has not solved its problems, can by war contribute any effective solution of the problems of blood-encrusted hatreds of Europe. When we shall have found democratic ways of raising our own national income to a reasonable figure we shall have much to offer to the world by way of example. At the moment our fight for democracy is here, and will be here until our Nation is functioning to its full capacities. It will profit us little to win a war abroad and lose all that is precious here at home. There is hardly room for a consideration that would have us establishing, so to speak, a W. P. A. project in Europe, the purpose of the project being to afford employment for millions of Americans in the task of stopping the drifting of European borders, borders which have drifted since the beginning of time and which will continue to drift in spite of us or anything we may do.

CONGRESS SHALL DETERMINE OUR HELP IN EUROPE

On these foregoing definite statements of ground it is with enthusiasm that the wisdom of the present interventionist foreign policy of the Roosevelt administration is challenged. We insist and are determined that it shall be Congress, and not any single individual who happens in this year or that to be President, who shall determine when and how we shall participate in foreign quarrels which become our quarrels only as we inject ourselves into the quarrels of others.

HOW TO FORTIFY OUR PEACE

Mr. President, there are definite ways in which this insistence and determination may be fortified and made effective.

First. By refusing to permit repeal of the arms embargo we should require in addition that the President, in the event of war abroad, summon Congress into session before he has allowed a single American ship or traveler to venture into the danger zone. The present position of Congress, without the neutrality law changes demanded by the President, and with the cash-and-carry section back in the law, would require that after war breaks out abroad no major decision involving the risk of American crews or ships, of property or citizens on the high seas, shall be made without the consent of Congress.

Second. To replace the bureaucratic control of our foreign affairs by a more democratic control it will be proposed, when next Congress considers the whole subject, that there be established a permanent joint committee of the House and Senate, with which the executive departments shall consult—in confidence, of course, when necessary—on all major decisions of foreign policy before final steps to decision are taken.

Third. It will be further proposed that the President be required to present to Congress such proposals as shall be made to the peoples of the world, and particularly to the peoples of Latin America, looking toward peace, prosperity, and the furtherance of democracy. We do not believe that loans for the benefit of heavy industries necessarily by themselves promote either the prosperity or the democracy of Latin American people. If fascism is effectively to be thwarted in Latin America, in Europe, or anywhere, the causes for its growth rather than its effects, deserve primary attention.

GREATER COORDINATION IN SHAPING FOREIGN POLICY

Mr. President, a far greater coordination between the Executive and the Congress is needed in foreign policy. This is to be achieved by including Congress in policy matters rather than by giving all powers and responsibility to the President. It is an historical fact that nothing so turned the peoples of the present dictatorships in Europe away from democracy as did the procedures involved in the declaration of war and the establishment of peace at the time of the writing of the Treaty of Versailles.

STATE DEPARTMENT GUESSES HURT AMERICAN PRESTIGE

Currently it does not make for an effective foreign policy for America for the spokesmen of the State Department to believe and assert that they have a majority of 100 votes for a certain policy, in this instance repeal of the arms embargo, in the House of Representatives, and then be found wrong to the extent of 141 votes. The State Department demonstrated itself clearly to be as completely removed from public feeling, public wishes, congressional feeling, and congressional wishes as any institution could possibly be. Nor does it make for an effective foreign policy to have these same spokesmen so misunderstood and so misstate and misrepresent the meaning of the vote of the House—on the Voorhis amendment—as support for certain dictatorship, when, in fact, the amendment allowed arms of all sorts to go freely to the great naval powers of Europe through such neutral nations as Mexico and perhaps Canada.

CONGRESSIONAL PARTICIPATION IN FOREIGN POLICY ESSENTIAL

The founders of our constitutional government put the power to make war as far away from the Executive as could be done. They did not reserve this power alone to the Senate, which was then elected by the State legislatures, but reserved the power to Congress, including the Senate and the popularly elected House. But we have to acknowledge now that the essential war-making powers are exercised by the Executive before Congress is ever asked to declare war. If the spirit of the founding fathers is to be honored, it is obviously our duty today to secure for Congress a maximum of participation in matters of life and death originally intended for it. In these days when war means more certain curtailment of democratic institutions than in earlier years this participation by Congress has become more essential than ever before. If Congress does not assert that power, the people will certainly take it for themselves to the extent they can, through a referendum privilege. Incidentally, it is hardly consistent for the executive departments to oppose a popular war referendum on the ground that we have a representative form of government and then object to giving to Congress a full partnership in the essential decision involving war and peace.

Greater congressional participation in shaping foreign policy is necessary under any Executive. A jingo, determined to plunge us into long years of war in the Orient, if he were ever elected President, would need the active restraint of Congress as much as does an Executive personally and morally committed to one side in the European alinement.

NO SUPPORT FOR 1914 EXECUTIVE WISDOM

As a simple matter of history it is recalled that during the period 1914 to 1917 the Executive made certain claims to wisdom which have since been disavowed by both the present administration and by the Congress.

First, was the claim that American passengers should be allowed to travel on belligerent naval vessels in the form of armed merchantmen, regardless of how much they thereby jeopardized the peace of the Nation. This has been disavowed in every neutrality law since 1935 and in every administration proposal on the neutrality subject. Not only does the law forbid American passengers to travel on belligerent vessels in war zones, but the law further puts upon the President the responsibility and duty to decide whether armed merchantmen should not, in effect, be treated as the naval vessels of belligerent powers are treated.

Second, the claim that we could safely loan money to nations at war, as we did beginning in 1915, has been equally emphatically disavowed by Congress and the present administration. Every neutrality law since 1935 has forbidden such loans.

PEOPLE MISINFORMED ON FOREIGN POLICY

Naturally, there is as a consequence inclination to disbelieve that any Executive, present or future, is omnipotent on matters of American foreign policy or that wisdom will die with him.

The American people should be reminded, if they are not already amply reminded, that, without the active and constant participation of Congress in our foreign policy, they are not only likely to be uninformed concerning matters vital to them but that they, and Congress too, may again be misinformed, as they have been misinformed in the past, with tragic consequences.

In evidence of this there can be cited the admission by Secretary of State Lansing, in his letter of September 6, 1915, that the chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee had been consciously misinformed—mind you, consciously misinformed—by the Department of State concerning our first change in policy, the change which permitted foreign loans to be floated in America.

Further evidence will be found in the fact, then unknown to the American people and unknown to Congress, that this same Secretary of State, as early as 1915, while he was enjoying the confidence of the people as one who was trying to keep our country out of war, desired our active military participation in Europe's war, and that he admitted later that he had failed to press our just claims against the naval powers—England and France. He said then, speaking of the protest notes dispatched to England:

Everything was submerged in verbosity. It was done with deliberate purpose. It insured continuation of the controversies and left the questions unsettled—which was necessary in order to leave this country free to act, and even to act illegally, when it entered the war.

Mr. Lansing says-

OFFICIALS ADMIT BLUNDERS

Still further evidence is to be found in the fact that our State Department officials had realized that they had made a mistake in not warning American citizens off belligerent naval vessels and that their mistake had resulted in many American drownings. Nevertheless, the then administration, in spite of that realization, opposed congressional resolutions which would have prevented more such drownings. The American people, no more than Congress, knew that the Solicitor for the State Department was proposing to set aside "an adequate number of ships upon which our people may take passage and travel unmolested in European waters, those ships not to carry mixed cargoes of babies and bullets." Nor did they know that other high diplomatic officials agreed with the position that the State Department had made a tragic mistake in its decision. On the contrary, when Germany proposed this same plan, we Americans were all led by our officials to believe it was arrogant and hostile.

I cite further the fact that the administration of that time realized that it had made a great mistake in the submarine controversy, the mistake of extending American protection to belligerent naval vessels—armed merchantmen—and that it tried to undo this mistake, but that England refused to allow it to do so, and that the administration kept its plans to end the submarine controversy from Congress and from the people.

On January 18, 1916, our Government secretly proposed to England and France a solution of the submarine controversy. In effect this proposal was that all belligerent merchant vessels should cease mounting guns. This would have removed the excuse of the German submarines that they had to attack without warning, because if they ever exercised the alternative and stopped a ship by rising to the surface they would be bombarded by the armed vessels. Our Ambassador to England, Mr. Page, cabled that if our Government put this plan into effect the British would take their munitions orders away from us.

If we should insist upon our rights—in other words, if we should protect American peace and security—the British would take their munitions orders away from us. To the very end the American people were given to understand and believe that there was only one side to the submarine question in spite of the admission in private of our high officials that they had been wrong.

ENGLAND PREVENTS PEACE CONFERENCE

Again, and in furtherance of this same purpose, let another fact be stated—another fact unknown at the time to the Congress or the people—the fact that in February of 1916 the Wilson administration had in effect committed itself, in the House-Grey agreement, to enter the war on the side of England after calling a peace conference, which it was rather expected Germany might refuse to attend; nor were they informed that, in spite of constant pleading from the President, the British refused to allow him to call such a conference to obtain an early end to the war.

In view of such a record as is here cited, it can better be understood why so many of us in Congress entertain the conclusion that no administration, by any party or character, should ever again be left in a position to act so independently of Congress as that administration acted then; nor should any Congress, sworn to protect the institutions of democracy, ever allow the fate of the Nation to be determined alone by the Executive. The suggested permanent joint committee of Congress to function with the executive departments in shaping foreign policy and decisions is urgently necessary as the danger of war in Europe increases.

DENY GIVING AID TO DICTATORS

Upon such of us as insist that Congress, and not the Executive alone, should determine our foreign policy there is directed a common slander to the effect that, consciously or unconsciously, we are giving aid to the European dictators. Of course, that is not the intent of our position, nor is it the effect of our position. The indignation of the American people over the antics in Germany, Italy's conquest of Ethiopia, the German-British dismemberment of Czechoslovakia, Japan's conquest of China, is shared by Congress to the fullest degree. Congress knows full well that American public opinion has no room, no tolerance, for intolerance, for barbarism, for cruelty, for merciless conquest, for the subjugation of alien nationalities. Indeed, many Members of Congress have tried, without any help whatever from the present administration, to block and check the development of these traits in specific cases. We still think that the sum total of our yielding to British foreign-policy wishes in the cases where we have yielded is the destruction of democracy and enlarged power for the dictatorships, their armies, and their navies.

Incidentally, if the refusal of the Congress to respond to the Roosevelt request for changes in our rules against involvement in European squabbles has had any such effect as encouraging the dictatorships, who is to blame for it? Who set up this straw man to begin with, if it was not the executive department? Who dragged this neutrality issue; who dragged this arms-embargo issue out here for public debate and for congressional action? The executive department did it, not the Congress; no individual within Congress. Who invited decision on this, to us, vital matter, if it was not the Executive? The subject never ought to have been opened at the time it was opened. It is but one more example of blundering without letting Congress and the people into the confidence of those who feel that they alone are capable of shaping our foreign policy.

NOT OUR AMERICAN JOB TO EQUALIZE MILITARY BALANCE IN EUROPE

It is emphatically not the business of our country to undertake to equalize the military differences between the various alliances of nations in the world. That would be impossible to begin with. Neutrality does not mean the interference that would be involved in such attempts at equalization. It means, instead, taking no steps during wartime to favor one nation over another, at least until we know what are the causes involved.

ENGLAND AND FRANCE ALREADY FAVORED

However, to clear up the misunderstanding occasioned by the frequent insinuation that our present neutrality laws favor the Fascist nations, let it be asserted emphatically and clearly that the present laws give the naval powers—England and France—almost every kind of American aid they could possibly or reasonably desire. Under these laws, and because of their naval predominance, England and France can—

First. Secure all the raw materials—oil, copper, steel, cotton, and so forth—they need. We should be constantly on guard against the various attempts made to scare us into believing that our foreign trade will be lost because of the present laws. These are attempts at scare mongering and false propaganda.

Second. They can have the United States Treasury, under the present tripartitic-monetary agreement, support their currencies at a terrific cost to American taxpayers. During the last war this cost us about $300,000,000 a month in late 1916.

Third. England and France under existing law can burden the investors of America by dumping foreign-held securities in the American market, thereby lowering the values held by American security holders.

Fourth. England and France under existing law can secure the services of American ships and crews in danger zones, with resulting sinkings which surely will lead American public opinion to favor war against their enemies.

So we see how England and France, by accident of their naval strength and position, already enjoy advantages of tremendous importance under our neutrality law. It is true that they cannot under our law at the present time obtain arms, ammunition, and implements of war from us when they go to war; but they have had 4 years' notice of this—4 years in which to prepare themselves to meet the emergency of war without our help to this extent. If they have not so prepared, it must be because they have not wanted to do so; not because they could not afford to do so; not because they were not given ample notice of our American desire to get out of the business of helping a world at war to destroy itself.

We understand full well that the raw materials to which I have referred, and which are available to England and France, are a tremendous help to them in time of war. There certainly is no call upon us to repeal the arms embargo just to demonstrate that our sympathies are with them as against the dictator nations. Nor is there any justification for expressions of astonishment by England or France, their friends or their missionaries in this land, because we have not opened our doors for unrestricted munitions sales to them alone in time of war. Indeed, our law now goes to the aid of France and England away beyond what experience dictates to be right and fair and in the interest of our own American security. Wide open to doubt is the wisdom of permitting such help from us as is now available to these powers. Certainly these advantages can only jeopardize our own peace. On the basis of the entanglement of our trade, commerce, and investment with their military success or failure from 1914 to 1917, it is, to say the least, very doubtful to many that we should in cold blood chance repetition of that experience.

STRENGTHEN NEUTRALITY LAW

For that reason let there be assurance here and now that when the neutrality law is again submitted for change there will be renewal of the effort to restore section 2, the cash-and-carry section, which expired on May 1, 1939, and which the administration has made no effort to renew. There will also be effort then to limit to a normal quota shipments of materials to nations at war, to make ineffective in the event of war the tripartite monetary agreement, to restrict the dumping of foreign-owned securities in the American market, and to place all trade with belligerents on a strictly carry-at-your-own-risk basis.

Incidentally the proposal to limit trade in other than munitions with nations at war to a normal basis was opposed by the administration in Congress and voted down, with the one result that Japan has secured from us the bulk of her war materials for her conquest of China. A normal-quota law would have prevented all but a small part of Japan's war purchases here.

GAMBLE ON FOREIGN WARS

The American people should be aware of the fact that the excess between normal foreign trade and war-boom trade is dangerous to the peace of their country. Once we have gambled our nation's economic prosperity on one set of nations at war, we are quite apt to find our foreign policy favoring those particular nations. It was sheer cold fear of sudden loss of trade, fear of depression, which led our governmental officials to allow the floating of the war loans for the naval powers in 1915. In that instance the Secretary of State informed the President that unless we changed our neutrality laws there would be "industrial depression, idle capital and idle labor, financial demoralization, and general unrest." Ambassador Page later cabled the President:

Perhaps our going to war is the only way in which our present preeminent trade position can be maintained and a panic averted.

The only way to avoid a panic was to declare war, according to these men to whose hands our neutrality and our destiny were entrusted.

Ambassador Page went on in the same cablegram to the President and said:

LXXXIV-657

I think the pressure of this approaching crisis has gone beyond the ability of the Morgan financial agency for the British and French Governments.

Remember, Mr. President, the people, the Congress, had no knowledge of these communications, of this kind of consideration. This was all behind the scenes at that time. Ambassador Page is saying to the President:

I think the pressure of this approaching crisis has gone beyond the ability of the Morgan financial agency for the British and the French Governments.

Would it have been any more emphatic if Ambassador Page had said to the President: "The Morgans are at the end of their rope. The American bankers alone can carry this burden no further. It is now necessary, if America is to maintain her prosperity, for America to declare war against Germany"? Not a thought was uttered concerning the cause of democracy or a desire to end war. We were urged to avoid the kind of a panic that would come if we lost the war-boom business that we had come to relish to a point where our officials could not think of giving it up.

PUT OUR DESTINY IN ENGLAND'S HANDS

It was the threat of England's refusal in 1916 to continue buying from us which caused us to refrain from pressing England to accept our proposal to end the submarine armed merchantmen controversy. Her statesmen acknowledged that they preferred to have that controversy continue rather than end because of its effect in drawing us into war. Colonel House wrote:

[Lord] Grey was very fine about it. He said, of course, it would be to the advantage of Great Britain for the United States to enter the war, and if he agreed to do what we requested it would mean that the United States would remain neutral.

It was England's knowledge that our foreign policy had been changed to her advantage and that it would ultimately bring us into the war if ever Germany renewed her submarine sinkings which influenced the English decision to decline President Wilson's peace offer of 1916.

MORGAN COMPANY TELLS BRITISH HOW TO GET AROUND OUR REGULATIONS

All of this goes to show that not only did our American Government know that England was using our war trade to force changes in our foreign policy, changes to her advantage, but the bankers were aware of this power in Britain's hands and the power of war trade over American policy. It was a power we had given to England, not the Congress, but a President and a Cabinet who were operating, but not in the open, where the people and the Congress could see the steps that were being chosen. In November of 1916 the Federal Reserve Board warned American investors against taking unsecured foreign paper obligations. The firm of J. P. Morgan & Co., bankers for the British and French, immediately urged England to use the pressure on us of cutting off war orders to secure a change in that Federal Reserve Board warning and policy. In cabling their British associates, the Morgans said:

We can see no way, except for your authorities to consider ways and means for immediate curtailment of purchases, letting such action be announced without rancor, but emphatically with possible good effect upon American foreign policy.

The Morgans are saying to their associates, "Have the British authorities somehow make it known to America that if these regulations stand they are going to cease buying American goods." The Morgans say, "That will probably bring America to her senses respecting her foreign policy." Surely, in the light of experience, in the light of facts which have been so clearly recorded it should be a first American purpose to destroy such powers as selfish and misled individuals and interests enjoyed at that time, and surely we are not wanting to repeat the tragedy of those days of little more than 20 years ago.

CALL IT LAW TO KEEP OUT OF WAR, NOT NEUTRALITY

Interventionists are always eager to demonstrate that our so-called neutrality law is not neutrality at all, that it favors one nation as against another or others, that at the present time the law favors Germany and Italy. I have already proven the falsity of this allegation. But let it be admitted that no law in this field is possible that will not hurt one side perhaps more than another in time of war. But remember that the law is written before war comes. And let it be remembered that even more than the establishment of neutrality the purpose behind the neutrality laws was and is that of helping the United States to stay out of other people's wars.

"MUNITIONS MAKERS TOOK US TO WAR"

One does not speak of the influence of war trade upon our American thinking while other nations are at war without being reminded that there has been constant effort by interventionists to cast some of us, and particularly the Senate Munitions Committee, as having entertained and of entertaining the belief that it was the munitions makers who took the United States to war in 1917.

No member of the Munitions Committee to my knowledge has ever contended that it was munitions makers who took us to war. But that committee and its members have said again and again, that it was war trade and the war boom, shared in by many more than munitions makers, that played the primary part in moving the United States into a war that became an affair of ours only as we were interfered with and molested in our pursuit of the profit we found available from other people's wars.

Mr. BONE. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Downey in the chair). Does the Senator from North Dakota yield to the Senator from Washington?

Mr. NYE. I yield.

Mr. BONE. I think one of the most popular illusions, which has been deliberately promoted by certain publicists in this country and certain politicians, who have in their hearts what to me is almost a vulgar desire to sanctify profits out of war trade is that the members of the Munitions Committee of the Senate undertook to charge our entry into the World War exclusively to the actions of our munitions makers. There never was any assertion of that kind made; on the contrary, the emphasis was always laid upon the inescapable fact that it was the highly profitable general war trade that sucked us into the war. Our munitions makers were but a part of the program that finally and hopelessly involved us. To be sure, munitions makers were vulgar in their greed. They were making vast fortunes out of the war trade, but other people were also making money out of it, too. All the breast beating today about our rights abroad predicated on the intolerable assumption that we should send our boys to fight on alien soil in order that a few fellows could make a profit out of operations far from America. We overlook the fact that we are jeopardizing the very life of the Republic in assuming that the exercise of these so-called rights on the part of a few of our nationals to make money in such extraterritorial activities justifies a war. I am glad the Senator from North Dakota has again expressed the view that the members of the Munitions Committee of the United States Senate never did assert, at any point I can recall, that munitions makers alone dragged us into the World War.

Mr. NYE. I appreciate greatly the Senator's contribution. Mr. BONE. If we go into another war, in my judgment, it will be because we will have allowed our own people to make so much more money out of war trade, which we will try to defend by force of arms, that such defense will lead to war. Our problem is not in dealing with foreign nations but in muzzling the greed of our own nationals.

Mr. NYE. The eminent service by the Senator from Washington as a member of the Munitions Committee, to which he has referred, was a service of such intimate acquaintance with the whole problem as to qualify him more than amply to make the declaration concerning the purposes and the ideas of the committee and the conclusions it reached. I am delighted that he has made this statement on the subject.

Mr. BONE. We are hearing much discussion about the rights of our nationals in the Orient. As a matter of fact, our whole trade with China represents about one-seventh or one-eighth of the annual chewing-gum bill.

Mr. NYE. Exactly.

Mr. BONE. Our nationals operating in China trade do not pay one penny of income tax to support this country, although they are in a position now where they may demand at any time that we send our fleet to defend them over there. If we go so far as to make a warlike gesture of that kind we might involve this Republic in a war which in all probability would cost $50,000,000,000. To add that intolerable burden to our present national debt would in itself threaten the very life and perpetuity of the Republic. To support a few traders over there we might invite ruin at home. I do not believe that the American people want to pay that kind of a crazy, tragic price to enable a few hucksters to do business in the Orient. We display little reverence for the Republic in promoting such ideas.

Mr. President, it seems to me that our clear duty in Congress is to make America safe for Americans in America and not to support by armed force and war a few businessmen in the Orient who have gone over there at their own risk. If they are there at the risk of the lives of helpless American boys, we should know it right now.

Mr. NYE. Mr. President, I can only suggest, in view of what the Senator from Washington has just said, that I believe he is not very much in sympathy with the views expressed a few days ago that the failure of Congress to repeal the arms embargo had denied to America or destroyed for America the chance for a neat little economic boom.

Mr. BONE. Mr. President, I do not want to interrupt the Senator's remarks again, and perhaps I should not have interrupted him to the extent I have, but I think millions of Americans will agree with me that it takes a degree of gall bordering on impudence for men who have gone to the Orient, as I stated at their own risk, and engaged in business there to demand that America send her sons over there to die so these hucksters may continue to do business there.

They talk about treaty rights. Mr. President, if anyone were to take the trouble to read the history of China he would find that the treaties with China made after the Taiping rebellion, were made with a gun pointed right at China's heart by the great western powers we call "democracies." Poor old China was prostrate and helpless.

I am sure the Senator from Idaho [Mr. Borah] will agree with me that when these so-called treaties were entered into, which had to do with the so-called "rights" of foreign nations in China, poor old China was crushed and helpless, and, while she was in that terrible condition, treaties were forced upon her which gave these European nations whatever rights they have since used as a basis for subsequent trade rights.

These so-called "rights" were extracted from China at the muzzle of guns held by so-called Christian nations.

Mr. President, it is on that sort of rotten, immoral foundation of brute force that the rights of these so-called modern nations in China rest. The thing smells to high heaven. We may be called on to send our boys over there to be butchered simply for the purpose of supporting such rights. As one Senator in this body, I am not willing to send our boys to China to protect hucksters. We have desperate troubles here at home. We have gangsterism here. An army of men have been shot to death in the streets of one of our big cities which will probably outnumber the total number of European nationals who have been killed in China. We had better clean up our own sore spots, wipe out the rotten conditions that exist in our cities, establish social justice here, instead of trying to salve our consciences by sending American boys to the Orient.

Mr. NYE. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from Washington for the splendid statement he has made. He is not alone in the sentiment he expressed. He speaks not alone for himself but for untold multitudes when he gives voice to what he has said on the floor of the Senate today.

OUR GOVERNMENT BLIND TO EXPERIENCE

In conclusion let me say that the American people have learned nothing from experience if they are now unwilling and unready to believe and know that once our large industrial and financial interests are allowed to base their activities on foreign war business, instead of on American economic development, they automatically become a vested interest in securing the change of our neutrality and they are as removed from the plain facts of modern life as the gentlemen in the State Department seem to be. It is hard to believe that the American people have learned nothing from the It is fair to proceed on the assumption that they are not all willing to travel the same road and make the same tragic mistakes again.

KEEP FOREIGN POLICY CLEAR OF MOTIVES OF ECONOMIC SELF-INTEREST It should be the constant endeavor of the American people and their Congress, even at a sacrifice if need be to both, to keep our foreign policy clear of motives and economic selfinterest. It is so clear that if we pursue the opposite course and show any will or interest in participating in foreign controversies, such as would be shown were we to follow the wishes of the present administration and repeal the arms embargo, we sign away such chance as might be ours to avoid war. When we indicate by law or deed that we have chosen sides in a European controversy our prospective allies know that our economic self-interest prevents our strict neutrality, they know they can afford to ignore our protests, as England did. When they think that economic self-interest will, in time, pull us into their wars they can ignore our offers of peace mediation, as they did before. If the United Status is to make itself count in the interests of peace, real and lasting peace in the world, it must have its hands clean of attempts or desires to profit from catastrophe. We must instead be prepared to stand before the world, not as a partisan, not as an accomplice, but as an independent power, uncommitted and unbeholden. Our citizens must never be permitted to risk the Nation's peace for the sake of high profits. We must cling to that high purpose declared by President Roosevelt when, during his last campaign for election, and before investment bankers had his ear, he declared, speaking of the event of another foreign war: "If we face the choice of profits or peace, the Nation will answermust answer-we choose peace."

CONGRESS' PLACE IN PARADE TO WAR

Mr. President, to these ends we shall be able to work in a wholly successful way when the people will continue to make clear, and make ever clearer, to the President and to fellow interventionists in this country that they wish America to remain at peace; that they wish America to remain democratic; that they wish Congress to be a check on the Executive instead of a cheering section in any parade toward war; and that they see only tragedy, stark tragedy, in such steps as that one which would deny us the advantage which the arms embargo definitely affords, or that step which would find us pursuing that pot of gold that some investment banker sold to the President a few days ago.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that there may be printed in the RECORD at this point the following: An editorial entitled "In Case of Crisis," appearing in Colliers under date of April 15, 1939; a letter under date of July 9, 1939, appearing in the New York Herald Tribune, from George Mackas, under the heading "Neutral President?"; the release of an article under date of today, by Frederick Sondern, Jr., under the title of "The European Whirligig"; and excerpts from a sermon by Harry Emerson Fosdick, appearing in the Christian Science Monitor of June 28, 1939, under the title "On Fighting Evil with Evil."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from North Dakota?

There being no objection, the matters referred to were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From Collier's, April 15, 1939]

IN CASE OF CRISIS

We lived through a war crisis last spring. Again last September war scares squirted through loudspeakers. Actually, we were close to catastrophe. Perhaps we shall escape the rumored war this spring. When the rumors get noisy, remember these hard-boiled slaves have more than plenty.

 A faked war crisis is one of a dictator's best-known devices for taking his slaves' minds off home troubles—of which the dictators' slaves have more than plenty.

2. An exaggerated foreign-war crisis, by the same token, is one of the best-known devices whereby a political party in power in a democracy can take the voters' minds off its mistakes on various home fronts, and build up for the next election a cry about not changing leaders in time of peril.

3. When the Italians and Germans suddenly learned, shortly before the Munich peace parley, that they actually faced war, there were angry antiwar demonstrations even in those secret-policed and soul-shackled countries. The presumption is still strong that Europe's masses will not want a war for a long time. Until they do, only a foolhardy European government will declare Until they do, only a foolhardy European government will declare a war or start a big undeclared war.

4. Our Navy at present runs a fairly close second in strength to the British Navy, the world's strongest. Odds are 100 to 1 that if war comes the British will not be lined up against us.

5. Hitler's logical next thrust is eastward, toward Russia's Ukraine. If Hitler wants to have it out with Stalin, there is no call for us to lift a finger to interfere, both nazi-ism and communism being sworn enemies of democracy.

6. Communists, Nazis, Fascists, and their "fellow travelers" want to embroil us in the much-predicted European war in one way or another. The moment we go galumphing into such a mix-up we lose our democratic system for the duration, as in 1917-18. That will quite possibly enable one of these fanatic factions to wade to power through wartime or postwar chaos and end our democratic system for good.

7. European statesmen are seasoned power-politicians and international poker players. Ours are not. As a people, we think first and last of world welfare when a crisis comes. If we go to war to save civilization, we shall be the only nation that does so. The others will be fighting for (a) their own hides and (b) postwar loot.

8. Inland, we are impregnable. Our coasts have the aforesaid world's next best navy to defend them. The flocks of world-circling bombers the doom merchants squall about have not come into existence yet, not even in blueprints. Hence, we can afford to wait plenty long before joining somebody else's war.

By keeping these items firmly in mind, we ought to stand a good chance of resisting, through all war scares in the near future, the propagandists whose dearest wish is to see us act like a nation of hysterical fools every time foreign power politicians talk about war.

NEUTRAL PRESIDENT? - READER FINDS ROOSEVELT HAS TAKEN SIDES ALREADY

To the New York Herald Tribune:

No newspaper has done such a thorough job as has the Herald No newspaper has done such a thorough job as has the Herald Tribune in convincing its readers that President Roosevelt is wholly unfit by temperament to conduct our domestic affairs in the best interest of our country. You have pointed out his prejudices against business, his impatience with all who differ with him, his steady usurpation of authority, his habit of distorting facts and calling names, his total lack of calmness and restraint when his pet schemes are at stake. Often you have called upon Congress to reassert its constitutional powers, to retire the President to the Presidency and to put an end to his destructive policies that were leading us to ruin. destructive policies that were leading us to ruin.

So thoroughly have you convinced your readers that Roosevelt cannot be trusted to handle our domestic affairs properly that we are equally convinced that he is not to be trusted to conduct our foreign affairs as well. Therefore, we are amazed that you should advocate giving Roosevelt a free hand in foreign affairs by modification or outright repeal of the Neutrality Act, and you claim this should be done in the interest of "real neutrality."

The Roosevelt administration has not been neutral in the last 5 years. On every possible occasion high officials of the administration, and even Roosevelt himself, have voiced their objections to Hitler and Mussolini in terms much stronger than those used to Hitler and Mussolini in terms much stronger than those used by any responsible officials in England and France. Embargoes have been placed on German and Italian goods; statements have been made that we will support England and France against Germany and Italy by more than words but by measures short of war. The President has definitely and deliberately allied our country against Germany and Italy. He has taken sides in a war even before that war has begun. This is not neutrality. Unless some restraint is placed on Roosevelt, his acts will surely provoke a war and subsequently force us into it. We should like to believe him when he says he is acting to preserve peace, that he does not intend to lead us into war. But his past promises show us he is not to be believed, as you have so often convinced us. He bromnot to be believed, as you have so often convinced us. He promised to restore prosperity, to reduce economic strife, to provide jobs and security. Not one of these promises has been realized. After 7 years of depression we are convinced that his conduct of domestic affairs has not been in the best interest of our country. How, then, can we trust him to handle our foreign affairs in our best interest, when our very existence is at stake?

BROOKLYN, JULY 8, 1939.

GEORGE MACKAS.

THE EUROPEAN WHIRLIGIG-NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS (By Frederic Sondern, Jr.)

LONDON.—Senator Borah and some of his colleagues expressed considerable doubt during the recent neutrality debate in Washington about the accuracy of the State Department's information on European affairs. There is plenty of reason for the Senator's qualms. A small but very powerful clique within the Department—led by Ambassadors Kennedy and Bullitt—has been playing the game for the western powers in a way that often colors and even distorts their reports.

Mr. Kennedy and the British Prime Minister have now reached a degree of intimacy where they address each other as Neville and Joe. And with an Englishman as pompous as Chamberlain, his bestowal of the right to use his first name is more of an accolade than the Order of the Garter. And Joe loves it. The Ambassador's obvious delight at the honors which the canny foraccorate than the Order of the Garter. And Joe loves It. Incambassador's obvious delight at the honors which the canny foreign office has caused to be showered on him often amuses the more experienced career men of the Embassy. "Joe is on the way to Downing Street again. I wonder what Chamberlain wants now?" is a remark one frequently hears in the corridor. When the Prime Minister desires to have information go straight to the White House without passing through the meddlesome checking of the State Department's experts, Joe obliges and calls F. D. R. on the phone—direct. As a result the reports which come to the Department and those which are telephoned to the President "straight from the horse's mouth" are frequently very different. Whether Joe is fooled or not in Downing Street is hard to say, but it is certain that almost always he transmits the version of any situation as he gets it there without checking and as gospel. His dispatches before and during the Czechoslovakian crisis last September forecasting war as a certainty have become classics among the cynical veterans of the Department. He is repeating the process as Prime Minister Chamberlain's astute propaganda leads up to the next step of the appeasement program. Faithfully Joe echoes Neville's blasts that Britain will fight for Poland, all appeasement efforts have been dropped and England will not give all appeasement efforts have been dropped and England will not give another inch. The State Department observers, perhaps not as highly but better informed, think otherwise—and so do most of the insiders in Whitehall. The French "work"

Insiders in Whitehall.

The French "work" Ambassador Bill Bullitt somewhat differently. Bullitt, though strongly Francophile, has much experience, a very sharp wit and—unlike Kennedy—gets no particular thrill out of social prominence. But he does love intrigue and hocuspocus, with which Premier Daladier and the Quai d'Orsay supply him in masses. Mercurial and petulant by nature, he is rather prone to snap judgments, prejudices, and wishful thinking. Under the stress of last September, infected by Kennedy's outbursts and calls for battleships, he also inundated Washington with France's will to fight and all the rest of the diplomatic mumbo-jumbo that went with the Munich sell-out. And he now is doing it again. Bullitt, also, often uses the phone to go over the Department's head to Franklin who takes his opinion of the situation as incontrovertible fact.

Both of the envoys would love to play at power politics, have often said it was a pity that the Foreign Service's hands were too tied. The blocking of the Bloom bill by the suspicious Senator from Idaho and his friends has destroyed great hopes for power and glory in the "State Department within the State Department."

[From the Christian Science Monitor of June 28, 1939.] ON FIGHTING EVIL WITH EVIL

> (By Harry Emerson Fosdick) [Excerpts from the sermon]

For some of us it is easier to believe in the Christian theology than in the Christian ethic. A generation ago many were saying: "We cannot believe your Christian ideas of God, but the ethical principles of Jesus are the hope of the world."

Today, however, it is the ethical principles of Jesus that are

By the Christian ethic, I mean no mere ordinary, humane decency, loving those who love us, but rather the radical, sometimes incredible, demands of Jesus that we love our enemies; that if smitten on one cheek we turn the other also; or if compelled to go I mile we go 2 instead; that we do good to those who hate us and pray for those who despitefully use us and persecute us. There is the rub today.

The reason for this is the extraordinary vividness with which a powerful temptation assails us all, the temptation to resist evil with evil.

In personal relationships we are habitually tempted to meet bad temper with bad temper, resentment with resentment, sometimes chicanery with chicanery, and in all this we are morally sustained because we think we are resisting evil—as, indeed, we are, but with evil.

At that crucial point Jesus parts company with us. It is there that his revolutionary ethic begins.

Listen to him: "How can Satan cast out Satan?" Hidden away in the third chapter of Mark's Gospel that searching question stands, summing up, I think, the essential meaning of Jesus' way of life. "How can Satan cast out Satan?" How can evil be the cure of evil? How can two wrongs make a right?

No question could be more pertinent to our modern world, where day violence rises on every side, ill will is rampant, aggressive iniquities must be resisted by good men, and the temptation to fight evil with evil is almost irresistible.

What apes we are! We copy those we hate. We fight evil with evil and become the evil that we fight. We will conquer them, we say, and so first of all we let them make us in their image.

All this we do thinking Jesus to be a visionary idealist. He is not. His ethic shows a more realistic insight into what is going on in this modern world than does our boasted hard-headedness.

Despite their governments, the people of all the nations in their hearts and homes want peace. Somewhere, sometime, millions of men and women must stand up an cry, "We're through; we will not go on forever with war causing more war, causing more war, causing more war still."

more war still."

If someone says, "But we may be compelled to go to war!" I ask only that the meaning of that be realistically faced. For in the war you say America is compelled to enter every cruelty that human beings, implemented with unprecedented instruments, can inflict on human beings will be inflicted. * * *

Let us take a further step and note that whether or not this principle of Jesus that evil is not to be fought with evil appeals to us depends primarily on what it is that most of all we want. Do we really want to cast out Satan? Do we most of all desire to get rid of the evil of the world? Multitudes of people want something we really want to cast out Satan? Do we most of all desire to get rid of the evil of the world? Multitudes of people want something else altogether—their own prestige, personal or national, their gain and profit, their vengeance even, or their private conquest. Of course, to such Jesus' ethic is preposterous. If we say in certain personal relationships this ethic can be made to work and it was only of these individual relationships that Jesus was thinking. I support that shows how little we know about Jesus' was thinking, I suspect that shows how little we know about Jesus was thinking, I suspect that shows how little we know about vestes world. He was not tucked off in a forgotten corner of the earth. He lived on one of the major highways of the Roman Empire. Every breath of news, I suspect, from the Thames to the Euphrates soon or late came to Nazareth.

He lived in a violent generation when force ruled the world and

He lived in a violent generation when force ruled the world and might made right as terribly as it does today. He lived in a nation seething with violent revolt. He dealt not only with Saducees, compromising with Rome; not only with Pharisees, waiting for their supernatural Messiah to come from heaven and redeem them; but with zealots, fiery, militant, revolutionary rebels, crying out for bloodshed to make right their heinous wrongs.

This public situation, so dreadfully like ours, Jesus had in mind when he turned His back on revenge and bloodshed and based His ministry on undiscourageable good will ministry on undiscourageable good will.

How perennial a temptation that is. How terribly it assails us all today—to join forces with the devil to beat the devil; to fight

This does not mean that all use of force is satanic. Coercion has its proper place in life, always indicating a pathological condition but capable of salutary use in the interests of the whole community, as, for example, against the insane or the criminal. Even in such realms, however, the Christian ethic has been so far influential that not retaliation but cure and reformation have become the test and aim of intelligent procedure.

Because one believes in municipal police, one is not by any logic driven, as some seem to suppose, to believe in war. War is a highly driven, as some seem to suppose, to believe in war. War is a highly specialized form of force, in its preparations, procedures, and results distinguishable from any other of force's exhibitions. One may believe in the police and think dueling wrong; one may grant the salutary nature of coercion communally applied for the good of all and still think gladiatorial shows are unmitigated and out-of all and still think gladiatorial shows are unmitigated and outmoded evil.

Do not represent me as having said that it is simple to apply this principle to the world's large affairs. It is desperately difficult. No one of us is wise enough to see around the next corner. Only as Americans this seems clear: That we are at the fork of the road and that either we are going to throw the vast influence of this Nation on the side of those constructive forces that make for international good will and conference instead of violence, or else we are in for an era dominated by our aping of our enemies.

They make war. We make war. They build vast armaments. We build vast armaments. They use poison gas. We use poison gas. They say, All restrictions off on the most brutal instincts of mankind. We say the same, until once more, fighting evil with evil until we are the evil that we fight, far from conquering our enemies, we let them make us after their own image.

So at long last, at the end of a ruinous era, we shall be facing again the question—which God grant us grace to face now before it is too late—"How can Satan cast out Satan?"

Mr. BRIDGES obtained the floor.

Mr. BONE. Mr. President, will the Senator from New Hampshire yield?

Mr. BRIDGES. I yield.

Mr. BONE. I merely want to make one further observation, and then I shall be happy to yield to the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. BRIDGES].

Mr. President, I was tempted to say what I did in connection with the remarks of the Senator from North Dakota because in recent weeks I have received from my own beautiful State of Washington a series of reports from health officials in various counties, pointing out that a large number of children of very tender years, even infants in arms, are suffering from hunger, some of them bordering on absolute starvation. I think it is impudence to talk of the rights of hucksters in a foreign land when we in America face that sort of a situation at home, and find ourselves apparently helpless to meet it.

Many years ago a French novelist, Le Sage, wrote a book, Gil Blas, in which he portrayed a character, if I recall his name, Pedro Garcias, a vulgar person who carried his soul in his purse. At times it has almost seemed to me that America was beginning to carry her soul in her purse, for profits those whose greed might easily thrust us into a deadly war seem to bulk larger at times in some quarters than the lives and the hopes of our own boys.

I have heard more comment in some quarters about the rights of hucksters in war trade than I have heard about hungry babies. God help a country where that sort of thing can go on unchallenged. Imagine Senators voting to send these hungry and half-fed kids, who are bewildered by economic adversity, out to support a huckster in China. The soul of America is dead if we do it.

Let me say to the Senate that a nation which tolerates such a philosophy is not going to continue to function very smoothly, Mr. President. It is time we quit sublimating our lust and desire for money in all this holy crusade about trade rights. There cannot be any "rights" abroad which are worth preserving unless the rights of Americans here at home are first preserved. We had better cease all this babbling about American rights abroad until we firmly establish on an enduring and permanent foundation the right of Americans here at home to share in the decencies of life. In the most beautiful country on God's footstool, a country with illimitable natural resources, with illimitable possibilities for human happiness, we are in a life-and-death struggle with poverty which overwhelms millions. We have not yet solved that problem, and yet there was a suggestion that the Congress should enter into a debate which would occupy weeks and weeks respecting the "rights" of a few Americans abroad.

Who here wants to send his boy out to die in a new "holy war"? Why not pour all that restless zeal for traders in faraway lands into a new crusade for economic justice in America? If we have to choose between some company remaining in a Chinese port or a deadly war, it were better for America to remove its nationals for the time being and settle by negotiation later on. A war in the Orient would increase our debt by probably $50,000,000,000. We would have to have a Navy with three times its present increase if we hoped to carry on a successful war there. And God knows what would happen to our $100,000,000 battleships if we ever sent them over there, 7,000 miles from home. All this to preserve "rights" exacted at the point of a gun.

Mr. President, the time is coming when we will have to determine the wisdom of entering a war to support American trade rights abroad. "Rights?" What about the "rights" of ten or twelve million Americans who cannot get jobs here? If war came, we would induct these hopeless Americans into the Army to go out and fight for "rights" that are now denied at home to them.

Until America has solved her own economic problems and made America safe for Americans under the Stars and Stripes it is impudence for us to talk about making the rest of the world safe for anybody, including our own hucksters who are doing business abroad. Charity begins at home. If justice is not enthroned here, we betray our own people.

I repeat what I said before. Men in the China trade came to Congress and obtained a law which eliminates income tax on them. Now we are told that these beneficiaries of tax exemption have "rights" so impressive that we should, if need be, draft the boys of America and send them abroad to fight for such "rights," Yet they do not in their oriental operations pay to support the Navy, the very guns of which would belch defiance to their enemies in the Orient.

Mr. President, it is time we gave up the Philippine Islands and got out of that danger zone. Another war would surely wreck this Nation. I have not found a man in public life in the Capital of this country who does not frankly admit that another great international war in which we participated would destroy the Republic. Why temporize with this phantom of death?

Why all this glib talk about another war? What would we fight it for? The cold-blooded, ruthless announcement is made to us as Members of Congress that it is now our "foreign policy" to defend American rights everywhere. If we have the faintest adumbration of intelligence, patriotism, and love for the men who died on gory fields to preserve the Republic we will be sure that we firmly establish the rights of our own flesh and blood in America under the Stars and Stripes before we start establishing rights for anybody on foreign soil.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Calloway, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the House to the bill (S. 281) to amend further the Civil Service Retirement Act, approved May 29, 1930.

The message also announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the House to the bill (S. 1558) to provide for the acceptance of an easement with respect to certain lands in New Mexico, and for other purposes.

The message further announced that the House insisted upon its amendments to the bill (S. 2009) to amend the Interstate Commerce Act, as amended, by extending its application to additional types of carriers and transportation and modifying certain provisions thereof, and for other purposes, disagreed to by the Senate; agreed to the conference asked by the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and that Mr. Lea, Mr. Crosser, Mr. Bulwinkle, Mr. Cole of Maryland, Mr. Wolverton, Mr. Holmes, and Mr. Halleck were appointed managers on the part of the House at the conference.

NEW MEXICO AND ITS CITIZENS—PERSONAL STATEMENT

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, will the Senator from New Hampshire yield to me?

Mr. BRIDGES. I yield.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, a bill relating to certain so-called pernicious political activities has been pending before Congress throughout weeks, and even months. During that period of time much publicity has been given to the measure. I should be extremely ungrateful if I did not say that I deeply appreciate the very favorable reception which has been accorded this measure by the press of the country generally. I have no hesitancy in saying now, as I have said upon other occasions, that if there is any credit due for the passage of this legislation the major part of the credit rightfully belongs to the press of the country.

The very gallant and altogether unselfish fight led by the Scripps-Howard newspapers has done more to acquaint the people of the country with the true objectives and purposes of the bill than I or any of the sponsors of the bill could possibly have done. At some time I hope I may in a more suitable manner express my gratitude to all the newspapers and magazines which have helped in carrying on the fight and have contributed so much.

I do not forget, Mr. President, that the idea of applying the civil-service rule to prohibit political activities by employees in the nonclassified civil service came from an editorial which appeared in the Washington Post more than a year ago. I mention that fact because of an article to which I shall presently refer.

The statement is made that my activities were caused by certain things which happened in New Mexico. I am very glad, Mr. President, that my activities along this line go back long, long before anything arose in the State of New Mexico or any charges were made, as both my colleague [Mr. Chavez] who is present and the Representative from my State, who sits by my side, well know.

Mr. President, this parliamentary statement about the press of the country is not made to repay or to attempt to repay in any manner the debt which I feel I owe to the press. I am making this frank statement and acknowledgment of the aid which has been given and of the appreciation which I feel because my remarks today will concern an article which appeared in a current issue of one of the great weekly magazines of the country.

Always it seems, Mr. President, something happens which strikes a discordant note. On yesterday that happened; and today I take the first opportunity of expressing a protest, not on my own account, but on behalf of others who for various reasons cannot appear and speak for themselves.

The current issue of the great magazine Time gives the measure of which I have spoken much space. When I say "great magazine Time," I mean great, for, in my opinion, it is one of the greatest magazines of the country. I am one of its regular readers. I find it to be an invaluable aid in keeping up with current affairs, not only in Washington and throughout the Nation but throughout the world. It is accurate and informative. If I may use the expression, "its pithy paragraphs pack a paralyzing punch" which is truly amazing.

So far as the bill I have sponsored is concerned, I have no complaint to make at the treatment it has received in this great magazine. I have every reason to appreciate the splendid articles which have appeared in it. However, on yesterday, in reading the article on the bill, a few short words caused me deep concern—words, Mr. President, which did not refer to me but to my colleague the junior Senator from New Mexico [Mr. Chavez]. I shall not repeat the words, Mr. President. I do not want to insert them in the Record.

Certainly it is not my purpose to do battle for my colleague on matters of issues. He is well able to speak for himself. I have seen him on the stump, in campaigns, and in debate, and he needs no man to assist him in that field.

Contained in the article, Mr. President, are one or two words of which he cannot well speak. They are too personal and touch too deeply upon things which we all cherish, and of which we cannot ourselves speak.

The great State of New Mexico, which my colleague and I represent in the Senate, is a State which is rich in tradition, history, and even romance. It is a State which is blessed by scenery unsurpassed in the world. Its climate is ideal. Those of us who are fortunate enough to call New Mexico our home are proud of all her history and tradition, and we thrill with the beauty of her scenery. Merely to live in New Mexico is to enjoy privileges and happiness which even kings, with all their wealth and power, may not purchase, acquire, or enjoy in less favored regions.

In the State of New Mexico, Mr. President, the major part of our citizenry represents two great nationalities. I use the word "nationalities" advisedly, for sometimes a looser term is used; sometimes people even in New Mexico refer to the different "races." The people of New Mexico are not of two races. We have in our State honorable citizens of English and honorable citizens of Spanish ancestry. Long before the settlements on the Atlantic seacoast had been dreamed of. brave Spanish explorers had entered and extended their dominion over all the great Southwest. Today the descendants of those early Spanish settlers form a large part of the population of New Mexico. Also, of course, we have in New Mexico probably an equal number of English-speaking citizens of English ancestry. Throughout the years these two great nationalities have lived together, equally enjoying the privileges and advantages of our great State.

As one of the English-speaking citizens, I take great pride in the history, accomplishments, and achievements of my English ancestry, and my colleague, of Spanish ancestry, takes equal pride in the history, accomplishments, and achievements of his ancestry.

I attempt no flight of eloquence and use no high-flown words in portraying or in attempt to portray the history or accomplishments of either nationality. Both have much of which they can well be proud. It may also be that we both have that of which we should not boast. Each has its virtues; each has its strength; and each has its glorious past.

Among the Spanish-speaking people of New Mexico, I include some of my own warmest personal friends. I am proud of their friendship. Looking back over the years of my residence in the State, and thinking of the many favors and honors that have come to me, I know that I could not have had them and that I would not be here today if it had not been for the loyal support of both nationalities.

Contributions to Government and State have been made by great citizens of New Mexico whether of English or of Spanish ancestry. I am proud of the records of them all. I recall with pleasure the greatness of McDonald, Ezekiel C. de Baca, Andrieus A. Jones, Antonio Lucero, Sam G. Bratton, Felix Garcia, Lindsey, Mechem, Larrozolo, Hinkle, Hannetts, Dillon, Cutting, Chavez, Seligman, Valdes, Gonzales, Morrow, Ferguson, Hernandez. Alike they have served their State with patriotism and devotion.

I cannot help but point with pride to the fact that in our State are two great peoples who live together, treating each other with respect, confidence, and friendship, in many instances with real affection, but always with sympathy and understanding.

Because this is the history of my State, briefly stated, I can not help but raise my voice today in protest against the article in Time which, to me, seems to cast an undue and unwarranted reflection not only upon my colleague, not only upon the members of his family, but upon that great part of the citizenry of the State of New Mexico to which I have referred.

Mr. CHAVEZ rose.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, does my colleague desire to interrupt me?

Mr. CHAVEZ. I should like to make a brief observation.
Mr. BRIDGES. Just a moment, Mr. President, I have the

Mr. CHAVEZ. Mr. President, will the Senator yield very briefly while I make a short statement that will not take more than a minute?

Mr. HATCH. I will say to the Senator from New Hampshire that I have almost concluded.

Mr. BRIDGES. Very well. I will yield if the interruption shall be very brief.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Mr. President, I thank my colleague for the kind words with which he has eulogized the State of New Mexico and its citizens. I also read the article in Time and it affected me; it affected my people and it affected my State. It is an insult that shall be resented; but I do not want to take the time of the Senate today while there is pending a bill which the majority leader and the Members of the Senate desire to pass. It is not my purpose to speak on the matter now, but in the not far distant future before the session is over it is my purpose to show the gentleman who so slurred my State and a great people that we do have Americans there even if they are of Spanish ancestry, and that one of those whom he slurs and insults may be the Unknown Soldier lying in the tomb at Arlington.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I may interpolate here with reference to what my colleague has said about the Unknown Soldier in the tomb at Arlington that I know, although I had not intended to refer to it, that in the Spanish-American War in 1898 Spanish citizens of my State enlisted and fought under the Stars and Stripes against Spain.

Mr. President, I was saying that I have taken the floor today to voice a protest, my own personal protest, against the insinuations and implications which reflect upon not only, as I have said, my colleague and his family but on the people of my State. Unthoughtedly I am sure it was done; unthoughtedly the wrong was inflicted, but, nevertheless, the cruel epithets, Mr. President, did wound and hurt and injure most poignantly, and, in my mind, most unnecessarily. I cannot hope to heal the injury; I do not hope to right the wrong; but my voice can be raised in protest against the slight and injury to my colleague, to his family, and to the people of his State and mine, and to the thousands of loyal, patriotic American citizens of New Mexico of honorable Spanish ancestry and descent.

Never again let such an implication be made; never again let cruel, unjust thoughts find their way in print to wound, hurt, and injure innocent men and women.

Differences there may be, and there are, in our nationalities, as there are in all nationalities; but in New Mexico, Mr. President, we are proud, whether we be of English or Spanish ancestry, that we have no difference in race. We belong, all of us, to the greatest of all races—the great white

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (S. 2864) to provide for the financing of a program of recoverable expenditures, and for other purposes.

Mr. BARKLEY, Mr. President—
Mr. BRIDGES. I yield to the Senator from Kentucky.
Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I do not want to interfere with the Senator from New Hampshire, but I am wondering if we can make another effort, following the Senator's address, to enter into an agreement with respect to the limitation of debate during the further consideration of the bill.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, I think such an effort is practicable. However, I have agreed to call for a quorum whenever a request of that character is made.

Mr. BARKLEY. I should like to reach an agreement at this time, if possible, so that we may have some idea about the program for the remainder of the day.

Mr. AUSTIN. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. LA FOLLETTE in the chair). Does the Senator from New Hampshire yield for that purpose?

Mr. BRIDGES. I do.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll. The Chief Clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Danaher	Johnson, Calif.	Reed
Andrews	Davis	Johnson, Colo.	Russell
Austin	Downey	King	Schwartz
Bailey	Ellender	La Follette	Schwellenbach
Bankhead	Frazier	Lodge	Sheppard
Barbour	George	Lucas	Shipstead
Barkley	Gerry	Lundeen	Slattery
Bilbo	Gibson	McCarran	Smith
Bone	Gillette	McKellar	Stewart
Borah	Green	Maloney	Taft
Bridges	Guffey	Mead	Thomas, Okla.
Brown	Gurney	Miller	Thomas, Utah
Bulow	Hale	Minton	Townsend
Burke	Harrison	Murray	Truman
Byrd	Hatch	Neelv	Tydings

Capper	Herring	Nye	Van Nuys
Chavez	Hill	O'Mahoney	Wagner
Clark, Idaho	Holman	Pepper	Walsh
Clark, Mo.	Holt	Pittman	Wheeler
Connally	Hughes	Radcliffe	White

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Eighty-four Senators having answered to their names, a quorum is present.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BRIDGES. I yield to the Senator from Kentucky. Mr. BARKLEY. I ask unanimous consent that following the address of the Senator from New Hampshire, during the remainder of the consideration of this measure no Senator shall speak more than once or longer than 15 minutes on the bill, or more than once or longer than 15 minutes on the amendment, and that the agreement shall exclude any amendment on the subject of highways, if one shall be offered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. HOLT. I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard.

POLITICS AND EXPROPRIATION

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, there is an item in the spending bill for $100,000,000 dollars for spreading good neighborliness in Latin America. This is in addition to the $100,000,000 which the Export-Import Bank already has. The White House had contemplated $500,000,000 in the pending bill, but I note that the figure has been cut to $100,000,000.

Mr. President, I want to discuss our so-called good neighbor policy in Latin America. For some time the Roosevelt administration has been greatly concerned about fascism in Germany, and we have been deluged with propaganda to the effect that the menace is not confined to Europe, but that fascism is moving into Latin America.

While expressing this great concern about fascism, however, the administration has encouraged and even connived at the establishment of communism in Mexico. It seems, Mr. President, that the American people are even paying the bill.

I hope to prove to my colleagues that what has been happening in Mexico for the past 6 years and what has been happening here are of the same pattern, directed by the same forces, as much part and parcel of a united movement as if directed by one master mind and one master hand.

In this country, leading the movement, agitating it, encouraging it, has been the New Deal. In Mexico it has been the so-called Mexican new deal under the Cardenas government.

As part of the cooperation, our New Deal has encouraged its fellow travelers to the south to seize the property of American citizens. Through our silver policy we have even subsidized them in doing so. It has all been in line with the so-called redistribution of wealth propaganda which has not redistributed any wealth, but has come very near destroying it.

Now let us get on with the circumstantially convincing

The Mexican revolution has coincided in time and action with the so-called revolution in this country. As part of the Mexican upheaval, the Cardenas government, in March 1938. expropriated the oil properties of American, British, and Netherlands citizens. Strangely enough, in the light of the atmosphere engendered in this country at that time, this action caused no general indignation. Our own Government was engaged in trying to pack the Supreme Court. Lawlessness was the theme of both this Government and the government at Mexico City. Indeed, instead of our administration's taking immediate action in the matter, officials of our Government set out to honor the officials of the Mexican

The prime mover in the Cardenas revolutionary program is Vincente Lombardo Toledano. He came to Washington less than 3 months after the expropriation took place, not to deal with the oil question but to make a speech and to be dined by such officials of the New Deal as John Carmody, at that time Administrator of the Rural Electrification Administration; Fred Silcox, Chief of the United States Forest Service; Mary Anderson, Director of the Women's Bureau of the Department of Labor, and others. But it will be better if you hear of this reception from Raymond Clapper, a columnist well known to you all and very friendly to the New

Writing in the Washington News of June 24, Mr. Clapper

Because it occurs in the midst of the State Department's negotiations with Mexico over seizure of foreign oil properties, there is unusual interest—and a little nervousness—over the circumstance that a group of Government officials are sponsoring the speaking appearance here Monday night of the prime mover in the Cardenas program, Vincente Lombardo Toledano.

He is a young and spectacular figure in Mexico's new labor movement, and he will discuss his labor program in which a major interest has been driving through the Cardenas expropriation of the 10 sponsors for the Toledano meeting, 7 are in the Government. In addition, Oscar Chapman, Assistant Secretary of the Interior, was announced as chairman of the meeting, although it is possible he may be obliged to withdraw in order to fill a speaking engagement elsewhere for Secretary Ickes

Arrangements for the meeting were made by Miss Alice Barrows, of the Office of Education in the Interior Department. She was of the Office of Education in the Interior Department. She was the charming hostess at the famous dinner party early in the New Deal when her guest, the late Dr. William Wirt, Gary, Ind., educator, became so frightened that he told a congressional committee a band of "brain trusters" was plotting revolution and that Roosevelt was their dupe. She does have the most interesting parties.

Sponsors for the Toledano meeting include John Carmody, Administration, First States for the Dural Electrication, Administration, First States.

ministrator for the Rural Electrification Administration; Fred Silcox, Chief of the United States Forest Service; Mary Anderson, Director of the Women's Bureau, Department of Labor; Robert Marshall, United States Forest Service; Mordecal Ezekiel, economist, Department of Agriculture; Stuart Tice, Chairman of the Central Statistical Board; and Isador Lubin, United States Commissioner of Labor Statistics.

Ordinarily the speech of a foreign labor leader would be of passing interest only to Washington. But the fact that Toledano is the power behind the Mexican Government makes his appearance here significant at this time when the oil controversy is sufficiently delicate to have delayed for weeks the return of Ambassador Josephus Daniels to his post at Mexico City. And the fact that Government officials are serving as sponsors for his meeting gives Government officials are serving as sponsors for his meeting gives it more than ordinary prestige.

The State Department was not consulted by officials sponsoring the meeting and does not know whether Toledano intends to use the occasion to defend Mexico's oil policy. If he does, there might be some resulting embarrassment to the State Department in its negotiations, for the reason that the meeting almost certainly would be represented in Mexico as having the approval of the would be represented in Mexico as having the approval of the American officials sponsoring it.

Toledano has close relations with John Lewis and the C. I. O. movement here. John Brophy, director of the C. I. O., will share the program with Toledano Monday night.

The rise of the young Mexican labor leader has been as spectacular as that of John Lewis and C. I. O. here. He is not only supporting the Cardenas government and shaping its policies but is pressing it to turn the seized oil properties over to labor.

There is no disposition anywhere in the Government to try to head off Toledano's speech. That is not in the picture at all. Neither has the State Department attempted to interfere with those Government officials who are lending their names and support to the meeting. The administration doesn't insist upon the same strict discipline among executive officials that it asks of Democrats in Congress. Everyone downtown is free to sing pretty Democrats in Congress. Everyone downtown is free to sing pretty much in his own key. But some in the State Department will consider the Government lucky if it doesn't get a headache out of the affair.

Following this get-together of kindred spirits, Mr. John L. Lewis, who has been part and parcel of the New Deal, and Mr. Edwin S. Smith, member of the National Labor Relations Board, made a return visit to Mexico City in September 1938. As to what took place on this visit I read from an editorial in the New York Daily Mirror of September 19, 1938:

In a few days John L. Lewis, chairman of the Committee for Industrial Organization, will arrive on shipboard in New York Harbor. Ship news reporters will ask him what really happened in Mexico City's recent Latin American labor conference. Here's the dope: Lewis left the unmistakable impression, notwithstanding Secretary Cordell Hull's vehement protest, that President Rooseveit approves the confiscation of American oil properties in Mexico.

Sitting in the honored seat on Toledano's right hand, Lewis de-clared that 4,000,000 American workers had delegated him to bring best wishes for the future to Mexican unionists. * * *

"In Mexico we have seen under the regime of President Lazaro Cardenas with profound satisfaction the enormous growth of the labor movement through the C. T. M. (Mexican Labor Federation)," Lewis asserted.

The workers should so organize that what has taken place in the United States and Mexico can be achieved in all countries of Latin America.

'It makes no difference," the C. I. O. chieftain cried, "whether these avaricious capitalistic organizations are in the United States or in Mexico or in the countries of Europe, their attitude toward the workers and the tactics are the same.'

This editorial goes on to say:

Smith outspokenly approved the oil confiscations—although this part of his speech was omitted in the hand-out to American papers. He lauded Mexico as the only capitalistic country with the courage to carry out the right of all workers.

Now I read from an editorial in the Bridgeton (N. J.) News under date of September 19, 1938:

Washington officials do not conceal their disapproval of speeches by Edwin S. Smith, of the National Labor Relations Board, and John L. Lewis in Mexico City. * * * *

L. Lewis in Mexico City. * * *

The Labor Board member spoke in an auditorium described in the press as "decorated with a sea of red banners," and composed of an audience whom William Green charged were principally Communists.

In passing, I would like to observe that I never saw any evidence of this disapproval. Mr. Smith is still a member of the National Labor Relations Board and Mr. Lewis still sits at the right hand of the throne, even though day before yesterday he made a very vicious attack upon the Vice President of the United States, the Presiding Officer of this body.

Now I read an editorial from the Wilson (N. C.) Times under date of October 10, 1938:

Not satisfied with the confusion and trouble that he has brought Not satisfied with the confusion and trouble that he has brought to America, John L. Lewis has been in Mexico attending the meetings of the South American Labor Conference and made speeches there applauding President Cardenas in his stand against the United States with reference to expropriations of American-owned property. With John L. Lewis was Edwin S. Smith, of the National Labor Relations Board. By their presence and statements these two Americans have encouraged the Mexican Government to resist the American Government's demand that property taken from the citizens of America and foreign countries without consideration is neither fair, right, nor just. * *

I have here today dozens of editorials of similar tenor from newspapers throughout this country.

But the most thorough description of the activities of Mr. Lewis and Mr. Smith is given by Hartley W. Barclay, editor of Mill and Factory. Writing in America's Future, the November 1938 issue, he said:

The recent session in Mexico City of the International Industrial Institute, which I attended, proved to be merely an adjunct to a radical international labor meeting. The labor congress in turn was the carefully prepared springboard for a movement to extend Mexico's program of expropriations, confiscation, and communism in all of Latin America.

Whether by design or coincidence, the impression was created that the extension of Mexico's "red" ideals into all the Americas has the approval of the North American New Deal and of his labor ally, the C. I. O.

Edwin S. Smith, member of the United States National Labor Edwin S. Smith, member of the United States National Labor Board, a speaker at two sessions, was present on the platform when Mexican President Cardenas expounded his doctrine of expropriation and invited all Latin America to follow his example. Mr. Smith's commendation of Mexican labor laws and his bitter attack on reactionary capitalism in the United States gave Mexicans the impression that the administration, through a Government official, approved confiscation of American properties in foreign countries. Mr. Smith has denied that this is a justifiable inference, but the impression became so widespread that it already has served the purpose of those who planned the fortnight of propaganda meetings in the Mexican capital.

At this point, Mr. President, I want to say that Mr. Smith has denied that he gave approval to the expropriation

Now, to return to Mr. Barclay's article, he writes further:

To realize fully the seriousness of aid and comfort given to the Mexican revolutionaries by the presence of John L. Lewis; Edwin S. Smith, of the N. L. R. B.; and other Americans who attended the Mexican Labor Conference, and applauded its speakers, one must first understand President Cardenas and his policies. The most significant statement of policy was given directly to me by the official spokesman for President Cardenas, Attorney Antonio Ramos Pedrusers. "Of source you know we are excellent accompany and Pedrueza: "Of course, you know we are a socialistic government and we are nationalizing our resources like Germany, Italy, Chile, and other countries have done, for the benefit of our nationals."

Mr. Barclay goes on to say that the Foreign Policy Association in New York had some time previously recognized the totalitarian aspects of certain of Mexico's economic and political policies as they existed in 1937.

I now read from the current issue of the Saturday Evening Post an article entitled "What Has Happened to Mexico's Oil?" by Ruth Sheldon. She made a trip through Latin America to study the subject. She writes:

Mexican Government officials assured me that the properties would never have been expropriated if President Cardenas had not felt confident of the sympathy of the Roosevelt administration. It is significant that the expropriation law, which gave the Government the right to expropriate private property "for public and social welfare," was submitted to the Mexican Congress in October 1936, but was not passed until November, after election day in the United States

Now, Mr. President, let us see what our Government was doing officially in the matter. As nearly as I can determine, Secretary of State Hull sent his first note protesting the seizure of these properties on July 21, 1938. You can imagine the effect it had after what had gone before. He sent another note on August 22, 1938, and there have been several other notes. But I have not the slightest criticism of Secretary Hull. I have no doubt that he has pursued this matter in his usual vigorous manner.

But, on the other hand, I have not the slightest doubt, and neither has anyone else who is acquainted with what goes on in Washington, that in each instance he sent a note to Mexico City responsible officials of the New Deal gave the Mexican Embassy to understand that no attention was to be paid to them. Can there be any doubt of what Mr. Roosevelt's attitude was when one contemplates the whole atmosphere of the negotiations?

On February 1, 1939, there appeared in the newspapers stories of a so-called mystery note that had been dispatched to the Mexican Government. It was supposed to have been very strong in tone, but nobody to this day has been able to find out anything about this note.

H. R. Knickerbocker wrote for the International News Service under date of February 1, 1939, as follows:

Somewhere in the archive safe of the American Embassy in Mexico City is a bombshell which contains explosives sufficiently powerful to blow up either the Cardenas government or the diplomatic relations between the United States and Mexico.

It is a copy of the unpublished note which the American Government addressed to the Mexican Government immediately after the expropriation of the oil properties valued by their American owners at $200,000,000.

The note is the deepest secret in Mexico today, and nobody has seen it but the very highest officials and diplomats of the American and Mexican Governments. * * *

It is one of the most mysterious notes in diplomatic history.

Because it simply disappeared. It left Washington. It arrived in the American Embassy there. It was delivered by the American Embassy to the Mexican Foreign Office, but the Mexican Foreign Office never received it.

The suggestion is plain that Secretary Hull sent a very forceful note, but that Mexican and other American officials agreed not to publish it. Parenthetically, I tried to find out something about this note from Under Secretary of State Sumner Welles, but although he wrote me exhaustively telling of all public steps that had been taken, he evaded any mention of this mystery note.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BRIDGES. I yield.

Mr. LUCAS. The Senator from New Hampshire was discussing a letter which he received from Sumner Welles with respect to what he termed a "mysterious letter" which is now in the archives, as I understand, of the American Embassy in Mexico City. Has the Senator with him that letter from Sumner Welles?

Mr. BRIDGES. I have.

Mr. LUCAS. I should like to know what the Under Secretary said in his letter to the Senator, if the Senator will be so kind as to read it or put it in the RECORD.

Mr. BRIDGES. I shall ask that the clerk read the letter. It is a rather lengthy one.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the letter will be read by the clerk.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF STATE. Washington, February 7, 1939.

The Honorable STYLES BRIDGES, United States Senate.

MY DEAR SENATOR BRIDGES: I have received your letter of February 3, 1939, in which you express various opinions, and request certain information, with regard to relations between the United States and Mexico. I welcome the opportunity of responding to States and Mexico. I welcome the opportunity of responding to your letter under acknowledgment.

In your letter under reference you state, "The confiscation of property of the citizen of another nation is the violation of an international law. A confiscatory policy thus strikes not only at the interests of particular individuals, but at the foundations of international intercourse, and law and order."

In the event that the note has not been brought to your attention, I may say that in a note addressed on July 21 last by the Secretary of State to the Mexican Ambassador in Washington, the full text of which was made public at that time, the Secretary of State announced the position of this Government upon this question as follows:

"The taking of property without compensation is not expropriation. It is confiscation. It is no less confiscation because there may be an expressed intent to pay at some time in the future." The Secretary of State further said that the Government of the United States cannot admit that a foreign government may take the property of American nationals in disregard of the universally recognized rule of compensation under international law nor admit that the rule of compensation can be nullified by any country through its own local legislation.

In a further note addressed to the Mexican Ambassador in Washington under date of August 22 last, which was likewise made public at that time, the Secretary of State referred to these statements contained in his earlier note, and further declared that the doctrine of just compensation was "embodied in the constitutions of most countries of the world and of every republic of the American Continent, and has been carried forward as an international doctrine in the universally recognized law of nations. There is, indeed, no mystery about international law. It is nothing more than the recognition between nations of the rules of right and fair dealing, such as ordinarily obtain between individuals, and which are essential for friendly intercourse."

I believe you will, therefore, agree that the position of this Government with regard to the fundamental principles mentioned in your letter has been made known officially and very clearly to the Government of Mexico through the communications above cited.

In the first paragraph of your letter under reference you refer to a news report "that a very mysterious or secret note was dispatched to the Government of the Republic of Mexico by the United States Government at the time the Mexican Government expropriated American and other foreign-owned property of enormous value."

I am glad to assure you that neither have there been any "mysterious" communications dispatched by the Government of the United States to the Government of Mexico nor has there been any "mysterious" communication of any character whatsoever to the Government of Mexico. The position of this Government with regard to the fundamental issues involved, as shows set forth has been adhered to increase. as above set forth, has been adhered to in every communication made by this Government to the Government of Mexico, whether oral or written, either prior or subsequent to the notes of July 21 and August 22, 1938, above cited.

21 and August 22, 1938, above cited.

You will however, I am sure, concede that it would not be compatible with the public interest or consistent with the successful conduct of our foreign relations for this Government to undertake to make public the texts of every communication or the details of every conversation which may be undertaken with a foreign government relating to matters currently the subject of diplomatic negotiations. The problems involved in the instant matter are complicated and delicate, and the successful culmination of the negotiations now in progress would hardly be furthered by the publication at this time of every detail of the discussions which have been tions now in progress would hardly be furthered by the publica-tion at this time of every detail of the discussions which have been taking place between the two Governments.

You further inquire whether this Government can consent to have other nations directly intervene on behalf of their interests in Mexico. This Government is not informed of any intention on in Mexico. This Government is not informed of any intention on the part of other nations to intervene in Mexico.

You ask, "Is the government of President Cárdenas, obviously hostile to the United States, drifting toward, or already under, the domination of European or Asiatic powers?" I know of no evidence which would support the allegation that the government of President Cárdenas is "obviously hostile to the United States," nor has this Government any reason to believe that Mexico is under the domination of, or drifting toward, domination by any other country.

has this Government any reason to believe that Mexico is under the domination of, or drifting toward, domination by any other country.

You further submit a question with regard to the possibility of civil strife in Mexico in consequence of "conflicting ideology." This question, as I am sure you will agree, relates solely to the internal and domestic affairs of Mexico, and could not appropriately be publicly commented upon by an official of this Government.

You further state: "Notwithstanding resulting serious economic repercussions, it is rumored that American citizens have been urged to undertake individually, or by group, or by independent agents, personal negotiations with the Government of Mexico. Does our Government advocate this procedure in so complicated a situation? * * * Will you inform me, in addition to the above-made queries, whether or not you have urged, or expect to urge, such private action disassociated from the duties of your Department?"

From the moment of the expropriation by the Mexican Government of oil properties belonging to American nationals—to which your inquiry just quoted is obviously intended specifically to apply—the Department of State has persistently, and upon innumerable occasions, conferred both with representatives of the Government of Mexico, and with representatives of the American oil companies, in order to facilitate direct negotiations between the two parties involved in the controversy which arose from such expropriation, for the purpose of promoting an equitable and prompt solution, and in order that these American nationals might thereby obtain adequate, prompt, and effective compensation for their properties.

I am glad to say that as a result of the efforts of the Department

I am glad to say that as a result of the efforts of the Department of State I am now informed that negotiations looking toward this end will be undertaken before the end of the present month. The Mexican Government, in various ways and upon numerous occasions, has publicly announced its willingness to negotiate a settlement with the American companies whose properties were expropriated, and in accordance with the established practice of the Department of State, the Department has considered its function properly to be limited for the time being to the facilitation of such negotiations, and to communicating to the Mexican Government the position of the Government of the United States with regard to what it maintains are the just rights of its citizens.

Finally, you request me to inform you of the status of negotiations between our Government and the Government of the Republic of Mexico with relation to the recent confiscation of American lic of Mexico with relation to the recent confiscation of American properties. In compliance with your request I am glad to convey to you in the following lettered paragraphs the present status of settlement of each of the several categories of American properties involved, in addition to the oil properties above mentioned.

(a) Agrarian expropriations since August 30, 1927: By notes dated November 9, 1938, and November 12, 1938 (copies enclosed), an agreement was reached for the settlement of these agrarian claims of American citizens. The Commission to evaluate these claims had its first meeting in Mexico City on December 1, 1938, and the proceedings of the Commission are now in progress. Under the agreement Mexico is to pay to the United States on May 31, 1939, the sum of $1,000,000 and annually thereafter, until the full amount is paid, at least $1,000,000.

(b) Special (revolutionary) claims: At the beginning of this year, the Mexican Government paid to the United States Government the sum of $500,000 due on these claims. This and the four previous annual payments and interest were paid on the due dates.
(c) General claims: No final arrangement has been concluded for the payment of these claims. A statement regarding their present status is enclosed.

(d) Foreign debt and railway debts: The American interest in these debts is estimated to be approximately 20 percent of the total. It has long been the policy of this Government to regard such debts as primarily for negotiations and settlement between the foreign government and the bondholders or their representatives.

The Department has received no complaints of any new expro-

The Department has received no complaints of any new expropriation cases affecting American properties since the above-mentioned agreement of November 9-12, 1938.

May I, in conclusion, refer to the statement contained in your letter that "general confiscation of the property belonging to American citizens by the Government of Mexico, if tacitly approved by inaction on the part of our Government, may soon endanger the peace and welfare of this Nation, and may well result in international disorder, and thus create an incentive toward armed aggression."

From the facts above set forth I am sure you will acceed that

From the facts above set forth I am sure you will agree that there has been neither tacit approval on the part of this Government of the expropriation without compensation of American properties in Mexico by the Government of Mexico, nor any inaction on the part of this Government. On the contrary, this Government has both sedulously and consistently sought to further and to facilitate the settlement on the basis of just compensation of the many claims of United States citizens which have arisen as a result of policies pursued by the Government of Mexico during past weers. of policies pursued by the Government of Mexico during past years. In pursuing this policy this Government has made every endeavor to maintain close and friendly relations with the Government of Mexico, while at the same time making clear its conviction that lasting friendship between the two neighboring countries can only safeguarded through full respect on the part of each nation for the just rights of the other.

Sincerely yours,

SUMNER WELLES, Under Secretary.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for another question?

Mr. BRIDGES. Certainly.

Mr. LUCAS. Where is the uncertainty and the doubt in that letter about the mysterious note?

Mr. BRIDGES. I cannot see that any answer was made as to the mysterious note to which I referred in my statement.

Mr. LUCAS. Does not Mr. Welles practically advise the Senator that no such note was written from the State Department? That is the way I understood the letter.

Mr. BRIDGES. I have every reason to believe, from unimpeachable sources, that such a note was written.

Mr. LUCAS. That may be the Senator's opinion; but prior to the time the letter was read the Senator made the statement that he had written a communication to the Secretary of State and that the reply of Sumner Welles was very uncertain as to this particular mysterious note. The only point I am making is that I contend, from the language of that letter, that it is very, very certain; and I think, perhaps, the utter frankness of the manner in which Mr. Welles dealt with all the questions the Senator asked probably has the Senator a little uncertain.

Mr. BRIDGES. Not at all. The thing I should like to point out to the Senator from Illinois is that this letter was written early in February, I think, a long time ago; and the very able Under Secretary of State, Mr. Welles, was going to secure immediate action. To date the Mexican situation remains just about as it was.

Mr. President, we come to what has a very distinct bearing on the whole situation. This is a story of how, when these leftist political forces were moving in what they claimed to be the welfare of the under dog, there were other forces just as active.

Senators will recall that Mexico's great difficulty since the oil properties were seized has been to sell the oil. Stepping into the picture to help them, with a view solely to helping the under dog, I am satisfied, was a free-lance oil operator. W. R. Davis, of New York. I am informed that he has had a very colorful career in the oil business; but before I discuss him further I wish to insert in the RECORD a copy of the Logan Act of March 4, 1909. I quote:

SEC. 5 (Criminal Code). Criminal correspondence with foreign governments; redress of private injuries excepted: Every citizen of the United States, whether actually resident or abiding within the same, or in any place subject to the jurisdiction thereof, or in any foreign country, (who) without the permission or authority of the Government, directly or indirectly, commences or carries on any verbal or written correspondence or intercourse with any foreign government or any officer or agent or conduct of any foreign government or of any officer or agent thereof, in relation to any disputes or controversies with the United States, or to defeat the measures of the Government of the United States; and every person, being a citizen of or resident within the United States or in any place subject to the jurisdiction thereof, and not duly authorized, (who) counsels, advises, or assists in any such correspondence with such intent, shall be fined not more than $5,000 and imprisoned not more than 3 years.

I wish to read from an article by Marquis W. Childs in the St. Louis Post-Dispatch of June 10, 1939:

Negotiations between American oil companies and the Mexican Government over expropriated American properties have broken down, the Post-Dispatch has learned, and Mexico is understood to be entering into a series of new transactions with W. R. Davis, of New York, the independent oil operator who a year ago concluded a series of barter deals with Germany for Mexican oil.

Two transactions which Davis recently arranged are said to involve $10,000,000 and another, $8,000,000. The Mexican Government in return for oil in these amounts would receive refining machinery which it is hoped would enable the Mexicans greatly to increase their oil production. * * *

Reports have come from the State Department here that he has been negotiating the new transactions with apparently unlimited capital.

Behind the Davis deals is an extraordinary network of intrigue involving high political officials in Washington and Mexico City.

How much of this behind-the-scenes activity will ever become known is doubtful. But if and when the whole story of the fight for oil is revealed it will read like a Phillips Oppenheim thriller.

Davis is a man of mystery. A free-lance oil operator with interests scattered all over the world, spending much of his time in airplanes and in urgent discussions on the trans-Atlantic telephone, airplanes and in urgent discussions on the trans-Atlantic telephone, he is said to control a large refinery in Hamburg, Germany, and much of the oil from expropriated Mexican wells has gone there. But in part, at least, this has been shipped after refining, to the Scandinavian, Baltic, and Central European countries.

Just how much was involved in the original Mexican-German deals, engineered by Davis, has never been definitely known. In the first 3 months Mexico received, according to a reliable source, more than $5,000,000 in cash and bartered goods. Machinery, office equipment, and newsprint were taken from Germany in exchange for Mexican oil.

State Department officials believe that Germany is behind Davis' present activities in Mexico.

On June 15, 1939, Mr. Childs wrote another article in which he said:

W. R. Davis, the free-lance oil operator who put over barter deals with Germany for oil from expropriated American wells now held by the Mexican Government, had the aid and advice of powerful figures in the Washington scene, including Senator Joseph F. Guffer (D., Pa.), a member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, the Post-Dispatch has learned.

John L Lewis, head of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, also interested himself in the Davis deals to the extent of assuring organized labor in Mexico that Davis had the resources to move Mexican oil in the face of a seemingly world-wide blockade by British and American companies, it has been learned from authoritative sources.

Guffer said yesterday that his only interest in Davis was through Walter A. Jones, oil operator and politician of Pittsburgh, who was a heavy contributor to the Roosevelt campaign fund in both 1932 and 1936. Jones is still associated with Davis in the Mexican oil deals, he said last night.

in the Mexican oil deals, he said last night.

GUFFEY, himself formerly an oil operator, accompanied Jones on a hurried trip to Mexico City in 1937, nearly a year before expropriation of American and British oil properties. The Pennsylvania Senator introduced Jones, who was then engaged in laying the groundwork for deals that Davis later carried out, to various Mexican officials. Later Guffey, Jones, and Davis met in Jones' apartment at the Mayflower Hotel here with Eduardo Suarez, Mexican Minister of Finance, when the latter was on a visit to Washington.

What makes this so extraordinary is the fact that the State Department had given unofficial sanction to the efforts of Donald Richberg, Washington attorney, to negotiate a settlement be-tween American and British oil companies and the Mexican Government for the return of expropriated properties. These negotiations have come to a standstill and there is little hope they will be resumed.

State Department officials thoroughly disapprove of Davis, believing that he is operating with German capital. His barter deals will have a harmful effect on American trade, it is thought at the State Department.

"I interested myself at the request of Walter Jones," Guffer aid. "I would do anything to help Walter Jones. He contributed largely to the election of Franklin D. Roosevelt. I never really knew Davis, but I believe he is a man of great ability. I have not seen him for a year or more." Records of the Democratic National Committee show that Jones contributed $52,000 to the party in 1936. While records are not available for 1932, he is believed to have given a comparable sum in that year. An ardent New Deal Democrat, he has taken an active part in Pennsylvania politics in recent years. Former Governor George Earle made him chairman of the Pennsylvania Turnpike Commission building a superhighway across the State.

"I am still associated with Davis," Jones said on the long-distance telephone from his State office in Harrisburg. "I believe those people down there in Mexico should have a chance to sell their oil."

Those who champion Davis in Washington say that at least he

Those who champion Davis in Washington say that at least he has enabled the Mexican Government to get through the blockade which has been aimed at preventing the Mexicans from selling their oil in the world market. These same champions declare that Davis has concluded deals not only with Germany but with that Davis has concluded deals not only with Germany but with seven other countries in Europe, including even a "behind the door" deal with Great Britain, whose Royal Dutch Shell lost an enormous stake when the Mexican properties were taken over.

The State Department is skeptical of reports of such deals, believing that Davis' only important connection is with Germany. Davis is now in Mexico City working out details of new transactions which involve supplying the Mexican industry with refinery equipment to make it possible, the hope is, greatly to increase production.

John Lewis' interest in the Davis deal comes about through his relationship with the Mexican Confederation of Labor and the Mexican Oil Workers' Union, now operating the oil industry in Mexico. It is reported here, however, that Lewis gained his first knowledge of Davis and Jones through Guffer.

Last year Lewis attended a Pan-American Labor Congress organ-ted by Vincent Lombardo Toledano, head of the Mexican confederation.

He was impressed at that time, it is said, by the efforts of the Mexican Government to operate the oil industry in the face of the blockade by the great companies with their world-wide ramifica-tions. He was impressed, too, it is understood, by the resources which Davis could command for moving blockaded Mexican oil. Davis and his associates are said to have convinced Lewis that they could muster at least 30 tankers for transporting oil, this being an important factor, since the blockade is said to have extended to the use of oil-carrying vessels.

Doubtful that negotiations with the Mexican Government will ever be resumed, Richberg conferred Monday with Standard Oil executives in New York on the next step to be taken. Returning yesterday, he discussed the present impasse with Secretary Cordell Hull, it has been learned.

For the time being at least, it is believed, Richberg will make no open move, waiting to give the Mexican Government every possible opportunity to reopen the negotiations, although the dead line for a reply has long since passed.

I now read from an article in the New York Herald Tribune under date of June 16, 1939, as follows:

The impasse now apparent in the unofficial efforts of Donaid M. The impasse now apparent in the unofficial efforts of Donaid M. Richberg to negotiate a settlement between American and British oil companies and the Mexican Government for return of their expropriated properties was traced today to the aid and comfort given to W. R. Davis, free-lance oil operator, by a group here, including Senator Joseph F. Guffer, Democrat, of Pennsylvania. Among others named as having offered advice to Mr. Davis, who put over the recent barter deals with Germany for oil from expropriated American wells now held by the Cardenas government, was John L. Lewis, head of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, and Walter A. Jones, Pittsburgh oil operator and a heavy contributor to President Roosevelt's campaign fund in both 1932 and 1936. Senator Guffer, who said today that his only interest in the Senator Guffer, who said today that his only interest in the Davis ventures in Mexico was through Mr. Jones, accompanied the Pittsburgh oil operator on a trip to Mexico City in 1937, nearly a year before the expropriation of American and British oil properties. The Pennsylvania Senator introduced Mr. Jones, oil properties. The Pennsylvania Senator introduced Mr. Jones, who was engaged in laying the groundwork for the deal which Mr. Davis later carried out, to various Mexican officials. Later Senator Guffey met with Mr. Jones and Mr. Davis in the Jones apartment at the Mayflower Hotel here with Eduardo Saurez, Mexican Minister of Finance, when he was on a visit to Washington to consult the Treasury on its silver-buying policy.

Meanwhile, Mr. Lewis also interested himself in the Davis deals to the extent of assuring organized labor in Mexico that Mr. Davis had the resources to move oil out of Mexico in the face of a blockade which might be attempted by the American and British oil companies.

British oil companies.

Mr. Lewis' interest in the Davis deals comes about through his relationship with the Mexican Confederation of Labor and the Mexican Oil Workers Union, now operating the oil industry in Mexico. It is reported here, however, that he gained his first knowledge of Mr. Davis and Mr. Jones through Senator Guffer. Last year Mr. Lewis attended a Pan American Labor Congress, organized by Vincente Lombardo Toledano, head of the Mexican confederation, attended also by Edwin Smith, a member of the National Labor Relations Board.

Mr. Lewis was impressed at that time, it is said, by the efforts

Mr. Lewis was impressed at that time, it is said, by the efforts of the Mexican Government to operate the oil industry in the face of the blockade by the great companies, with their worldwide ramifications. He was impressed, too, it is understood, by the resources which Mr. Davis could command for moving blockaded Mexican oil.

Mr. NEELY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from New Hampshire yield to the Senator from West Virginia?

Mr. BRIDGES. Certainly.

Mr. NEELY. Mr. President, I inquire of the able Senator from New Hampshire whether he is of the opinion that the articles which he has read into the RECORD impute to the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. Guffey] any conduct or motive unworthy of a Senator or unbecoming a Member of this body?

Mr. BRIDGES. No. I am not impugning the motives of Senator Guffey. I am merely reading from certain articles. and I have been very careful, during the course of the speech I have been delivering, in no way personally to venture an opinion about the Senator from Pennsylvania. I have not personally mentioned his name; but I am reading into the RECORD articles which deal with this situation, which articles, I understand, mention Senator Guffey's name. I read them for what they may be worth.

Mr. NEELY. Mr. President, will the Senator further yield?

Mr. BRIDGES. Certainly.

Mr. NEELY. I understand that the Senator's charges, if such they be, were read from newspapers and that the Senator does not contend that they are based upon personal knowledge. But will not the Senator from New Hampshire state whether, in his opinion, those articles impute to Senator Guffey any conduct or motive unworthy of a Member of the Senate?

Mr. BRIDGES. No, sir. I am making no charges.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from New Hampshire yield to the Senator from Washington?

Mr. BRIDGES. I vield.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Just prior to his last discussion the Senator read an excerpt from the Logan Act. Does the Senator contend that there has been any violation of the Logan Act either by Mr. Davis or Mr. Jones or Senator Guffey?

Mr. BRIDGES. I will answer the Senator from Washington by saying that when the pending spending-and-lending bill is out of the way I propose to offer, if it shall then be in order, a resolution calling for a senatorial investigation of this whole situation; and I do not know, of course, whether or not the facts uncovered by such an investigation would be such as to call for action under the Logan Act. If I did I would not ask for it. I should inform the Senate. I do not know what an investigation may reveal.

I wish to say, in perfect frankness, to the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. Guffey], and in answer to the question of the Senator from West Virginia, that I am making no charges at all so far as Senator Guffey is concerned. I am giving a picture of the oil situation in Mexico and of our relationship with that country. Senator Guffey's name merely comes into some of the articles I have read.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield further?

Mr. BRIDGES. Certainly.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I will concede that any Member of this body has a perfect right to present matters which are of public interest, and that if, as a result of the presentation of them, the name of a Member of the body may become involved, possibly that is something that cannot be avoided. However, immediately before launching into that portion of his discussion which involved the Senator from Pennsylvania, the Senator from New Hampshire rather dramatically read from the Logan Act, which is a criminal statute, the violation of which, as I remember its reading, involves a fine of $5,000, a violation of which certainly would cast a reflection upon the name of any Member of this body or anyone else who might be connected with a transaction which violated the Logan Act.

So far as I have been able to see from what the Senator has read since quoting from the Logan Act, there is not a single, solitary thing which in any way involves a violation of the Logan Act. I think Members of this body, whether discussing other Members of the body or discussing politics or discussing matters of general interest, should have some degree of care when they undertake to charge persons with violation of the criminal statutes of the United States.

I never heard of any of these gentlemen except the Senator from Pennsylvania before the Senator from New Hampshire started reading; but if what he has read concerning them constitutes a violation of the Logan Act, then there is not a large corporation in the United States dealing with foreign governments which does not repeatedly and consistently violate the Logan Act. The Senator knows that there is not any violation of the Logan Act; and I call upon the Senator from New Hampshire upon this occasion, when he is attempting to bring into the discussion on the floor of the Senate the name of a Member of this body, to have some reflection upon his responsibility as a Member of the Senate of the United States.

When we take our oaths of office here, Mr. President, we change our status. Even though in the past we may have been simply careless scandalmongers, when we take our oaths of office we become representatives of the Government of the United States, and we have some responsibility to this Government and some responsibility to the people of the country. When a Senator, such as the Senator from New Hampshire, stands here and reads charges from newspapers and introduces those charges by reading from a criminal statute, and then is not able in the slightest particular to show a violation of the criminal statute, I say he is doing something which, while it may not be technically in violation of his oath as a Member of this body, certainly comes very close to a violation of that oath.

I call upon the Senator from New Hampshire, unless he has facts to show that the Senator from Pennsylvania and the other persons whom he is mentioning have violated the Logan Act, to eliminate now, openly and before this body. any portion of his remarks which may refer to a criminal statute. Common decency, common fairness, a common recognition of the responsibility we have as Members of the Senate of the United States, call upon him to do that very thing.

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, in answer to the Senator from Washington, let me say that I quoted from the Logan Act, the criminal statutes of 1909, for the reason that I wanted to emphasize to the Senate and the country the grave responsibility of in any way conniving with a foreign government or representatives of a foreign land in regard to such matters as are covered by that statute. I am making no charges, but I say that this is a grave situation. It is a weird story; and I say that it is worthy of an investigation by the United States Senate to ascertain whether or not the story is something besides weird.

I am making no charges against the Senator from Pennsylvania in any way, shape, or manner. 'The Senator's name merely came into the speech by way of the various articles I have read.

Mr. MINTON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from New Hampshire yield to the Senator from Indiana?

Mr. BRIDGES. Certainly.

Mr. MINTON. In view of the observations of the Senator from Washington [Mr. Schwellenbach] about the statements made by the Senator from New Hampshire IMr. BRIDGES I make the point of order that the Senator from New Hampshire is out of order under rule XIX, paragraph 2, which reads:

No Senator in debate shall, directly or indirectly, by any form of words, impute to another Senator or to other Senators any conduct or motive unworthy or unbecoming a Senator.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. LA FOLLETTE in the chair). The Chair would like to understand whether the Senator is making a point of order under paragraph 2 of rule XIX on the basis of which he invokes a ruling from the Chair as to whether or not the Senator from New Hampshire, in anything he has said, has violated that paragraph.

Mr. MINTON. That is the point on which I should like to have the Chair rule.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If that is the point of order, the Chair is ready to rule.

The Chair rules that, in the opinion of the present occupant of the chair, the Senator from New Hampshire has not himself in debate, directly or indirectly, by any form of words, imputed to another Senator any conduct or motive unworthy or unbecoming a Senator. Any references which the present occupant of the chair has heard to the Senator from Pennsylvania have been in connection with the Senator from New Hampshire's reading of newspaper articles. Therefore, the Chair believes the point of order is not well taken.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from New Hampshire yield to the Senator from South Carolina?

Mr. BRIDGES. I yield. Mr. BYRNES. I simply desire to ask whether it is the opinion of the Chair that a Senator may make statements reflecting upon another Senator and then say, "I do not make that charge, but they do say that that is said and it is true." May a Senator say, "I do not make the charge," and then proceed to say, "But they do say in the community," and proceed to make a statement reflecting upon the integrity of a Member of the Senate?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The present occupant of the chair would not care to make a ruling upon a hypothetical situation; but it is the view of the present occupant of the chair that paragraph 2 of rule XIX refers to remarks made by a Senator, and not to articles which he may be reading or other quotations which he may be making,

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Illinois will state it.

Mr. LUCAS. Does the present occupant of the chair hold that when a Senator reads from a newspaper article wherein a Senator is involved, that particular reference in a newspaper does not become his own words?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is the opinion of the present occupant of the chair, under the rule and the precedents.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from New Hampshire yield to the Senator from Tennessee?

Mr. BRIDGES. I do.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, the rule says-

No Senator in debate shall, directly or indirectly, by any form of words impute to another Senator or to other Senators any conduct or motive unworthy or unbecoming a Senator.

I have read from rule IX, on page 25. Newspaper articles may be read as a form of words to make an accusation or to impute conduct unworthy of a Senator. It seems to me that reading these articles imputes to a Senator unbecoming conduct. It does so just as effectively as if the Senator from New Hampshire had used his own words. I think the Chair is wrong; and I appeal from the ruling of the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is, Shall the ruling of the Chair stand as the judgment of the Senate?

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I did not hear the quotation; I was absent from the Chamber; but I merely wish to observe, if I may, that I do not believe the encirclement of words within quotations, from whatever source they may come, relieves them of their quality as imputing misconduct on the part of a Senator, if another Senator uses them and appropriates them to his own uses.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, if we are going to be called upon to vote upon the matter, we ought to have something specific. I ask those who make the point of order specify what it was that the Senator from New Hampshire stated which they regard as being in violation of the rule.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President, when I first started to discuss this matter it was not with the idea that any point of order would be made. I may say to the Senator from Idaho, however, that the point I made was this:

Immediately before reading these newspaper articles in which the name of the Senator from Pennsylvania was mentioned, the Senator from New Hampshire read an excerpt from the Logan Act, a criminal statute. He then read some newspaper articles about certain activities which the articles alleged had been carried on by Mr. Davis, Mr. Jones, and the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. Guffey]. My contention was that since the Senator from New Hampshire immediately prior to that time had very definitely empasized the Logan Act, no other inference could be drawn but that, taking the two together, the Senator from New Hampshire was charging the Senator from Pennsylvania with violation of a criminal statute.

My objection was that, so far as I have been able to see, no statement was made in the articles from which he read, which would constitute a violation of the Logan Act. Therefore, I look upon it as an unwarranted injection of an excerpt from a criminal statute for the purpose of attempting to reflect upon a Member of this body.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, I heard the first statement of the able Senator from Washington, and I quite agree with the views which he expressed as to the responsibility which rests upon a Senator in making charges, directly or indirectly, against a colleague. He ought to be sure that he is speaking facts. But it does seem to me that this still is a very vague proposition. It is true that the Senator read a criminal statute. I am familiar with that criminal statute. On one occasion I myself was considered as having violated it. I regard it as a criminal statute, although its history is not such as to cause one to regard it as very serious. But this matter is too vague to warrant the invocation of a rule. We certainly are not prevented from reading criminal statutes, and we certainly are not prevented from reading from a newspaper which does not reflect upon a Senator. It is conceded that the reading of the newspaper does not in any sense bring the matter under the Logan Act. So, as it appears now, it has not been brought within the Logan Act by anything the Senator has said.

Mr. NEELY. Mr. President, will the Senator from New Hampshire yield?

Mr. BRIDGES. I yield.

Mr. NEELY. If the newspaper articles which the Senator from New Hampshire has read are true, the distinguished persons to whom they refer are probably subject to the penalties specified in the statute.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, we are certainly not going to take the position that a Senator cannot stand upon this floor and discuss matters of a serious nature without being charged with attacking a Senator, when the discussion in no sense charges any misconduct upon the part of the Senator himself.

Mr. GUFFEY. Mr. President, I hope the ruling of the Presiding Officer will be sustained. There is nothing the Senator from New Hampshire has read in this article to which I object. I want all the facts brought out. If he has any additional facts, let him bring them out as well. I sincerely hope that, if put to a vote, the decision of the Presiding Officer of the Senate will be sustained. I have nothing to conceal.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, under those circumstances, if the Senator from New Hampshire will yield to me, I withdraw the appeal.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the appeal is withdrawn.

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, I read further from the article in the Herald Tribune:

Mr. Davis and his associates are said to have convinced Mr. Lewis that they could muster at least 30 tankers for transporting oil, this being an important factor, since the blockade is said to have extended to the use of oil-carrying vessels. What makes the disclosures so extraordinary here and a source of embarrassment to the Department of State is the fact that the Department gave unofficial sanction to the efforts of Mr. Richberg to effect a settlement, a procedure the American oil companies assented to with considerable reluctance.

Doubtful that negotiations with the Mexican Government would ever be resumed, Mr. Richberg conferred on Monday with Standard Oil officials in New York on the next step to be taken. Back in Washington, he discussed the present impasse with Cordell Hull, Secretary of State, it has been learned. For the time being, at least, it is believed, Mr. Richberg will make no open move, waiting to give the Mexican Government every possible opportunity to reopen the negotiations, although the dead line for a reply has long since passed.

State Department officials are said to disapprove of Mr. Davis,

State Department officials are said to disapprove of Mr. Davis, believing that he is operating with German capital and that his barter deals will have a harmful effect on American trade.

"I interested myself at the request of Walter Jones," Senator Guffer said. "I would do anything to help Walter Jones. He contributed largely to the election of Franklin D. Roosevelt. I never really knew Mr. Davis, but I believe he is a man of great ability. I have not seen him for a year or more."

Those who championed Mr. Davis in Washington say that at least he has enabled the Mexican Government to get through the blockade aimed at preventing the Mexicans from selling their oil in the world market. They further declare that Mr. Davis has concluded deals not only with Germany but with seven other countries in world market. They further declare that Mr. Davis has concluded deals not only with Germany but with seven other countries in Europe, including even a "behind the door" deal with Great Britain, whose Royal Dutch Shell lost an enormous stake in the Mexican properties taken over. State Department officials, however, are skeptical of reports of such deals.

Similar stories, which I shall not burden the Senate with, appeared in the Pittsburgh Post Gazette and the Philadelphia Enquirer.

Now, Mr. President, I want to show another effect of this sort of good-neighbor dealing. I quote from an article from Mexico City in the Christian Science Monitor under date of April 26, 1939. It says that virtual monopoly of Mexico's rayon imports has been given to Italy with the signing of a contract for the barter of $2,500,000 in oil in exchange for rayon and machinery. The article says that this is the second large barter arranged with Italy, the first having been for $3,000,000 in oil in exchange for four oil tankers. This article says that the United States rayon exports to Mexico are not affected, since we send in a special kind of yarn which cannot be duplicated elsewhere. The article continues:

These machinery exports will, however, affect United States exports to Mexico, it is expected, with a further displacement of United States machinery which has been so heavily hit by the barters for German machinery.

The conclusion of the Italian contract marks one more blow at United States business in Mexico, which has lost consistently since barter for oil supplanted normal trade relations, following the oil expropriations. The sum of $34,000,000 has been lost through the contracts of the William R. Davis Co. alone, with this firm supplying machinery and equipment for that amount from Germany and the Scandinavian countries in exchange for Mexican oil.

Under the heading "Germany profiting by Mexico's 'double deal," the following article by Mr. H. R. Knickerbocker appeared in the Lawrence (Mass.) Tribune on February 7, 1939:

The United States is taking a double beating in Mexico after having turned one cheek to the blow of oil expropriation. Uncle Sam is now receiving in the loss of trade an even more vigorous salute to the good-neighbor policy on the other cheek. Chief profiteer from the "double deal" is Germany.

Latest statistics show that we are losing a minimum of $20,000,000 a year of sales to Mexico as a direct result of expropriation of the American oil properties.

I could go on, Mr. President, giving examples of our loss of trade without end.

Sometime ago the State Department announced proudly that an agreement had been concluded with Mexico concerning agrarian claims, some of which had been pending for Under this agreement this Government is to many years. receive $1,000,000 annually. Hopes were held out that this settlement augured well for the settlement of the oil dispute. Then it developed that the $1,000,000 which Mexico is to pay us is to be taken from American owners of mineral properties in Mexico.

I think the whole story is made more amazing when we consider that through our purchase of $216,000,000 of Mexican silver, for which we have no earthly use, and which I and my Republican colleagues fought against the President's tenacious opposition, to stop-through this subsidy the Mexican Government is maintained.

Now, I want to hark back to Mr. Jones' heavy campaign contributions to the New Deal. There is good reason to believe that they have far exceed the $52,000 mentioned in the articles from which I have quoted. We all know that there has been considerable question as to where the C. I. O. and the Non-Partisan Labor League get their ample funds for other than straight unionization activities.

I think we should have an investigation of this amazing phase of the New Deal with two of its main subsidiaries, the C. I. O. and the Non-Partisan Labor League.

We are supposed to be against Germany—for Mexico. They work together against us and campaign funds from one of the principals of the intrigue flow back to the New Deal. It is a weird story—let us get at the bottom of it.

Mr. President, various Senators today have raised the question of the propriety of the remarks which I have made. The Senator from West Virginia [Mr. Neely] very properly asked me whether anything I said was intended to impugn the character or standing of the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. Guffey]. My answer to that is "no."

Mr. NEELY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BRIDGES. Certainly.

Mr. NEELY. The Senator has not accurately quoted my inquiry, although I am certain that he has not intentionally erred. I asked the Senator whether, in his opinion, the newspaper articles which he read, imputed to the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. Guffey] any conduct unbecoming a Member of the Senate?

Mr. BRIDGES. I think that the articles merely told a story, that they made no charges involving the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. Guffey]. They merely told the story of the whole Mexican situation.

Mr. NEELY. Mr. President, will the Senator further yield?

Mr. BRIDGES. Certainly.

Mr. NEELY. In anticipation of the ruling which the Chair has made, I endeavored to obtain from the Senator from New Hampshire his interpretation of newspaper articles in question in order to establish a foundation upon which a point of order against the improper imputations which they contain might be sustained.

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, I think the whole Mexican deal, as I have stated, is a weird story, it is an amazing story, and I believe that the Senate of the United States or the Congress of the United States should get to the bottom of the story. I make no charge today against anyone; I am merely reciting the facts, and giving the Senate a picture of this amazing intrigue, this amazing story, which can be easily gathered by any Senator. The only reference to the Senator from Pennsylvania I made was quoted from the public press of the country. I made no individual reference to him, and I in no way reflect on the Senator from Pennsylvania. As I have stated, his name inadvertently came in some of the press articles which I quoted. But I do impress upon the Senate with all the force at my command the seriousness of the whole Mexican situation.

Mr. President, last fall I made a trip to South America and I found in many of the South American countries that as the result of our weak-kneed attitude toward Mexico we were held in contempt by many in those countries. I believe that good feeling and good neighborliness cannot be promoted by our attitude toward Mexico in dealing with the Mexican situation, with our Government sitting still and allowing property of American citizens and American companies and American corporations to be seized without an excuse, and on the other hand continuing to subsidize the Mexican Government which is doing all this, by the purchase of silver. A majority of the Members of this body voted last evening to continue the purchase of foreign silver. Mr. President, I say that this is a subject which should be investigated. When the lending-spending bill shall have been disposed of I propose to offer a resolution for an investigation of the entire Mexican-American relationship.

Mr. GUFFEY. Mr. President, about 2 months ago Marquis Childs, an accredited correspondent of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, came to my office and asked me about a trip which I had made to Mexico in May 1937. I gave him all the facts. I told him with whom I had gone to Mexico and whom I met there. My reason for going to Mexico, I told him, was that from the summer of 1918 until the middle of the year 1921 I had been active in the oil business in Mexico, and was familiar with many of the conditions there, and knew many persons in the oil business in Mexico.

So I accompanied my friend Mr. Jones, studied the situation, and gave him my opinion.

When Mr. Childs sent that story to the St. Louis Post-Dispatch he sent a story which was 100-percent false, and it was a malicious, character-destroying lie. I have been in the public service for 40 years, and have dealt with newspaper representatives almost daily during that time, either as a Government official in Pittsburgh or as the general manager of a public-utility corporation, or later in business for myself, and in public life, and I wish to say that this is the first time, with all the press representatives I have met, that I ever had one write such a malicious, character-destroying story about me.

Mr. President, I never met Mr. Childs before that, nor have I seen him since, but I am sure he received other compensation for sending that story out than that which he receives from his regular employer.

Ruth Shelton has an article in the Saturday Evening Post of this week, a rehash and write-up of the same story. Miss Shelton spent some months in Mexico recently as a guest of the English and American oil companies, and I have no doubt she wrote the same story for the same reason that Mr. Childs did.

Had the senior Senator from New Hampshire asked me a question as a matter of courtesy due one Senator to another, I would have given him a copy of the reply I issued to the Philadelphia Bulletin and other Pennsylvania papers when I was in Erie, Pa., the morning after the story appeared. I should have furnished it to him had he extended me the courtesy of asking me about it.

I hope and I believe that time will demonstrate that the senior Senator from New Hampshire did not read his prepared speech on the floor of the Senate for the same reason these other people sent the story to their newspapers.

I thank the Senate.

ACCEPTANCE OF EASEMENT WITH RESPECT TO LANDS IN NEW MEXICO—CONFERENCE REPORT.

Mr. HATCH submitted the following report:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the House to the bill (S. 1558) to provide for the acceptance of an easement with respect to certain lands in New Mexico, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its amendment numbered 2.

That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House numbered 4, and agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 1: That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House numbered 1, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the House amendment insert the following: "Commissioner of Work Projects"; and the House agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 3: That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House numbered 3, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the House amendment insert the following: "Commissioner of Work Projects"; and the House agree to the same.

The report was agreed to.

PROGRAM FOR FINANCING RECOVERABLE EXPENDITURES

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (S. 2864) to provide for the financing of a program of recoverable expenditures, and for other purposes.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, I offer an amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will state that an amendment is pending. The question is on the amendment offered by the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. O'Mahoney], as modified.

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, let the amendment be reported to the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be read by the clerk for the information of the Senate.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 4, line 17, after "Act", it is proposed to insert a colon and the following: "Provided, That in order that the competitive system of private enterprise for profit shall be maintained and encouraged, loans under this subsection shall be so administered as not to promote any undertaking in a field now adequately supplied by existing competitive private enterprise or by existing noncompetitive private enterprise at reasonable rates or prices, unless in the latter case a reasonable offer is made to acquire the facilities of such noncompetitive enterprise and such offer has not been accepted, and a finding as to both the reasonableness of said offer and also as to the failure of acceptance has been made after public hearing by the Public Works Commissioner."

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, the adoption of this amendment for practical purposes will make it impossible for any municipality in the United States to get any assistance under the provisions of the pending measure toward the construction of a municipal light plant. From what many Senators with whom I have talked have said I believe the amendment will probably be adopted. In what I shall now say, Mr. President, I will, as nearly as I can, express plainly my belief and my judgment as to what will happen if the amendment is adopted, without any idea of impugning the motives of any Senator who supports the amendment, or of the Senator who offered it.

Mr. President, I think when it comes to loaning money or offering any financial assistance to municipalities for the construction of municipal electric-light plants, the municipalities should determine for themselves, under the State law, whether they wish to build or construct such municipal light plants, and their decision should be final.

If they decide they do not wish to build such plants, we should not in any way try to exert influence to induce them to do so. On the other hand, if they decide that they want to go into the business of generating and distributing electricity in their municipalities, we should keep our hands off. I go on the theory and the belief that the municipality should decide for itself whether it shall enter the electric-light business; and if it decides to do so, then it should not be circumscribed or hindered by any Federal statute. I think the language of this amendment will for practical purposes absolutely prohibit them from getting any benefit under the bill.

Why do municipalities go into the generation and distribution of electricity to their citizens? Not because they want to go into the business. What has been the history with respect to public utilities in the United States? What have municipalities which were supplied by a private corporation done before they have gone into the generation and distribution of electricity on their own part? The story is known to every Senator and to every citizen. The municipality goes to the private company which is supplying it with electricity and on bended knee begs the corporation to reduce its rates. The municipality feels that the rates are too high. The municipality never thinks of building a municipal plant except as a last resort. Does any Senator suppose that a municipality would not rather buy the private plant than to put in a competing system? Does any Senator believe that a municipality would gladly go into business knowing that it had to compete with a powerful corporation, a monopoly, the arms of which extend from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and from the Great Lakes to the Gulf? It seems to me it is foolish to think that municipalities want to go into that kind of a battle. They never do enter into such a struggle until they have exhausted every honorable means to obtain what they believe to be fair rates.

Mr. President, the people must be the judges. The responsibility is on them. The courts have held without exception that the people have a right to enter that business if they wish to do so. They may go in or stay out; that is their business. So, the right to enter the business cannot be questioned. Universally the courts have held that the fact that a private company is to have competition from a municipal plant is no defense whatever on the part of the private company unless it has an exclusive franchise, and in that case the municipal plant could not compete with a private company. The day of grace of the municipality would be signed away.

A private corporation has no legal right whatever to say that a municipality should not construct an electric-light plant on the ground that it would compete with the plant of the private company.

When the people decide, vote the bonds, and make application for Federal assistance, they are always glad if they can buy the existing system at a reasonable price. It is to their financial advantage to do so. As a rule they pay more than the private system is worth. Whenever I have been consulted about such matters I have always said that I would pay more than it is worth, because I know what is ahead. There is a line of litigation extending from the municipality to the Supreme Court of the United States if it is possible to get there—and nearly always it is. Injunctions galore will be started, and a long chain of litigation will be commenced.

We all know the history of such things. As a rule injunction proceedings start the day after the people have decided to put in a municipal plant. It is often true—I think it is so apparent that no one will dispute it—that litigation is commenced when the corporations which commence it know that they are going to be defeated in the end. They want delay. They want to make expense for the municipality.

What happens? An ordinary municipality is worn out in the courts. It is carried from one court to another, always running the risk that somewhere in the proceeding as the case goes up there will be some error and that an appellate court may set aside a previous decision. The municipality always runs that risk. It often happens that a decision is set aside on some technicality, and the municipality has to go back and have another election and commence over again. Municipalities know that weary path. A municipality does not often start the construction of a municipally owned plant because it knows it will have to go through long and tedious litigation which will probably wear it out in the end; and often it submits to injustices and to unreasonable rates rather than start a chain of litigation which may last for years.

Somewhere in the record is a report made by myself on a bill which was pending, which shows the delay. The case to which I refer was not the case of an electric-light plant, but of a gas plant. The regular officials of the State, up to the State supreme court, passed upon the application. They settled the question; and the State supreme court unanimously said that the municipality was right. Afterward a rehearing was granted, and the question was again passed upon in the State supreme court. Again the court said the municipality was right.

Later, before the local court which had originally passed upon the question could take up the mandate coming from the State supreme court, the private company dismissed its case and commenced a case in the Federal court. The municipality took the ground that since the question had gone to the State supreme court and had been passed upon there, the company had no standing in the Federal court. That question went to the Supreme Court of the United States; and the Supreme Court said that the municipality had no right to object, because the original suit had been dismissed, and it upheld the jurisdiction of the Federal district court.

Then the case went back again, because it was reversed on a technicality, and it came up in the Federal district court. After long and expensive litigation, after several thousand dollars had been spent employing technicians to appraise the value of the property and go through all the necessary formalities, the case was set aside and new appraisals had to be obtained. Specialists were employed, and the case was again tried. It was appealed to the circuit court of appeals, and from there to the Supreme Court. The Supreme Court rendered final judgment in favor of the municipality. The case came back the last time 7 years after it had been commenced.

What happened then? Instead of obeying the mandate of the Supreme Court the company made a showing in the lower court that so much time had elapsed that conditions were altogether different. There might have been something in that argument. Seven years bring about great changes. What was a reasonable rate when the litigation was first started might not then be a reasonable rate.

That case illustrates what happens to municipalities when they are taken into court. In the pending amendment, no matter what the municipality has decided, no matter how unreasonable have been the rates charged to the citizens of the municipality, it is proposed that a Federal official hold a hearing. He must pass upon the reasonableness of the rates which are objected to. He must pass upon all the questions involved after a public hearing. It may be that it has been decided by the State authorities, or even by the courts of the State, that the rates are unreasonable. That does not make any difference. A Federal official must conduct a public hearing and pass upon the question as to whether or not the rates are reasonable.

Then come the injunctions again. Who is going to decide what is reasonable? It may be that the proper officials have already determined the question. That does not make any difference. The Federal Commissioner must pass upon the question after a public hearing. All kinds of evidence will be offered. Evidence will be brought in by the private corporation which will fill volumes. The public hearing will involve great expense. Then, after the public hearing, the Commissioner is to decide what is reasonable, regardless of anything which may have previously happened.

Mr. President, it seems to me the people of a municipality should be supreme in deciding whether or not they want to go into the business. It is their business. It involves the people of the municipality, and if the people start in the business their property will be involved.

That ought to determine it.

Mr. President, if this amendment is agreed to, the specter of delay and expense will stare every municipality in the face, so that, before they commence, they will say, "We had better suffer wrongs and ills than enter upon litigation, the end of which it takes the imagination to conceive." That is what is going to happen if we adopt this amendment.

Mr. President, what has been the history? Are the municipalities hunting around for a big or small monopoly that they want to slap in the face or injure? We all know what the history has been. That has not happened in the past. There has not been any abuse on the part of municipalities. I could cite many cases that are pending right now, if I wanted to take the time, of the people of municipalities voting 4 to 1 for municipal distributing plants. In the municipality there was a plant owned by a private party—owned by a private corporation-a foreign corporation, controlled in Wall Street, for, by going through several holding companies, that is where the control would be found. The municipality wanted to buy the private plant and took up the question with the local manager. I have in my office copies of correspondence showing that the municipality's proper officials who had in charge the construction of a distributing plant, which had been decided on by the voters by a vote of 4 to 1, asked the manager of the private plant to sit down with them at the table and see if they could not reach an agreement by which they would buy the existing distributing plant. The answer was, "We see no advantage in doing anything of that kind; we have nothing to say." So they took it up with the holding company in New York City and said, "Our people have voted to put in a distributing plant and the local manager of your subsidiary corporation in the municipality refuses even to talk it over with us. Rather than put in a competing plant, we want to buy the existing plant. Can we meet him and see if we cannot reach a price that will be agreeable to both sides?" The answer from that magnate in Wall Street was, "I know what you have tried to do with the operating company, and I believe they did just what was proper; I will have no consultation with you; I will not meet with you around the table." Where was that municipality left? They had, under the mandate of the people, to construct a distributing plant. That is what usually follows; that is what has been going on in the past. Nobody has been injured by the municipalities. They have leaned backward, and nine times out of ten have paid the private company, or offered to pay it, more than its distributing plant was worth.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. NORRIS. I yield to the Senator from Tennessee.

Mr. McKELLAR. The Senator has described exactly what took place in my home city of Memphis, except that the vote there was 17 to 1 in favor of a municipally owned plant.

Mr. NORRIS. The municipality of which I was speaking was not Memphis; I did not have any reference to Memphis; but I thank the Senator for his contribution.

Mr. HILL. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. NORRIS. I yield to the Senator from Alabama.

Mr. HILL. Of course, there are many other cases as well as the case at Memphis that might be cited. Is not that true?

Mr. NORRIS. Oh, yes; there are many of them.

Mr. HILL. There is a case in Bessemer, Ala., where a project has been held up for nearly 6 years by one injunction suit after another.

Is it not true, also, that the dictates of common sense and of business judgment require really that the municipality, first, if there be any way possible, purchase the existing publicutility distributing system? Is it not true that every dictate of common sense suggests that they try to do that?

Mr. NORRIS. Certainly, it is to the interest of both sides to do that.

Mr. HILL. It is to the interest of both sides.

Mr. NORRIS. And the litigation should be avoided; the municipality wants to avoid it.

Mr. HILL. It is to every interest of the municipality, if possible, to avoid it.

I should like to call the Senator's attention to the fact with which I am sure he is familiar-but I want the Senate to realize it—that the amendment has been modified since it was submitted and printed by putting in it, as the Senator knows, a provision that a public official will not only have to pass on the question of the reasonableness of the offer but will also have to pass on the question as to whether or not the offer has been refused or accepted. The private power company will say, "We have not rejected this offer; we have not turned it down; we are considering it; but our auditors have got to investigate the books; they have got to make a study. This is a very important matter; it involves much money and many technical questions. We have got to have our engineers go through this matter; our economists have to study it." Heaven only knows how long a time it would take before there was an acceptance or refusal of the offer. Thus there would be another invitation for inordinate delay. Is not that true?

Mr. NORRIS. That is correct. I do not have the amendment before me, but, as I remember reading it, it provides also that the Federal Administrator or Commissioner or whatever he may be called must pass on the question as to whether the rates charged by the private company are reasonable or otherwise.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. NORRIS. I yield.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Such a provision is not in the amendment.

Mr. NORRIS. Then I withdraw that statement; I was speaking from memory; but that provision is, the Senator has said, eliminated from the amendment.

Why should not the people of a municipality decide what they want to do? Why incur all this delay which will mean the defeat of the project in the end?

Senators, there has been no complaint, so far as I know, that municipalities have been unjust. The history of such matters, running back 20 years, does not so show. I have not in mind a single instance of a municipality trying to rob a private corporation of its property. Municipalities do not want to go into the business. I never would advise any municipality to go in the business if its citizens were getting rates that were fair. But the Commissioner or Administrator ought not to pass on the reasonableness of anything connected with such a transaction. That should be up to the municipality. They have a right to act. If they make a mistake, they lose; if they are wrong, they lose. It is their property; it is their municipality; it is their business.

Mr. President, under the old P. W. A. a great many cases of this kind came up. For instance, I remember one at Jacksonville, Ill., a city, as I remember, of some 30,000 population. First, they went to a private company and, practically on bended knees, begged the private company to give them relief from high rates. The company refused to do anything; it would not give the municipality any consideration; and, as a last resort, there was circulated a petition calling for an election on the question of constructing a private plant or buying out the existing one. That was contested in a campaign extending over weeks. I know something about what took place in that campaign. The private company spent all kinds of money; the municipality did everything it could, although it did not have money to equal that of the private power company. The question was argued before the people and an election was held. I have forgotten the vote, but it was overwhelmingly in favor of the municipal plant. Then, what happened? The next day there came an injunction from the Federal court. Proceedings were started the very next day and the municipality was prohibited under that injunction from doing anything.

I never followed the case through; I do not know what happened in that particular instance; but it was the old story over again. Nobody wanted to rob the private company of their property. But now we are proposing to nullify any action taken by a municipality; we are proposing, under the guise of protecting property that does not need any protection, God knows, to set up a commissioner to pass on whether the municipality, if it desires to secure any Federal assistance under this bill, has a right to take action.

It seems to me it is unjust; it is uncalled for, as I see it, and there is no reason for it. If the amendment is intended to apply to other things, such as the Government going into business, starting some new industry, or anything of that kind, nobody, as far as I know, wants it to do that. I do not want that to be done; I do not want the Government to go into the manufacturing business, and it ought not to do so, in my judgment. But here is a municipality that has a right to say, "We want to construct a municipal plant"no one questions that right-"we are dissatisfied; we do not want to destroy our competitor's property; we want to buy it if we can, and we will buy it if we can agree on a price." I have followed many such disputes through, I have followed hundreds of them, and I want to say to the Senator that I have never found a single instance where a municipality, so far as I could see, wanted to interfere with or detract from any private industry. They were looking after their own interests; they were dissatisfied with the prices they had to pay; but never did they want to rob the private company; always, according to my recollection, they wanted to buy it out, if they could.

So far as my advice is concerned—and it has been sought in hundreds of cases all over the United States-I have always said, "You can afford to pay something more than the private company is worth, and I advise you to do it, because if you do not, God only knows when you are going to get through litigating; God only knows where the end of the destructive path is going to lead. Nine times out of ten the private companies do not expect to win their suits; they merely want to wear you out; they want to delay; they want to increase expense; they want to discourage you and then compel you to go back to the monopoly you always have had."

There is not anything in the history of the investigation by the Federal Trade Commission, which extended over several years, that ever showed an instance in which a municipality was trying to rob a private power company. These electric utilities, constituting one of the greatest monopolies under our flag, try to make us believe and try to make the country believe that they are suffering, that they have been abused, that the malicious municipalities have tried to build systems competing with them. We know that is their story; and we know, taking the country as a whole, so far as the Federal Trade Commission is concerned, that the water and the air in their capitalization was, as I remember now, nearly $2,000,000,000. I am not referring to any particular locality; but in all the research I have ever made I have never yet found one of these great power companies that did not have a great deal of illegal capitalization.

I will give an illustration. Down in Knoxville, Tenn., now supplied with power by the T. V. A., I remember that at one time the private corporation supplying Knoxville with electricity closed their books one night, and next morning when they woke up and started a new day's work their capitalization was arbitrarily increased on the books to the extent of $5,000,000-$5,000,000! It is the same old story. The same thing happened in my State, where the Nebraska Power Co.—supposed to be a Nebraska corporation, but as a matter of fact incorporated in Maine, owned by the American Water Works Co., they in turn being owned by the Electric Bond & Share Co. of Wall Street, three corporations—manipulated their books years ago in a way by which the capitalization was increased, by which they borrowed millions of dollars in the New York market when they did not need any money, by which they borrowed more money before their debt was due when they needed nothing, canceled the debt, made a new loan at an increased rate of interest, and paid off the old one with interest, always bringing the burden home at last to the consumers, or to the investors who furnished the money. They are the only two sources of income this great monopoly has-the people who pay for electricity in the homes, the factories, and the business houses, and the widows and orphans who have money to invest. The electric utilities rob them both. They rob them both ways. It is the story that has run through the investigations of the Federal Trade Commission all over the United States.

If I wanted to take the time, I could take the Congres-SIONAL RECORD and point out where those stealings and losses in almost every State of the Union have been put into the RECORD, I could show that the citizen of the ordinary municipality, if he wants to find out who owns the little bulb that gives him light, will have to go through three or four States. He will find that this company is owned by that company, and that company is owned by another company, and that one is owned by still another company, perhaps half-way across the United States, and usually he winds up in Wall Street, New York, where the parent company on a pyramid has built up a number of corporations that stagger the imagination, the machinery of all of which must be oiled by the little man in the little home who buys electricity, the housewife who uses it in her kitchen, the washerwoman who uses it to run her washing machine, and the other people who have money to invest, investing in one or more of these corporations that go from the operating company up to the top holding company.

I put on the wall here, during the consideration of the Holding Company Act, charts which showed how these things went up in the cases of almost all the prominent utility companies of the United States. In my imagination I can see one of them now, over on the wall, in which there were 13 steps between the corporation that actually made the electricity and the top holding company that controlled it. Mr. President, in my humble opinion, that is the kind of institution that this amendment is going to help, and it is the only place where the amendment is going to help any-

So far as electricity is concerned, the amendment ought to be defeated. It has no place in the pending bill; and I state it as my opinion that if the amendment is put in the bill it will mean that practically no assistance will come to any municipality anywhere in the United States by virtue of this proposal.

Mr. HILL. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. LA FOLLETTE in the chair). Does the Senator from Nebraska yield to the Senator from Alabama?

Mr. NORRIS. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. HILL. The Senator doubtless will recall that when the bill creating the Tennessee Valley Authority passed the House of Representatives, it had in it a provision very similar to the provision set out in this amendment, requiring that before the Tennessee Valley Authority could construct a transmission line it had to negotiate and endeavor to purchase the then existing transmission lines. I recall that in the conference committee the Senator from Nebraska stood out against any such provision, and fortunately was victorious in his efforts to keep the provision out of the Tennessee Valley Authority Act.

In the light of all that has transpired, all that we now know of the steps that have been taken by the power companies to defeat the Tennessee Valley Authority and to defeat municipal distribution of power, does not the Senator believe that if he had been unsuccessful, and if that provision had gone into that act, it would have been practically fatal so far as establishment or operation of the Tennessee Valley Authority is concerned?

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, I think that is a proper question. In my humble judgment the Tennessee Valley Authority would have been a colossal failure just because of that little thing. Even without it, the road of litigation going back and forth from the courts of Tennessee and Alabama to the Supreme Court is literally littered with money that the T. V. A. had to spend and with losses they sustained because of injunctions. The T. V. A. won their cases in the end in the Supreme Court; but, nevertheless, the delay would have amounted to millions of dollars, and the delay suffered by the municipalities that were unable to get electricity by virtue of injunctions would have amounted to millions of dollars more.

As I remember the history of the language to which the Senator from Alabama has referred, it is a little different from that to which I referred. The amendment was offered right here in the Senate to require what the Senator from Alabama has stated. I then said in the debate, "If you put in this amendment, you will have stabbed the entire thing to death." All the various methods of obstruction, of delay, of expense, would come in if we had to negotiate to buy, if that provision were put in the law.

As a matter of fact, the municipalities always do negotiate to buy. Every municipality has tried to buy instead of building; but the law does not require them to do so. If it did, and if it prescribed the modus operandi that they had to pursue, as this amendment does, we would give to all the private power companies as a matter of law the right to go into any case and every case, and they could always allege that the finding was wrong, was unreasonable. Any good lawyer can make a good case on paper. Secretary Ickes will tell you that he has always required, if any question was raised, that the municipality should first offer to the private utility there in existence a fair price for its property, if the law required that to be done. Then an injunction would come in under the law, and whatever was offered would be alleged to be unfair; whatever was said would be controverted. Whatever the commissioner's finding, they would allege he was corrupt, that his findings were wrong, that he did not know what he was ta'king about. They would say immediately, "He is not an expert." Yet he is the man set up by this very amendment to pass on the matter. He will have to listen to experts; he will have to hold the public hearings in every case; and God only knows how long they will last and what measures will be resorted to by the power companies and their shrewd attorneys to delay the matter, and to get error into it, to get something in it on which they may hang an injunction suit.

So we have been going on, paying them more than they are worth, as the Senator from Alabama suggests. Congress passed a law to permit the T. V. A. to carry out an agreement with the private companies, which is not yet perfected, because we delayed the legislation until the time had expired under the tentative contract. They have made another contract, the same as the old one, and I tell Senators, as, I think, I stated it when the bill was before us, that not only is the T. V. A. doing the fair thing by the private power companies in the purchase of their property, but, in my honest judgment, it is paying $10,000,000 more than the property is worth. I put it up to the T. V. A. experts, and they have admitted that they are paying more than it is worth. I think they should be paying more than it is worth. The press generally has said they made a very liberal contract with the private companies.

Mr. President, there is no danger that municipalities are hunting around the dark corners to try to steal from these great corporations, or illegally to take their property away. There has not been any such thing. There is no history that would warrant this amendment. I think that if there is desire that the municipalities shall get any benefit, this amendment must be defeated, or they will not be able to take advantage of anything in the pending measure.

Mr. MINTON. Mr. President, I agree entirely with what the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. Norris] has just said about the implications of the amendment. I think it cannot be doubted that if this amendment is agreed to, it will make it extremely difficult, if not impossible, for municipalities to erect electric-light plants and distributing systems in the municipalities.

I know that the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. O'Mahoney] does not sponsor this amendment in order to accomplish that purpose; I know that the Senator from Wyoming did not offer the amendment in order to aid the cause of those who are opposed to municipal utilities; but, in my judgment, the enactment of the amendment would have that effect.

In speaking in support of the amendment this morning, the distinguished Senator from Wyoming spoke with great force and eloquence about private enterprise, and the Senator from Utah [Mr. King] spoke about those who wanted to turn the country over to the Socialists. I know that there is no one in this Chamber who wants to turn this country over to state socialism, and I know that we are all interested. as the Senator from Wyoming is interested, in maintaining private enterprise. But we cannot overlook the fact that there happens all too often in this country the thing the Senator from Nebraska has so clearly pointed out, that private enterprise encroaches upon the rights of private citizens, and that private citizens are entitled to be protected from the buccaneers in private enterprise. That is all we seek to do when we authorize a municipality to erect and maintain a municipal light plant and distribution system.

So, Mr. President, this amendment, as I see it, would have the effect of putting a limitation upon the power the Supreme Court has said in its recent cases municipalities have in the establishment of municipal light plants by the aid of grants and loans from the Federal Government.

In the recent case of Alabama Power Co. v. Ickes (302 U. S. 464), the utility involved challenged the right of the Federal Government to assist four municipalities in the State of Alabama in the erection of municipal light plants and distributing systems. They challenged the constitutionality of the act under which Mr. Ickes was proceeding, and sought to enjoin these municipalities and Mr. Ickes from entering into a contract for the erection of municipal plants and the giving of a grant to the municipalities and the making of the loan to them.

The district court held that the contracts were valid and that the statute was constitutional, and that the power company had the right to raise the question. But the circuit court of appeals, on the appeal of that case, held that the utility did not have the right and the standing in court to raise the question and it did not pass upon the constitutionality.

The case went to the Supreme Court of the United States, and the Supreme Court took the same position the circuit court of appeals had taken. The Supreme Court of the United States said that the utility had no standing in the courts to raise the question, because, the Supreme Court said, these municipalities had a right under the law of Alabama to erect a municipal plant and to enter into competition with a private enterprise in the same community. In other words, they held that the private utility had no vested right under the law to be free from competition. Therefore, having no right to be free from competition, they could not question the source of the funds of the municipality which sought to give them competition because the municipality had the right to give them competition and they therefore invaded no right.

Mr. Justice Sutherland said in that case:

What petitioner anticipates with emphasis is damage to something it does not possess, namely, a right to be immune from lawful municipal competition. * * * The ultimate question which, therefore, emerges is one of great breadth: Can anyone who will suffer injurious consequences from the lawful use of money about to be loaned unlawfully maintain a suit to enjoin the loan?

The Supreme Court of the United States answered that question in the negative.

The result of that opinion is that the municipalities, whose State legislatures have given them the authority to erect electric-light plants and maintain distributing systems, and to receive grants and loans in aid of their construction, have a right to do those things; that even though there is a competing utility in the municipality, such utility has no right to say it shall have no competition; and when the municipality seeks Federal aid, it is doing what it has a right to do under the law; and when it brings competition to the utility in doing so, it invades no right of the utility.

If we adopt the amendment, therefore, the result will be that we will place a limitation upon the existing right of the municipalities to ask the Federal agencies for aid under the proposed law to enter into competition with a corporation which has no right to deny competition.

Mr. BONE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. MINTON. I yield.

Mr. BONE. I agree with what the Senator is saying, but I think there is a further consideration involved in this matter. In the Tennessee Valley location, and in the Northwest, the Government has built, through authority of acts of Congress, some enormous public-power developments. In the very nature of things it is contemplated that they will not compete with the private utilities, but will take over their operations and systems and pay for them. Certainly no one can be harmed by that kind of arrangement.

Suppose the people of my State wanted to buy the Washington water-power system. If we really want to buy it, what harm is done, what purposeful, decent American principle do we challenge by buying that system and paying the owners, so that we can utilize the power from the instru-mentality we set up here in the Congress?

We are not going to compete with these

We are not going to compete with these organizations and put them out of existence, but we will buy them. I know of no well-founded principle in our whole American system to which we do violence in buying out a power system. I do not know of any principle that gives a private monopoly the right to tie up a community. What fundamental moral principle can such a monopoly invoke to demonstrate that it has the exclusive right to operate in the city of Seattle, or in any other municipality in my State? The people are the masters of their destiny. What principle of morality can anyone invoke to indicate that that statement is wrong?

We are going ahead with these developments in my section of the country. We built the Coulee and Bonneville Dams, and I hope that in due time we will take over the electric distributing systems in my State. What is wrong in that? What principle is involved in that which anyone can challenge? God knows, the people are the final resort; and, if they are not, we will have to revamp the whole American tradition. If the people of the State of Washington march to the ballot box and say, "We want that system, and we will pay for it," does that do violence to any American principle? The Supreme Court of the United States has held that it does not.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. MINTON. I yield.

Mr. KING. Does the Senator from Washington contend that a corporation, whether it is engaged in the publicutilities field or in the ownership of real estate, has no protection under the law, and does he contend that ethical concepts are not to be considered as against a mere legal statement of one's rights?

Mr. BONE. Let me say to the Senator that, because of my interest in the power question, I have read every decision of a court of last resort that I could get my hands on dealing with that question, and I find nothing in the pronouncements of the courts that reflects in the slightest degree upon the morality of a transaction of that kind. My party, and the party of the Senators on the other side of the aisle, have repeatedly announced that a private monopoly is indefensible and intolerable. Both parties make that high and holy pronouncement in their platforms. The Lord knows there is no more airtight monopoly than a private monopoly, and we have given it our blessing by means of a system of regulation. The point is, however, that the power of eminent domain for public purposes has been recognized from the beginning of the Republic.

There is no sanctity of private ownership that rises above public interest, necessity, and convenience. I, in common with probably every lawyer in this body, have participated in suits to condemn land and property for public purposes. The supreme court of my State has declared that a power system is a public necessity when the municipality so declares by proper underlying resolution. I am not going back to that. I do not see any moral principle involved in it. There is the quid pro quo; if the system is worth a million dollars and we pay the owner a million dollars, he steps out. What moral right has he to insist that he is entrenched in his ownership beyond any possibility of any public body taking over his property? To keep company with such a doctrine would be to tie the hands of every public body in America.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. MINTON. I yield.

Mr. KING. I regret that my friend, the Senator from Washington, has not answered my question. I think no one will deny the right of the Government to exercise the power of eminent domain. I think State legislatures have the right to confer upon municipalities or upon corporations set up by the Government the right of eminent domain to subserve a public purpose; but, in the exercise of the right of eminent domain, certainly the Senator does not justify the expropriation of property, and he certainly must concede, even if he does believe in the expropriation of property without compensation, that there is something immoral and unethical in it.

Mr. O'MAHONEY and Mr. BONE addressed the Chair.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Indiana has the floor. Does the Senator yield; and if so, to whom?

Mr. MINTON. I yield to the Senator from Wyoming.
Mr. O'MAHONEY. While the Senators are debating this question in the abstract, I should like to clear it up a little bit in the concrete. I am desirous of making every reasonable modification of this amendment to satisfy whatever objections may reasonably be made. Therefore, in order that at least part of the criticism which has been offered by the very able and distinguished Senator from Nebraska may be met, I desire to offer a modification of my amendment. The modification which I now propose includes everything that has been in the amendment up to date, but merely undertakes to make clear, first, by whom the offer must be made; and second, that the Commissioner of Public Works shall have the authority to fix the time within which the hearing may be held.

Mr. President, I will state the modification and will read the entire amendment. Beginning in line 2 of the printed amendment:

Provided, That in order that the competitive system of private enterprise for profit shall be maintained and encouraged—

That language being a recitation of the declaration of the President of the United States—

loans under this subsection shall be so administered as not to promote any undertaking in a field now adequately supplied by existing competitive private enterprise or by existing noncompetitive private enterprise at reasonable rates or prices, unless in the latter case a reasonable offer is made—

And here I insert the words:

by the applicant for the loan-

Then the language of the amendment continues:

to acquire the facilities of such noncompetitive enterprise and such offer has not been accepted, and a finding as to both the reasonableness of said offer and also as to the failure of acceptance has been made after public hearing by the Commissioner of Public

With this added phrase:

within such time as may be fixed by said Commissioner.

Mr. WHITE and Mr. BONE addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Indiana has the floor. Does he yield; and if so, to whom?

Mr. MINTON. I yield first to the Senator from Maine.

Mr. WHITE. Mr. President, if it is agreeable to him, I wish to ask the Senator one or two questions about the draft of the amendment. I am not going to concern myself about the purpose of the amendment. I am interested in the effect, or the lack of effect, of the language as it is. The amendment provides that "loans under this subsection shall be so administered as not to promote any undertaking," and so forth. I am not clear in my mind as to the meaning of that word "promote." Does it mean to construct, or reconstruct, or enlarge, or repair, or improve, or what is the technical meaning of the word "promote"? That is one question.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Indiana yield to the Senator from Nebraska?

Mr. MINTON. I yield to the Senator from Nebraska to answer the question of the Senator from Maine.

Mr. NORRIS. If we shall adopt the amendment, the Senator will have an answer to his question at the hands of the Supreme Court in about 10 years from now. In the meantime, other loans that will be made under this measure will be hanging fire and the matter will be in the Supreme Court.

Mr. WHITE. But the trouble with that is that the Senator from Nebraska and I may not be here then to hear the answer of the Supreme Court.

Mr. NORRIS. Of course, we may not; and that will be another invitation to the private companies to get injunctions and rulings as to the construction of these very words.

Mr. WHITE. My point is that it seems to me that the use of that word leaves the meaning altogether indefinite, and there ought to be more precision than is to be found in that language.

Mr. MINTON. I think in any event, if I may suggest to the Senator from Maine, that the construction of that language would lie within the discretion of the Administrator, and he certainly could not be liable for anything outside of gross abuse of that discretion. But as the Senator from Nebraska has said, he might be dragged into court to find out whether he has abused his discretion.

Mr. WHITE. I do not suppose the administrator would have the last word as to the meaning of this language, and it seemed to me there ought to be an effort made to employ language which could be understood by Members of the present Senate.

I have one or two other questions. The amendment provides that these loans "shall be so administered as not to promote any undertaking in a field now adequately supplied by existing competitive private enterprise."

So far as I know, and so far as I can tell by reading, there is no authority given to anyone under this amendment to determine whether any field is now being adequately supplied by existing competitive private enterprise. Who is to determine that question? When is it to be determined, and how is it to be determined? I think the language of the amendment is wholly inadequate in that respect.

Mr. MINTON. I think that calls again for the judgment of the Commissioner of Public Works.

Mr. WHITE. This particular language relates to noncompetitive enterprises. Is it the Senator's idea that the Administrator of Public Works can go into the State of Indiana, or into the State of Washington, or into any other State of the Union and determine that a competitive private enterprise is not adequately supplying hairpins or clothespins or any other article of commercial use?

Mr. MINTON. I should say undoubtedly he could. Mr. WHITE. The Senator thinks he could?

Mr. MINTON. I think he undoubtedly could. If he was presented with a proposition from the local community, he would have to make a decision as to whether or not any such program undertaken should be in the community.

Mr. WHITE. Then I will go on. I come to the words-

Or by existing noncompetitive private enterprise at reasonable rates or prices.

Again I ask the question. Where do we find in the amendment any authority for anyone to determine the reasonableness of a rate or a price?

Mr. MINTON. I will say to the Senator, if it is a utility whose rates are fixed by the public, its rates are presumed by the law to be reasonable.

Mr. WHITE. Then in this instance the Senator relies on presumption of law for the interpretation of this language?

Mr. MINTON. Yes. Whenever the rate is fixed by law there is a presumption of law that that rate is reasonable until it is set aside under a petition to determine its reasonableness.

Mr. WHITE. The trouble with the Senator's answer, so it seems to me, is that the language is not binding on the Administrator, because it says:

Unless in the latter case a reasonable offer is made to acquire the facilities of such noncompetitive enterprise and such offer has not been accepted-

And unless there is a finding of that latter fact to that effect.

It seems to me that, taken as a whole, someone, whoever drafted the amendment, has employed language which carries no certainty at all as to its meaning. It seems to me that Senators should be able to draft an amendment which would be more understandable than this one is. It may be due wholly to my inability to understand, but I do not believe so.

Mr. HILL. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. MINTON. I yield to the Senator from Alabama.

Mr. HILL. The Senator from Maine [Mr. WHITE] has asked many interesting questions; but the most interesting part about his queries is that they illustrate, if the amendment is adopted, how many, many excuses will be given for the utilities to drag applications into court with various kinds of injunctions and court actions. All these queries will be raised, of course, just as the Senator has raised them, and will be used as a basis for some kind of court action to delay, thwart, and defeat the applicants and their requested projects.

Mr. WHITE. Mr. President-

Mr. MINTON. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. WHITE. I quite agree with what the Senator is saying, that the very questions I have raised—and I do not know the answers-will be the basis of challenge hereafter. As I have said, I dislike to have enacted legislation which is not so clear in its meaning that the opportunities for controversy are reduced to a minimum.

Mr. BONE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. MINTON. I yield.

Mr. BONE. I merely wish to refer for a moment to the statement of the able Senator from Utah [Mr. King], who asked me if I thought it was a good legal or moral principle to tolerate in a piece of legislation the right to expropriate property. I am not sure I caught the Senator's meaning. I do not know whether or not he means the forcible taking of property without compensation. I know the Senator from Utah is too good a lawyer not to understand that private property may not be taken for public use unless just compensation is paid. So, if he implies forcible taking by the use of the term "expropriation," that is outside the pale.

The Senator from Wyoming [Mr. O'MAHONEY] referred to the President's attitude. I do not know whether or not he suggests that the President is in sympathy with this viewpoint. If he is, it would be a most astounding and revealing thing. I am not prepared to believe that the President is putting his blessing on any proposal to limit the operation of a system which was set up primarily because of the assistance, support, and encouragement given by the President.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. BONE. I shall be through in a moment. When the President came out to my State-

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Let me quote the President. Will the Senator from Indiana permit me to interrupt?

Mr. BONE. Let me finish my statement.

The President came to my State in 1934, at the time the Grand Coulee project was launched. He also spoke at the Bonneville plant when it was nearing completion. In both those statements the President of the United States gave encouragement to the spread of service of great plants of that character.

Mr. President, such plants can only be benign rather than malignant social growths. If they are given the opportunity to serve they can serve effectively only if the electric current from the plants is floated on distributing lines and pumped into the homes and business enterprises of the State of Washington and the State of Oregon.

One way to accomplish that, which does no violence to a single American tradition or a single principle of American jurisprudence, is to take over the existing distributing systems, many of which are privately owned at present, and pump current into the lines from those plants. I will say parenthetically that the laws of my State permit such action; but if we by an act of Congress say that there is something tainted in that proposal, and that in the great program to rehabilitate industry and the health of the country we may not lend money to the city of Spokane or any other city to take over a distributing system and pay the private owners its value we are thwarting the very thing about which the President himself spoke. If we are to have a peculiar twist given to our party philosophy I should like to know it, because I think the people of the Northwest would be tremendously interested in the new slant being given our party philosophy. I hope the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. O'MAHONEY] can explain the shift in the President's attitude, if there has been a shift. The President talked about the current going out to the homes in the State of Washington. How are we to get it out? Are we to do that to which many Senators have objected, and build parallel competing lines? The thing to do is first to take over existing distributing systems so that we will not have a double investment. Yet it is calmly suggested that we thwart the doing of that which every lawyer in this body will say is the logical thing to do. Let us not duplicate the lines. That is an intolerable thing, frowned on by good practice. The thing to do is to take over the existing distributing systems so as not to impose a double burden on the people who use the current.

Mr. MINTON. Mr. President, I shall conclude in a moment. To summarize the thought I wish to leave, it is simply this: The Supreme Court has spoken, and the Supreme Court has said what the rights of municipalities are. This amendment has the effect of limiting the right which the Supreme Court says a municipality has.

In addition the amendment has all the vices which have been so clearly pointed out by the Senator from Alabama in his questions to the able Senator from Nebraska.

Every lawyer knows that a defense lawyer wants nothing better than a statute which gives him an opportunity for delay. This little amendment is an answer to a defense lawyer's prayer. Incalculable delay is wrapped up in the amendment. As the Senator from Alabama has pointed out, there would be no end of litigation to determine whether or not there has been a failure to accept an offer, and whether or not the offer was reasonable. So, Mr. President, I am unwilling to be a party to limiting the right which the municipalities fought clear to the United States Supreme Court to vindicate. For that reason, as well as for the additional reasons cited by the Senator from Nebraska and the Senator from Alabama, I do not support the amendment.

Mr. O'MAHONEY obtained the floor.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield in order that I may suggest the absence of a quorum?

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, before that is done, I ask the Senator from Wyoming and other Senators whether or not we can secure a limitation of debate on this amendment alone.

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. O'MAHONEY. I yield to the Senator from Connect-

Mr. DANAHER. I respectfully submit that I should like to be heard further with reference to the substitute which I intend to offer.

Mr. BARKLEY. I am not trying to deny that opportunity to the Senator. I wish to see if we cannot limit the time for debate to 15 minutes on the amendment and any amendment thereto. Such an arrangement would not apply to anything but the pending amendment.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, I think the point of no quorum should be made before the unanimous-consent request is presented.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Wyoming yield to the Senator from Colorado for the purpose of suggesting the absence of a quorum?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I do.

Mr. ADAMS. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Clerk will call the roll. The Legislative Clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Danaher	Johnson, Calif.	Reed
Andrews	Davis	Johnson, Colo.	Russell
Austin	Downey	King	Schwartz
Bailey	Ellender	La Follette	Schwellenbach
Bankhead	Frazier	Lodge	Sheppard
Barbour	George	Lucas	Shipstead
Barkley	Gerry	Lundeen	Slattery
Bilbo	Gibson	McCarran	Smith
Bone	Gillette	McKellar	Stewart
Borah	Green	Maloney	Taft
Bridges	Guffey	Mead	Thomas, Okla.
Brown	Gurney	Miller	Thomas, Utah
Bulow	Hale	Minton	Townsend
Burke	Harrison	Murray	Truman
Byrd	Hatch	Neely	Tydings
Byrnes	Hayden	Norris	Vandenberg
Capper	Herring	Nye	Van Nuys
Chavez	Hill	O'Mahoney	Wagner
Clark, Idaho	Holman	Pepper	Walsh
Clark, Mo.	Holt	Pittman	Wheeler
Connally	Hughes	Radcliffe	White

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Eighty-four Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

The question is on the modified amendment of the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. O'MAHONEY].

THE PROTECTION OF PRIVATE ENTERPRISE

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, just before the call for a quorum, the question was asked by the Senator from Washington [Mr. Bone] whether or not I had any basis for a statement made earlier in the debate that the principles enunciated by the President of the United States support the amendment I have offered.

I want to demonstrate to the Senator from Washington and to the Senate that there is ample basis for my statement. This amendment does not represent any change in the policy of the Democratic Party or any change in the policy of the administration. It represents a continuation of the announced program of this administration to stimulate free private enterprise.

A year ago, on the 2d of June 1938, when the Public Works appropriation was pending, a similar question arose. On that occasion the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BARKLEY], in his capacity as majority leader, made this statement: I quote from page 7930 of the Congressional Record for June 2, 1938:

Mr. Barkley. Mr. President, in view of the situation which has arisen with regard to this amendment and an amendment to it or a substitute for it which I had planned a week ago to offer, and which I have abandoned, I wish to make a very frank statement about how the matter arose and what followed with reference to it.

At a conference some days ago with the President which was attended by Vice President Garner, Speaker Bankhead, House Leader Rayburn, and myself, the question of the propriety and wisdom of the committee amendment prohibiting the allocation of any funds from this appropriation for the construction of competing public utilities in States, counties, or other political subdivisions in which there is an existing plant, came up for discussion. The President took the position—

Observe the language of the majority leader:

The President took the position that Federal money ought not to be allocated for the construction of public utilities where there is an existing private utility whose rates are regulated by a public authority until and unless the municipality or other political subdivision made in good faith an offer to purchase at a fair price the existing privately owned and operated plant. This position was agreed to by all those present at the conference.

Mr. BONE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Let me say further, before yielding, that that announcement by the majority leader of the position of the President of the United States is an accurate and correct description of the amendment I have offered.

I yield to the Senator.

Mr. BONE. Just once, and for all time, let us lay some ghosts.

There is being erected in my State right now, under the encouragement and direction of the President of the United States, a power plant which will be capable of producing 2,000,000 horsepower of electric energy. There is another great Federal power project capable of producing a half million horsepower of electric energy. When those plans were suggested, let me say to the Senator from Wyoming, it was announced that they were being erected with the blessing of the President of the United States. There came the parallel announcement from private plants that they had adequate facilities to supply the electric needs of the State of Washington and the State of Oregon.

I want the Senator from Wyoming to tell me now why it is asserted to us that the President does not want to erect any competing plants when in my State and on its borders are plants capable of producing two and a half million horsepower of electric energy that will of necessity, unless we turn them over to private companies, have to compete in some fashion, or we shall be compelled to take over the distribution systems of private companies.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President-

Mr. BONE. If the Senator-

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I will not yield further at this point. I will answer the Senator and not permit him to make a speech in the middle of my time.

Mr. BONE. Very well.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I want to make this matter clear.

Mr. BONE. It will have to be made pretty clear.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. It will be made pretty clear. In this bill there is, by an amendment offered by the Senator from Idaho [Mr. Clark] and myself, a provision allocating $90,000,000 for reclamation; and the evidence before the Banking and Currency Committee in support of that amount contained provision for the development of power in my own State by public funds. I will not permit the Senator to put me in the position of being opposed to the development of public power. I am not opposed to it. I have always been for it. No one can put me in that position before this body or before the country.

Mr. BONE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I am saying to the Senator that he mistakes the issue. The question here is whether or not the $350,000,000 allocated in this bill for the construction of public works by loans shall be so limited that those loans of Federal money shall not be used to strike down private enterprises which are now operating.

Mr. BONE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

A FIGHT ALREADY WON

Mr. O'MAHONEY. The Senator is under the impression that a fight against abuses which was long since won is still in progress. I sympathize with the fight which was made by the distinguished and able Senator from Nebraska [Mr. Norris] against the Power Trust. I sympathize with the great fight which the Senator from Washington [Mr. Bone] has made in the State of Washington with respect to abuses committed by private utilities.

I am in no sense defending such abuses. I am here, however, to say that the constant attrition of the forces which have been supporting administration policies in this Chamber and in the House has been the result of a growing belief in the country that the principle so clearly enunciated by the President of not competing with private enterprise is being undermined by others who do not speak his philosophy, but who speak, or attempt to speak, in his name.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Wyoming yield to the Senator from Nebraska?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. NORRIS. I am not finding fault, and I do not believe anybody is, with the principle which the Senator has enunciated.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. The Senator from Washington [Mr. Bone] was finding fault.

Mr. NORRIS. The objection I have to the Senator's amendment is that he tries first to remedy a situation which does not exist, and he carries out the policy by adding language that is going to lead to endless, costly, and unnecessary litigation and defeat the very purpose we have in view.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, I do not believe it will result in the defeat of any such purpose, because—

Mr. NORRIS. Of course, I do not think the Senator would do that.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. As I pointed out a moment ago, this amendment is attached only to an appropriation of $350,000,000 for public works. Most of that money will go, not for the construction of municipal light plants, not for the construction of utilities, whether competing or not competing, but for the construction of bridges, for the construction of buildings, for the construction of dormitories and university buildings on the grounds of various State institutions, and for innumerable similar projects which have no relation whatsoever to public utilities. It is hardly likely that one-tenth of this sum will be sought by any municipality for the construction of municipal light plants.

Mr. NORRIS. In my opinion, none of it will be sought. The Senator, as I see it, is now excusing the language of his amendment by saying that it will not amount to much, because there will not be much of that kind of business; and the Senator may be absolutely right about it.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, even if that were true, I say that if this amendment should have the result of making it impossible to loan a single penny for the development of any competing public utility anywhere in the United States, it would be worth while to prevent that construction if, in exchange for the prevention, we succeeded in convincing the people of America that it is not the purpose of this administration to undermine free private enterprise.

Mr. CLARK of Idaho. Mr. President-

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I yield to the Senator from Idaho.

Mr. CLARK of Idaho. I call the attention of the able and distinguished Senator from Nebraska and the distinguished Senator from Washington to the fact that in the case of a bill which was recently passed by both the House and the Senate, and which I suppose is now on its way to the White House, providing for the veritable repayment of the reclamation contracts, the distinguished Senator from Alabama [Mr. BANKHEAD] appointed the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. O'MAHONEY] chairman of a subcommittee to consider the bill. The Senator from Nevada [Mr. McCarran] and I were members of the subcommittee. In the bill, as originally drafted by the Bureau of Reclamation and the Department of the Interior, was a provision requiring that all power developed on reclamation projects should be given preferential treatment with regard to municipalities, municipal corporations, and cooperatives organized under the Rural Electrification Administration. When the bill went to the House, the House committee and the House itself eliminated that provision.

I desire to say, in fairness to the Senator from Wyoming, that as chairman of the subcommittee—the Senator from Nevada [Mr. McCarran] will bear me out in this statement—he fought through the committee hearings to retain in the bill the provision that municipalities and municipal corporations and cooperatives organized under the R. E. A. should receive preference with regard to all power. I want to say further, on behalf of the Senator from Wyoming, that he obtained the holding of that provision in the bill in the full committee and in the Senate, and that when the bill went back to the House he made a fight in conference and retained the provision in the bill as now drafted.

So I think that any implication that the distinguished Senator from Wyoming is in any way adverse to the development of municipal and cooperative power in proper case is wholly unjustified.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, will the Senator from Wyoming yield?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I am very glad to yield to the Senator. Mr. NORRIS. Of course, if the Senator from Idaho intends to convey the idea that I have been implying that the Senator from Wyoming has opposed municipal power development, that is entirely erroneous. I have made no such implication. I am familiar with the matter about which the Senator speaks. The Senator from Wyoming will bear me out that I talked with him about it.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. The Senator is quite right.

Mr. NORRIS. About retaining that language. The Senator from Wyoming did a magnificent job, a good work, in my opinion. I do not want to imply that the Senator from Wyoming is trying to deceive the Senate, or that he is unfair. Still I have the right, the honorable right, to draw a conclusion which I think is inevitable from the language of the amendment, that, so far as utilities are concerned, the Senator's amendment is only inviting litigation, and that it would mean long, tedious, expensive litigation, which would wear out the applicants. That is my idea. If the Senator from Wyoming does not believe that, I am not finding fault with him because he does not. I do not believe the Senator from Wyoming is laboring under the impression that I have attempted to imply anything wrong in his conduct in advocating this amendment. I have certainly tried to make it plain that I am not doing that, and I do not believe that.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, I have no question in mind whatsoever about the attitude of the Senator from Nebraska. I know that he is not offering any criticism, because, as he stated a moment ago, he knows I conferred with him about the retention in the reclamation repayment bill of the provision which, as the Senator from Idaho has stated, was reinserted by the subcommittee of which I was chairman, giving a preference to municipalities and public bodies and cooperatives under the R. E. A. in the use of power developed by reclamation projects. I am deeply grateful to the junior Senator from Idaho [Mr. CLARK] for his most gracious remarks.

Mr. MALONEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I yield. Mr. MALONEY. I rise to ask the Senator from Wyoming to yield to me that I may refer to the statement he made just before he yielded to the Senator from Idaho.

I am tremendously interested in this subject, and interested in the pending amendment, as the Senator knows. Yesterday I offered, in connection with an amendment covering other things, an amendment on this particular subject. I thought it was a comprehensive amendment; I thought it treated the matter in more proper detail than the one now before the Senate, because it provided a way for the building without delay of plants where there are existing plants.

It set up a board of arbitration to determine what was a fair price; and I might point out, if the Senator from Wyoming will be kind enough to give me the time, that it was the same as the amendment which was under consideration at the time we had the message, and the President's letter, from the Senator from Kentucky, the majority leader, to which the Senator from Wyoming just a few moments ago referred.

I should like to see this amendment extended. I had prepared an amendment of my own, another one, concerning this subject, which I had intended to offer a little later.

I am going to support the Senator's amendment, but I want to emphasize the truth of the statement he made concerning the worth of his amendment just before he was interrupted by the Senator from Idaho. He said that it would give promise to the American people that there would not be governmental competition with private enterprise.

I want to tell Senators that such competition is coming from sources we know little about, and I should like to read, in the time of the Senator, if I may, a part of a letter which I received this morning from an insurance executive in my

I presume there will go with the reading of this letter some feeling that I am concerned with insurance executives or with insurance companies. That is in part true. I am naturally concerned in the protection of an important industry of my State and of the country; but I am especially concerned with the thousands and thousands and thousands of workers engaged by the insurance companies, and the thousands of insurance agents over the land, and with the danger of a precedent which may take us as deeply into competition with private enterprise.

I apologize to the Senator from Wyoming for taking so much of his time, and I will read just three paragraphs from the letter and conclude for now.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. The Senator is always very lucid and very helpful. I am glad to have him interrupt me.

Mr. MALONEY. This will help him in the statement he just made. I quote:

It is my understanding that the Department of Agriculture during previous seasons has been advancing loans to the farmers on their corn and in support of such loans has been requiring and receiving at the hands of the farmers insurance policies to indemnify the Government in the event of loss through fire and windstorm. I am now told that the Department of Agriculture is preparing to have the Government of the United States insure this corn itself and for the insurance proposes to collect a premium from the farmers. I am further informed that the rules and regulations covering the matter are in the process of being printed and early distribution is planned.

Let me say in parentheses that no one here knows much about that yet. This is the development of a theory in Washington which takes us into a new field of competition. I continue the reading of this letter:

The purpose of this letter is not only to bring this to your attention but to respectfully request that you have an investigation made at the earliest possible time to ascertain if the information which has been given me is correct, and if so and it is consistent with your views to register objection to such a procedure on the part of the Government. There are ample facilities at the disposal of the Government through regularly constituted insurance carriers and I cannot believe it is in the interest of the people of this country for those carriers and their agents to be people of this country for those carriers and their agents to be deprived of this legitimate business, nor to have the Government in competition with them for it.

This request is made of you purely in the interest of the American way of doing business and does not grow out of any selfash interest because my company has not in the past, nor does it expect in the future to participate in this business or to enjoy any of the benefits which might accrue from the premiums produced by it.

That is the end of the letter. I would like to say that the last sentence explains my interest. I am not concerned too much with the Government writing fire insurance on corn. But it is a dangerous step. I am concerned with still another step of Government competition with private business, and I am glad it is so able a Senator as the Senator from Wyoming, for whom we all have so much respect, who is making the argument now.

Of course the Senator from Nebraska is conscientious and especially able and well informed, and has pursued a policy which has meant much to the American people. I have not helped him much, but I have been in company. I am not opposed to the nationalization of power. I am concerned at a possible confiscation of power properties. If there is to be a nationalization of power, I want it done in the orderly way. I think nationalization of power is inevitable in this country. I think the only question is how long before it will come. But I insist we must protect the people who own stock in utility companies, hundreds of thousands of them, the people who have jobs; and by far most important of all, the preservation of the American system of competition.

I thank the Senator from Wyoming.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I yield.

Mr. KING. I desire to corroborate the information which the Senator has just brought to our attention. I heard several days ago of the matter brought out in the letter as to the insurance of corn, and I immediately called up an official in the Department of Agriculture, and he confirmed the statement that the Government was now about to insure the corn which it has in bins, stored throughout the United States, and to impose, as I recall, a 2-mill tax upon the farmers whose crops are being insured. In other words, the Government is going into the insurance of the corn which is in the bins, and, of course, will impose a tax upon those who own the corn. Whether it will be adequate to meet the losses I am unable to state, but it is certain that the Department of Agriculture is going into the insurance business in a broad way. As was indicated a few days ago, it is insuring many crops.

Mr. BONE. Mr. President, the Senator from Wyoming is always so generous and good natured, and I am so fond of him personally, that I dislike to appear to take issue with him, and I hope that if I seem to be doing so he will display his usual forgiving disposition. But let me suggest to the Senator that if his amendment had been the law, the people of San Francisco would never have built the great bridge over San Francisco Bay. It is my recollection, and the Senator from California [Mr. Johnson] will correct me if I am in error, that the people there got a $60,000,000 loan.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, if I may interrupt the Senator, I desire to finish this discussion and allow the Senate to complete consideration of the amendment and recess. The Senator is not talking to the point. It is not his fault; it is mine, because I have not yet been able to develop the point. Permit me to explain the reason why I believe that though this amendment should prevent the expenditure of a single penny of the $350,000,000 for public works, for municipal utilities, it would be well worth being prohibited if we obtain in exchange a declaration that we do not intend to undermine free, private enterprise. I will explain it to the Senator now.

First, let me continue with the clarification of the position of the President of the United States. In the letter which he addressed to the junior Senator from South Carolina just before this bill was sent to the Committee on Banking and Currency the President of the United States said:

I have caused estimates to be made of the extent of the field for investment of funds in revenue-earning channels on a selfliquidating basis and in no way competitive with private enterprise.

In other words, the President sent this communication with the purpose of making an opportunity for the investment of private funds in enterprises not destructive of private business.

Mr. BONE. How could it be self-liquidating if there is no investment possible? Where would a return come from?

investment possible? Where would a return come from?
Mr. O'MAHONEY. The Senator misunderstands me.
The President sent this bill to us in order to promote private enterprise, and to secure the investment of private funds in the bonds to be issued to finance the projects.

PRESERVATION OF PRIVATE ENTERPRISE

Not only did the President of the United States in the conference with the majority leader a year ago enunciate this purpose, not only did he pledge himself to this policy in the letter to the junior Senator from South Carolina this year, but he made himself amply clear in the message which he sent to Congress in April 1938, as the result of which the Temporary National Economic Committee was set up.

Every Member of Congress and every citizen of the country ought to be thoroughly familiar with the announced purposes of the study as outlined by the President in his message. Let me read the eloquent conclusion of his message of April 29, 1938:

No man of good faith will misinterpret these proposals. They derive from the oldest American traditions. Concentration of economic power in the few and the resulting unemployment of labor and capital are inescapable problems for a modern "private enterprise" democracy. I do not believe that we are so lacking in stability that we will lose faith in our own way of living just because we seek to find out how to make that way of living work more effectively.

more effectively.

This program should appeal to the honest common sense of every independent businessman interested primarily in running his own business at a profit rather than in controlling the business of other men.

It is not intended as the beginning of any ill-considered trustbusting activity which lacks proper consideration for economic results.

Observe this language of the President of the United States:

It is a program to preserve private enterprise for profit by keeping it free enough to be able to utilize all our resources of capital and labor at a profit.

With that declaration of the President of the United States I am in complete accord, and I believe that all the people of the United States agree with the statement. But the feeling has gone abroad in the country that there is a purpose in the minds of some to undermine that principle. I seek the adoption of this amendment in order that it may be made perfectly clear to the entire country that Congress, under the President, is seeking to inspire and invigorate free private enterprise, and in order that that may be made clear I shall ask Senators to be good enough to bear with me while I point to the chart which I have placed upon the wall.

PRESIDENT'S LETTER TO T. N. E. C. CHAIRMAN

Let me say, first, that only a few weeks ago the President of the United States sent a letter to the chairman of the Temporary National Economic Committee in which he asked the question why the investment of private funds lags in the United States. He sent to the chairman of the committee a letter which was intended to request that committee to develop an answer to the question why the banks are bulging with money and why there is no opportunity for private investment.

Mr. President, the answer is clear. It is made clear on this chart. It has been made clear by what has been said on this floor.

The upper line on the chart represents the total income payments in the United States, the national income—not the income of the Government but the income of all the people in the United States, the income which is important.

THE INCOME OF THE PEOPLE

The Government of the United States was established for the purpose of promoting the welfare of the men and women who constitute the citizenship of America. Of what use is it to us to pour out billions of dollars of Government funds through deficit spending if the rank and file of the people of the United States do not have incomes which they themselves can earn by their own efforts?

The figures upon the side of the chart represent billions of dollars—10, 20, 30, 40, 50, 60, 70, 80. Eighty billion dollars was the national income in 1929. In 1919 the national income was only about $59,000,000,000. It will be observed how it went up to almost $70,000,000,000 in 1920. Then came the depression of 1921, the Harding deflation, under President Harding, the "courageous" deflation, that stout-hearted action under that administration, which deflated so many farmers in the West. And down went the national income to a point far below that of 1919. And then it began gradually to climb again through the Coolidge and Hoover administrations of "prosperity" until in 1929, before the crash, it had reached the peak of $80,000,000,000.

Then came the crash, and the national income tobogganed. This line [indicating], showing that it dropped from $80,-000,000,000 in 1929 to $49,000,000,000 in 1933, the smallest national income since before 1919, tells the story of men out of work, of families in distress, of starvation and disaster for men, women, and children. It is the story of the effort of the Government through W. P. A. expenditures and other pouring out of Treasury millions to save people from starvation. This line, the climbing line [indicating], shows that Government spending did have a good result. The national income began to rise in 1933, until in 1936 it had come to about $65,000,000,000 or $67,000,000,000. The chart does not show the slump of 1937, but the important thing that I want to call to the attention of the Members of the Senate is that the income on which prosperity depends is the income of the people, represented by this upper line.

ESSENTIAL INEFFICACY OF GOVERNMENT SPENDING

Let me now ask Senators to look at the lower line, which represents the Government payments. There has not been a single year in all the story of public spending in which the Government has expended in any one year more than $12,000,000,000. Government spending back in 1919 was about $5,000,000,000 a year. Expenditures went along on a rather level line until 1933, when they slowly began to rise, and in 1935 and 1936, for the first time they rose above $10,000,000,000,000 a year—$11,000,000,000 a year.

What has been the result of that expenditure? It brought about a temporary uprise, followed by another decline in 1937; but year by year these expenditures have added to the deficit, until today we have a governmental national deficit of over $40,000,000,000. Is it any wonder that I say to the Congress of the United States that the one important thing before all the people of the country is to promote free private enterprise?

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I yield.

Mr. TYDINGS. The Senator's address is very interesting. He made the remark that after the Government started to spend more than it normally did the income of the people rose. I think the inference might be drawn from that remark that the income of all the people increased solely because of Government spending. I do not think the Senator, perhaps, meant to leave any such inference as that.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I would not say that it was solely because of public spending. I think more important than the public spending was the confidence that existed throughout the country at the beginning of this administration, the confidence that the administration was devoted to the promotion of free private enterprise. That confidence has gradually dwindled away by reason of suggestions of the character which came to the Senate when this bill was first introduced.

Mr. TYDINGS. I thank the Senator. My conclusions are very much the same as his.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, I want to point out that the Temporary National Economic Committee as a committee has never answered the letter which the President sent to its chairman, because the committee has not as yet completed its study, and it was impossible for the committee to answer that inquiry in an orderly, intelligent, and constructive way after considering all points of view, as the question should be answered. But there were some elements of the testimony before that committee which I think are worthy of mention before the Senate.

TESTIMONY BEFORE TEMPORARY NATIONAL ECONOMIC COMMITTEE

I have here another chart which was presented to the committee. This chart was presented to show the composition of income-producing expenditures that offset savings. It was part of the "famous" study on investment. It will be observed that the first column represents 1925, the second column represents 1929, and the last column represents 1937.

In 1929, for example, 12.2 percent of the entire national income-producing expenditures was made in changes of inventory as compared with 8.9 percent in 1929, and with 27.7 percent in 1937. That is what the economists talked to the committee about as expenditures for "consumer goods."

Here we find that in 1929, 19.4 percent of the total was devoted to housing and nonprofit institutions, as compared with 32.9 percent in 1925, and only 11 percent in 1937.

Here is a most important item in the constitution of these expenditures—"Other plant and equipment." These are the capital goods expenditures which Professor Hansen, economist from Harvard, said constituted the "high powered" money—the money that produces and reproduces new expenditure. In 1929 that amounted to 21.6 per cent of the total national income-producing expenditures, as compared with 18.4 percent in 1925, and with 19.3 percent in 1937.

Senators will see how manufacturing in 1937 had only a 20 percent of the total; it had a 19.8 in 1929 and 15.4 percent in 1925.

THE IMPORTANT FIGURE—GOVERNMENT EXPENDITURE

But now I come to the important figure, the amount of Government expenditure. In 1925 it constituted 3.1 percent of the total. This Government expenditure is computed, for the purposes of this chart, by taking from the total outlay the amount that is canceled by taxation, and the balance makes the contribution to income-producing expenditure.

In 1929 that percentage had increased only eight-tenths of 1 percent. In 1937, in the midst of all of the spending, it constituted only 5.3 percent of the total.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I yield.

Mr. LODGE. Does the Senator include State and local government expenditures?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. It includes all government expenditures, local, State, and Federal.

Mr. LODGE. All government expenditures?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Yes.

Mr. TAFT. All government deficits, that is, so to speak. Mr. O'MAHONEY. Well, it is not exactly that, because it is more than the deficits. It is a computation of what is not canceled by taxes. Of course, there may be some income aside from taxes.

Mr. TAFT. On the whole the local governments have decreased their debt rather than increased it.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I could show the Senator another chart which would indicate that there has been simply a shift of the debt from the local governments to the National Government.

THE BUSINESS OF THE PEOPLE

The point I wish to emphasize, however, before this body, which is clearly shown by the charts, is that the Government contribution is only a drop in the bucket. What we must stimulate is the free public enterprise that goes into housing, that goes into plants and equipment, that goes into mining and manufacturing, that goes into the purchase of goods for distribution, that goes into the retail business of the United States, the business of the people of the United States.

Let me say to the Senate, when Dr. Hanson and Dr. Currie, then of the Federal Reserve Board, were before the committee presenting and discussing this chart, and it was explained to the committee that this contribution to the income-producing expenditures of Government represented the difference between taxes and expenditures, I asked the two gentlemen if the contribution of the Government could not be made just as effective by reducing the taxes as by increasing the expenditure, and the answer was "yes."

Mr. President, I think there is nothing more that need now be said. That is the whole story. The announced purpose of this whole administration has been to stimulate free private enterprise. I am happy to be able to say that I see in the bill before the Senate now an instrumentality for accomplishing that purpose. But if it is to accomplish the purpose, it must be made crystal clear to all the people of the United States that it is not the intention of any responsible person in Government—whatever irresponsible people may propose or plan—to undermine the democratic American system of a free private economy.

The loans permitted in this bill for rural electrification would promote that purpose, because when the electric power gets out to the farm it will create a demand for the products of the mill and the factory. They will create a new demand for radios and for all manner of electrical equipment. There can be no question about that.

When the loans go out to the promotion of reclamation in the West, again there will be a tendency to promote free private enterprise. When the loans go out from the Farm Security Administration to farmers living on the land, there also will be found a stimulation of free private enterprise.

The virtue of the bill, as I see it, is that it apparently represents the termination of the attempt to solve the economic problem by W. P. A. expenditures, offering miserable pittances of $26 to $54 or $90 a month for highly skilled workers to the unemployed masses of the people of America. There is no solution that way. The solution of the problem is in the stimulation of free private enterprise.

So, Mr. President, I say to the Senate, stop all this quibbling about what is going to happen with a $350,000,000 loan fund, stop all quibbling about the right of some municipality to obtain a loan to build a utility in competition with an existing utility. The fight against abuses by corporate power has been practically won. I believe it has been completely won. I believe that one of the great reasons why the fight has been won is because Senators like the distinguished and able Senator from Nebraska [Mr. Norris] have been willing to stand upon the floor of this body and out on the stump to wage a fight for free private enterprise.

Free private enterprise is endangered not only by monopoly. It is also endangered by Government. My experience during the past 12 months with the Temporary National Economic Committee has convinced me that 90 percent of all the businessmen in the United States want only the opportunity to go forward. I say, Mr. President, give them the signal by adopting this amendment.

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, there can be little question that those of us who have been in the Chamber during the past half hour have heard from the Senator from Wyoming one of the most challenging speeches delivered in the Senate during the present session. There can be little question that no other Member of this body could have made that speech.

By the same token, in its overwhelming proportions the speech of the Senator from Wyoming applied directly, forcefully, and positively in support of the substitute amendment which I am offering, and which in its essence I caused to be stated by the clerk earlier in the day. In a few moments I shall ask that the substitute which I hold in my hand be read.

However, before doing so, let me advert to the actual language of the amendment of the Senator from Wyoming. Let me call attention to what the situation actually is, independently of the speech he has made. Let me call attention to the fact that from lines 1 to 6, inclusive, of the amendment offered by the Senator from Wyoming it is provided:

Provided, That in order that the competitive system of private enterprise for profit shall be maintained and encouraged—

The Senator has told us that those words were taken from the message of the President himself—

loans under this subsection shall be so administered as not to promote any undertaking in a field now adequately supplied by existing competitive private enterprise—

Let us stop right there. That language in and of itself constitutes a proposed limitation. Who is to decide whether or not an existing competitive private enterprise is adequately supplying the field? Who is to make the decision as to whether or not it is a competitive private enterprise?

Mr. President, that is where the challenge lies in the amendment offered by the Senator from Wyoming. Under the amendment offered by the Senator from Wyoming the determination is to rest with the Commissioner of Public Works, who I understand is Mr. Carmody, who appeared before the Committee on Banking and Currency. He is the one who is to decide; and, consequently, if the amendment be adopted, we shall transfer from the possibility of having a judicial determination of whether there is or is not a justifiable loan to a decision by a bureaucrat downtown. That is where the vice in the amendment lies.

I invite the attention of the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. Norris] to that provision. He will run into difficulty with it; and if he is looking for interminable litigation he will not have to worry about it under the amendment of the Senator from Wyoming, for the question will be decided by the gentleman downtown.

Let us go on with the other language of the amendment. It is drawn in the alternative. It provides that there shall be no loans under this subsection—to promote any undertaking in a field now adequately supplied by existing competitive private enterprise or by existing noncompetitive private enterprise at reasonable rates or prices—

Who is to decide that question? Who is to decide whether or not rates are reasonable? Who is to decide whether or not prices are reasonable? Again, that decision will rest with the Commissioner of Public Works, Mr. Carmody.

The vice of the amendment is exactly this: While it purports to be in line with the maintenance of a system of free public enterprise, and while it may, in the approach which the Senator from Wyoming gives to it in his speech, ultimately have that effect, the fact of the matter is that it is the opening wedge for the use of public funds by way of loans under this section to break monopoly. That is the purpose of it. That is the purport of it. Let us recognize it for what it is.

Mr. President, I shall not ask the Senate to decide whether that particular result should or should not be attained by legislation in due course. I say to the Senate, as was argued with reference to the amendment offered by the Senator from Delaware [Mr. Townsend], that the matter was never before our committee. The Committee on Banking and Currency never had an opportunity to decide on the merits or lack of merits of any such proposal. We did not have the facts, the figures, and the circumstances. All those data are being collected by the committee of which the Senator from Wyoming is the distinguished chairman. He has not even yet been able to complete his hearings. They are in process. We have progress reports which may or may not in due course be adequate to sustain and justify the legislative pronouncement he now seeks to write into this legislation; but if there be justification for the bill at all, it certainly is not to be found in the adoption of the amendment offered by the Senator from Wyoming and what is sought to be done under it.

Mr. President, I have prepared a substitute, which I now send to the desk and ask to have stated.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment offered by the Senator from Connecticut to the modified amendment of the Senator from Wyoming will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 1, line 2, of the amendment offered by Mr. O'MAHONEY it is proposed to strike out all after the word "following" and to substitute the following:

No funds, whether loans or expenditures, shall be made available under section 4, subsection (2), to any Federal, State, or local public body, or to any person or corporation, for use by any such agency or corporation to purchase, establish, construct, relocate, or expand any mill, factory, plant, or commercial enterprise which is or will be as a result of such loan or expenditure in competition with any existing industry or commercial enterprise, provided the limitation herein shall not apply to any such loan or expenditure for a public hospital, college, or university.

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, my amendment is, in line 2 of the amendment offered by the Senator from Wyoming, after the word "following", that the language beginning with the word "Provided" be stricken out throughout the rest of the amendment and that in lieu thereof there be substituted the amendment which I have sent to the desk, the adoption of which I now move.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. DANAHER. I yield.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I think the Senator is just painting the lily. I hope he will withdraw the suggestion.

Mr. DANAHER. I beg the Senator's pardon?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. The Senator is merely painting the lily. He might just as well withdraw the suggestion. I hope he will.

Mr. DANAHER. I thank the Senator for his courteous words; but I have no intention of withdrawing the proposed amendment.

Mr. President, I recognize that the purport and intendment of the amendment offered by the Senator from Wyoming, as its language states and as it implies on its face, would do what he hopes it would do. For that reason I believe it should be rejected, and that the substitute should be approved by this body.

If we honestly, sincerely, and actually do not wish to compete with private enterprise, we should stop such competition.

If we honestly, sincerely, and actually do not wish that Federal funds be used for the transportation of mills from one location to another, or for the development of competitive industry, all we have to do is to say so. I submit that the substitute amendment which I have offered accomplishes that end.

Mr. President, if a municipality wishes, as the Senator from Washington implied, to create its own power plant, there is no reason in the world why it should not do so. I agree with him that it has the power, and that it may vote to do so. All I say is that if there be an existing private industry somewhere, Federal funds should not be used in competition with that private industry.

Because I am insistent on that doctrine, I differ materially in that particular from the approach of the Senator from Washington [Mr. Bone], who would under this bill grant Federal funds, or at least lend them for such purpose; and on that point I differ with the Senator from Washington.

However, happily that is not the issue before us. The issue before us is not even the amendment submitted by the Senator from Wyoming. The issue before us is, Do we honestly, actually, and earnestly want to stop the use of Government funds—100-percent loans, if you choose—and to prohibit governmental agencies under P. W. A. from competing with private industry? If we do, Mr. President, and if that be the sense of the Senate, then the amendment which I have sent to the desk will do just that.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. DANAHER. I yield.

Mr. WAGNER. I should like to propound to the Senator the same question which I propounded earlier in the day to the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. O'MAHONEY]. I take it that under this provision, if it should be enacted into law, some bridges would be constructed. I understand there is quite a demand for the construction of new bridges. Some of them, of course, would compete with the present facilities, such as ferries. Under the terms of the amendment proposed by the Senator, would it be essential for the municipality, or whatever public body decides to build the bridge, to consider the different facilities for crossing the stream? Would the municipality be required to purchase the ferries in order to build the bridge? Or does the Senator interpret his amendment as not coming within the purview of a situation of that kind?

Mr. DANAHER. Answering the Senator specifically, of course, he well knows that we discussed this whole matter. It was very thoroughly canvassed in the committee; and I say, of course, a bridge does not compete with a ferry. I do not believe any municipality would have to buy the ferry or anything else; of course not. I say that a loan for such a purpose is perfectly legitimate and could be undertaken.

That is my answer to the Senator.

Mr. WAGNER. The Senator's answer is that he does not regard that as providing competition for an existing private enterprise, as stated in his amendment?

Mr. DANAHER. That is correct.

Mr. WAGNER. Of course, there is this to be said, however: When a bridge is built it certainly will take customers away from a ferry. A bridge provides a more expeditious and perhaps a more comfortable means of transportation across the water, so that it will seriously affect the business of a ferry that is in operation.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. DANAHER. I yield to the Senator from Maryland.

Mr. TYDINGS. As I understand, if the Government were to lend money to build a competing ferry line, that is the kind of thing the Senator's amendment would prohibit.

Mr. DANAHER. Precisely.

Mr. TYDINGS. But when the Government builds a bridge, it does not operate a private business. When the Government builds a ferry line, it does operate a private business. When the Government operates a municipal power plant, it does operate a private business; but there is no operation of a private business in operating a bridge, per se.

Mr. WAGNER. Perhaps that may be a technically correct statement; but the Senator knows the result has always been that when a bridge provides transportation that a ferry formerly provided the bridge service is so superior that the ferry goes out of business. That has happened time and time again; so there is that type of competition.

I simply wanted to clear up the matter, so that the question could not be raised afterward if an amendment of this kind is included in the pending bill.

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, briefly by way of reply to the Senator from New York, let me observe that although there are bridges over the Hudson River in New York, and although there are Holland tubes and Lincoln tubes and other types of tubes, taking transportation facilities, if you like, away from the ferries in one sense or another, the ferries definitely run. The ferries run day in and day out. They are crowded. They do a splendid business, and I am glad of it.

Mr. WAGNER. The business has been reduced, however; and on the East River the result has been just the opposite. The ferry finally had to stop operating, because its customers were taken away. I am quite willing, however, to accept the interpretation made here, that that is not the kind of competition which is proposed to be affected by this amendment.

Mr. DANAHER. I thank the Senator from New York.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President-

Mr. DANAHER. I yield to the Senator from Maryland. Mr. TYDINGS. I should like to say to the Senator from New York, as one Senator who is supporting the amendment of the Senator from Connecticut—and, if that amendment does not prevail, certainly the amendment of the Senator from Wyoming, because they are both directed to the same end—that it is my understanding, for whatever it is worth, that a bridge would in no sense of the word be precluded under the amendment of the Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. KING. Mr. President-

Mr. DANAHER. I yield to the Senator from Utah.

Mr. KING. The Senator from Connecticut is a member of the committee reporting the bill, as I understand.

Mr. DANAHER. That is correct.

Mr. KING. I desire to ask the Senator if a single person in private life or in business life appeared before the committee and supported this provision in the bill, with the exception of Mr. Pelley, who is connected with the railroads.

My understanding is that the only persons who appeared were Government officials, who would have high positions or important positions if the bill should go into effect, in the administration of the bill and the expenditure of the funds therein provided. I ask again, were any private persons invited to testify, or did any private persons testify, in behalf of the provisions of the bill?

Mr. DANAHER. In answer to the Senator from Utah, permit me to say that all but one of those who testified in support of the bill upon which hearings were held were officials of the Government. The single exception was Mr. Pelley, who, as I understand, is president of the American Association of Railroads. Does that answer the Senator's question?

Mr. KING. I think so. So that officials of the executive department who were holding jobs, getting high salaries, and expecting to retain those positions and perhaps have their emoluments increased, or at least get higher salaries, were the ones who were pushing this bill, and they were the ones who furnished the testimony upon which the bill is predicated. Is that correct?

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, I assume that the conclusion reached by the Senator from Utah is true in part. I imagine that others than those who appeared are pushing the bill. In fact, I rather suspect that others who did not appear actually pushed the bill.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President-

Mr. DANAHER. I yield to the Senator from New York. Mr. WAGNER. I want to explain that there was not a single request to be heard from any person in opposition to the bill. The only individual outside of an official who asked to be heard—and the officials did not ask to be heard; they were requested to appear—was Mr. Pelley, representing the railroads; and he did appear as a witness. I know of no other request that came before the committee from any private individual who desired to be heard.

Mr. ADAMS and Mr. NORRIS addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Connecticut yield, and, if so, to whom?

Mr. DANAHER. I yield first to the Senator from Colorado.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, it occurs to me that there is a very adequate explanation of that fact; that the burden of proof was upon those who were advocating the bill, and I think it was quite essential that those who wanted the bill passed should make a case. I know, as to some parts of the bill, that some of us thought they failed to make the case, and it was not necessary for anybody to appear on the opposite side.

Mr. DANAHER. Then am I to understand the Senator from Colorado to imply that this matter was tried and heard by way of demurrer, let us say, as if there were just nothing to it anyway?

Mr. ADAMS. No; I will not say that. I think there is much to it.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, does the Senator also recall that on Friday afternoon, as soon as the last witness for the bill, Mr. Jones, had testified, the chairman urged that the committee immediately report the bill, and over strenuous objection we were allowed to adjourn until Saturday morning, at which time the committee did report the bill; so that if anybody who had read the hearings during the past few days had wished to appear, he would not have had time to request an opportunity to appear before the committee?

Mr. NORRIS and Mr. KING addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Connecticut yield, and, if so, to whom?

Mr. DANAHER. I yield first to the Senator from Nebraska. Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, I have what purports to be a copy of the Senator's amendment, as modified. The copy I have says "under this act" instead of "under this section."

Mr. DANAHER. Under section 4, subdivision (2). It is limited simply to the P. W. A. section, which is section 4. subsection (2).

Mr. NORRIS. The limitation is the same as in the amendment of the Senator from Wyoming?

Mr. DANAHER. That is correct.

Mr. NORRIS. Now I desire to ask the Senator a question. Suppose this amendment were adopted and became the law, and a bridge were in operation across, let us say, the Mississippi River; and suppose the city of St. Louis, we will say, decided that they wanted an additional bridge: Would their decision on the matter be sufficient? Would there be a question as to whether they ought to have another bridge there, which would come up before the administrator of the bill?

Mr. DANAHER. No, I will say in answer to the Senator; for the simple reason that another bridge could not possibly be considered in competition with any existing industry or commercial enterprise.

Mr. NORRIS. Would not a bridge be a commercial enter-

Mr. DANAHER. I do not consider that a bridge which is operated by any subdivision of a municipality is a commercial enterprise; no.

Mr. NORRIS. Of course, if that were the case, the city could build as many bridges as they decided to build.

Mr. DANAHER. I should say so; yes, sir.

Mr. NORRIS. Why does the Senator say, at the end of the amendment, that it shall not apply to a loan for a public hospital? Such a building might come into competition, might it not, with a privately owned hospital?

Mr. DANAHER. Let me say in answer to the Senator in that connection, that there were those of us on the committee who thought it did; but the majority felt that language such as this was more apropos; and because they did, irrespective of what my particular judgment may be, and without indicating it, I adopted that thought.

Mr. NORRIS. I desire to say to the Senator that in asking that question I do not want it to be understood that I object at all to that exception, if it may be called such; but it seems to me the principle involved in having the amendment not apply to a public hospital would also apply to anything else.

Mr. DANAHER. I think the Senator is not entirely correct in making so sweeping a statement. I think what we really had in mind was to make possible loans to eleemosynary institutions. Does that clarify the matter in the Senator's

Mr. NORRIS. I am not asking these questions because I object to the suggestion. I am in favor of it. I think the Senator's statement is one in which I would entirely coincide.

Mr. DANAHER. I am sure the Senator will; and I am sure the amendment itself, upon examination, will commend itself equally to the Senator.

Mr. NORRIS. It seems to me, upon an examination of it, that I would prefer it to the amendment of the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. O'MAHONEY].

Mr. DANAHER. That has been my own feeling, if I may say so to the Senator.

If there be no other questions-

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I desire to occupy the floor for a few moments.

Mr. DANAHER. Then I will simply say, in conclusion, that I feel that if we want to stop competition with private industry, all we have to do is to say so, and we do not have to adopt the circumlocution that has provoked over 3 hours of debate here this afternoon to try to find out what may be the meaning of the language of the amendment submitted by the Senator from Wyoming.

I hope the Senate will adopt the substitute.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I am in favor of a declaration in this bill pertaining to the activities of the Public Works Administration which will clarify what we propose to expend the money for.

A year ago, when we had under consideration the Public Works appropriation, the very same question arose; and in the conference at the White House referred to by the Senator from Wyoming the question came up as to whether there ought to be an amendment in the law, or whether the President could make clear his intention with respect to the expenditure of money so as to obviate the necessity of any amendment in the law itself. As a result of that understanding, I read into the RECORD the statement referred to by the Senator from Wyoming, in which it was explicitly stated that in the expenditure of that money under the P. W. A. no funds would be loaned to any municipality or other public body in order to establish a public utility where there was already an existing utility giving adequate service at reasonable rates, until the locality had given an opportunity to the owners of the private utility to sell to the community at a fair price; and that was to be determined by the Public Works Administrator. I think that is a fair principle.

There is no doubt that any Senator has a right to vote, if he wants to do so, to establish a new public utility in competition with an existing utility. Communities have a right to establish one if they desire, and have the power under their laws, where there is a utility that is giving adequate service at reasonable rates under public legal regulation. If they want to do that, that is their affair; but that is not quite the same thing as asking the Government of the United States to furnish the money with which they may do that without first giving to the private utility an opportunity to sell out to the town or city.

Mr. NORRIS rose.

Mr. BARKLEY. I will say that what I stated a year ago, and the position taken by the President, has been meticulously adhered to.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, that is what I was going to ask. Is it not a fact that in all these operations that position has been adhered to?

Mr. BARKLEY. It has been adhered to, and it had been even before the President made his statement.

Mr. NORRIS. I think so. The objection, as I see it, to putting all this language into the law itself is that it lays a foundation for these companies to continue litigation indefinitely. They cannot complain of the treatment so far, because there has not been any case where the suggestion has not been adhered to.

Mr. BARKLEY. I think there is a good deal of force in the Senator's argument. The amendment offered by the Senator from Wyoming is a little bit circumlocutionary, if I may suggest a word in reference to the language it uses, because the word "promote" may be subject to legal definition which we may not anticipate. Nor do I like the substitute offered by the Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. HILL. Mr. President, before the Senator starts to comment on the substitute of the Senator from Connecticut, I should like to say that I think we are all in agreement as to a policy such as that declared by the President, and such as that the Senator from Wyoming has read to the Senate today. I wonder whether the Senator from Wyoming knows of any instance since that policy has been declared of a departure from it?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. It is quite immaterial whether or not there has been such an instance. The point is not whether there will be public-utility loans or no public-utility loans. The point is that we should end the condition which is consistently promoting the defeat of the principles for which we stand. Did Senators read the roll calls yesterday? Did they hear motion after motion sponsored by the Senator from Kentucky defeated? Why were they defeated? They were defeated because the feeling is growing in the country that we are not standing for free private enterprise. It is far more important to declare this principle in language which cannot be misunderstood than it is to quibble about a word or two in an amendment which declares a principle announced by the President.

Mr. HILL. Will the Senator yield further?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield.

Mr. HILL. I wish to say that, so far as the declaration of policy is concerned, I join with the Senator from Wyoming. Mr. O'MAHONEY. Yes; but the Senator does not want an amendment announcing the policy.

Mr. HILL. That is correct, because I know what this amendment would do. It would be opening up the door to defeat the very thing we are trying to do, to wit, to make these loans and take the resultant benefits to the people of the country.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, the Senator is quite wrong about that. As I have pointed out, there are only $350,000,000 involved in the provision for public-works loans; so that it could not possibly wreck the program. Most of the money will be expended for other types of public works.

Mr. BARKLEY. I agree with those who think that it will probably be wise to have some declaration in this bill with respect to this subsection.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, the Senator agreed yesterday morning, to all intents and purposes, with the declaration contained in my amendment.

Mr. BARKLEY. I agreed to the principle of it, and I still

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Then, why talk about it now? Let us have it decided.

Mr. BARKLEY. I have not talked about it much, but it has been talked about all day. That is all we have talked about. It is the only amendment and the only part of the bill that has been under discussion all day. I wish to talk about the substitute which has been offered for the Senator's amendment, as well as his own amendment, because I have scribbled off something which I think will probably satisfy both Senators.

The substitute of the Senator from Connecticut creates more confusion than anybody could possibly imagine in connection with the language of the amendment of the Senator from Wyoming. It starts out by saying, "Provided, That no funds, whether loans or expenditures." There is nothing in this subsection about loans. There is no provision in it for spending any money. The Federal Government is not going to expend a dollar. It is only lending money to public bodies for the purposes set out in the provision, and that might even be construed to mean that even if the cities under any circumstances had money of their own, they could not expend it in connection with any loan they might have had from the Public Works Administration. It is needless to have the word "expenditures" in the measure, because this is a loan proposition, and not an expenditure proposition.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, do not the constitutions and the statutes of the several States define very accurately when and under what conditions a municipality may purchase a plant and start in competition with utilities or manufacturing or private industry?

Mr. BARKLEY. Undoubtedly that is true.

Mr. WALSH. Then, how is making a loan to a municipality going to change any of those laws?

Mr. BARKLEY. It is not going to change any of those laws, but it can provide a means by which a community may carry out its powers by obtaining a loan from the Federal Government.

Mr. WALSH. Under local law?

Mr. BARKLEY. Under local law; yes. There is nothing we can do to change local law with respect to their power.

The substitute further provides that no such loan can be made "to any Federal, State, or local public body, or to any person or corporation."

There is not a single syllable in this subsection which would authorize a loan to any person or corporation. No one can borrow any money under this subsection except a city, town, State, or district that is a public body; so that the language prohibiting the lending of any money to persons or corporations has no proper place in the amendment, because it could not be done anyway, for any purpose, under the bill.

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield. Mr. DANAHER. This morning I extended the Senator the courtesy of submitting to him a copy of the proposed amendment. At that time he had a carbon copy of the one which, has since been redrafted, and the word "person" is not in it. That will dispose of that, will it not?

Mr. BARKLEY. This copy is the one the Senator gave me, and he did not advise me he had changed it.

Mr. DANAHER. The Senator will recall that I asked that the clerk state the amendment, and I assumed that the Senator would change the amendment as the clerk read it, as the rest of us did.

Mr. BARKLEY. That was my fault, then, as nearly everything else is.

Mr. DANAHER. I do not agree to that.

Mr. BARKLEY. I do not think the exclusion of hospitals, colleges, or universities is a wise provision. I do not think we should specify what is excluded, because when we undertake to specify what is excluded, we may forget a hundred things which ought to be, but which we cannot think of at the time, and if the law were enacted in this form all that could possibly be excluded would be hospitals, colleges, and universities.

I do not know whether the draft I have written off is any better than the others, perhaps it is worse; but I have written off something which I think covers the situation.

On page 4, line 17-and I should like to have the attention of both the Senators to this-I propose to insert:

Provided. That no loan shall be made under this subsection for the establishment or expansion of any existing factory, mill, or plant engaged in the production of goods, wares, or commodities for sale in trade or commerce, nor for the establishment of any public utility which would compete with an existing utility giving adequate service at reasonable rates, subject to legal regulation, unless the Public Works Commissioner, after public hearings, advises that an offer has been made in good faith to purchase such existing facilities at a fair price, and that such offer has not been accepted.

It seems to me that is direct. It says what we mean. Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield.

Mr. NORRIS. Of course, I have had no chance to examine the proposed amendment, but from the Senator's reading of the proposal, it seems to me it is unnecessary to include provision for a public hearing and all that. If the Senator provides that it shall be illegal and improper, stop

Mr. BARKLEY. I understand that Secretary Ickes has adopted the plan of holding public hearings whenever these matters have come up. I raised the same objection to the language of the amendment of the Senator from Wyoming, but my attention was called to the fact that Secretary Ickes had really established the practice of holding public hearings, and I could see no objection to it.

Mr. NORRIS. I see no objection to a public hearing. It may be difficult to make my position understood, but there is in my mind a definite difference between putting that into the law, and laying a foundation for expensive, long-drawn-out litigation.

Mr. BARKLEY. I do not think the public hearing would be necessarily long drawn out.

Mr. NORRIS. Let him hold a public hearing if he desires. Mr. BARKLEY. The city authorities and the owners of the public utility would come before the Commissioner, and, on one side, contend that an offer had been made to buy at a fair price, and, on the other, they could contend that the price was not fair; and the decision of the Commissioner would decide.

Mr. NORRIS. I think that if we had had any trouble along that line in the past with a public utility, if there had been any indication of any trouble of that kind, there would be some foundation for inserting such a provision, but there

Mr. BARKLEY. I think there is force to the suggestion, and I entertained the idea myself. I do not really think the provision is necessary. But we do not seem to be able to get together on language which should go into the bill. Many Senators do not think any such amendment should be added. Some think we should eliminate altogether any reference to public utilities, and others do not; so I was making an effort to frame language which would accomplish what we are all trying to do, language which would seem to be more direct and to the point, because it would contain no kind of preamble, somewhat after the fashion of the amendment of the Senator from Wyoming.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield. Mr. BYRNES. I desire to ask the Senator a question. As I caught the reading of the amendment the Senator proposes, it provided that "no loan shall be made under this subsection for the establishment or expansion of any existing factory, mill, or plant."

I am wondering if the Senator's proposal is not open to the same criticism he has made of the proposal of the Sen-ator from Connecticut, for in the bill there is nothing, so far as I know, which provides for a loan to any individual or corporation for the establishment of any mill or plant, but only to States and subdivisions of States.

Mr. BARKLEY. I agree that there is nothing which authorizes a loan to a city to establish a factory to make shoes, or anything else, but someone seems to fear that lurking in the bill somewhere is such authority to make loans which might be used to establish plants to compete with existing private industry, and I want to clear that up. I do not think there is anything here granting such power; but if anyone fears there is, we ought to clear it up.

Mr. BYRNES. I do not think anyone fears it except my good friend the Senator from Connecticut, who feared it in the committee, and still entertains that fear, apparently; but no other Member of the Senate does.

Mr. BARKLEY. As between the amendment of the Senator from Wyoming and the substitute offered by the Senator from Connecticut, I would favor the amendment of the Senator from Wyoming, because I do not think the language in the substitute is adequate. I do not think we can safely name two or three things we will exempt, because we know the legal maxim inclusio unius est exclusio alterius. For the reasons I have stated I hope the substitute will not be agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. DANAHER] in the nature of a substitute for the amendment of the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. O'MAHONEY].

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. I suggest the absence of a quo-

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Seventy-five Senators having answered to their names, a quorum is present.

The clerk will again state the pending amendment.

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, in conformity with the suggestion of the Senator from Kentucky, I have stricken out the words "or expenditure" where they occur.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. In lieu of the amendment offered by Mr. O'Mahoney, as modified, Mr. Danaher proposes the following as a substitute:

No funds or loans shall be made available under this subsection No funds of loans shall be made available under this subsection to any Federal, State, or local public body, or to any corporation, for use by any such agency or corporation to purchase, establish, construct, relocate, or expand any mill, factory, plant, or commercial enterprise which is or will be as a result of such loan in competition with any existing industry or commercial enterprise, provided the limitation herein shall not apply to any such loan for a public hospital, college, or university.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the amendment offered by the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. DANAHER] in the nature of a substitute for the amendment offered by the Senator from Wyoming, as modified.

Mr. DANAHER. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DAVIS (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the junior Senator from Kentucky [Mr. LOGAN]. I transfer that pair to the junior Senator from Vermont [Mr. Gibson], who, if present, would vote as I am about to vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. GREEN (when his name was called). I have a pair with the junior Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. WILEY]. I transfer that pair to the senior Senator from New Jersey [Mr. Smathers] and will vote. I vote "nay."

Mr. GUFFEY (when his name was called). I have a pair on this vote with the junior Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. Tobey]. If present, the Senator from New Hampshire would vote "yea." If at liberty to vote, I should vote "nay."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. MINTON. I announce that the Senator from Texas [Mr. Connally] is absent because of illness.

The Senator from Arizona [Mr. ASHURST] and the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. REYNOLDS] are absent, due to illness in their families.

The Senator from Arkansas [Mrs. CARAWAY], the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. Smathers], the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. Lee], and the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. HARRISON] are detained on important public business.

The Senator from Ohio [Mr. Donahey], the Senator from Virginia [Mr. Glass], the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. Miller], the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. Logan], the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. Neely], the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. Overton], and the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. Thomas] are unavoidably detained.

The Senator from Minnesota [Mr. Lundeen], the Senator from Utah [Mr. King], the Senator from Arizona [Mr. Hayden], and the Senator from Florida [Mr. Pepper] are detained on official business. I am advised that if present and voting, the Senator from Utah would vote "yea."

Mr. AUSTIN. I desire to announce the following general pairs:

The Senator from Oregon [Mr. McNary] with the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. Harrison]; the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. Shipstead] with the Senator from Virginia [Mr. Glass]; the Senator from California [Mr. Johnson] with the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. Neely]; the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. Frazier] with the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. Miller]; and the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. Nye] with the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. Lee].

The result was announced—yeas 24, nays 44, as follows:

So Mr. Danaher's amendment in the nature of a substitute for Mr. O'Mahoney's amendment, as modified, was rejected

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question recurs on the amendment of the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. O'Ma-HONEY] as modified.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Chief Clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. GREEN (when his name was called). I have a pair with the junior Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. Wiley]. That pair has been transferred to the senior Senator from New Jersey [Mr. Smathers]. I vote "nay."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. DAVIS. I have a general pair with the junior Senator from Kentucky [Mr. Logan]. Not knowing how he would vote, I withhold my vote. If at liberty to vote I should vote "yea."

Mr. GUFFEY. On this question I have a pair with the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. Tobey], and therefore withhold my vote.

Mr. MINTON. I announce that the Senator from Texas [Mr. Connally] is absent because of illness.

The Senators from Arizona and North Carolina [Mr. ASHURST and Mr. REYNOLDS] are absent due to illness in their families.

The Senator from Arkansas [Mrs. Caraway], the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. Smathers], the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. Lee], and the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. Harrison] are detained on important public business.

The Senator from Ohio [Mr. DONAHEY], the Senator from Virginia [Mr. Glass], the Senator from Arkansas [Mr.

The Senator from Utah [Mr. King] is detained on official business. I am informed that if present and voting, the Senator from Utah would vote "yea."

Mr. AUSTIN. I announce the following pairs: The Senator from Oregon [Mr. McNary] with the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. Harrison]; the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. Frazier] with the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. Miller]; the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. Shipstead] with the Senator from Virginia [Mr. Glass]; the Senator from California [Mr. Johnson] with the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. Neely]; and the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. Nye] with the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. Lee].

If present, the Senator from California [Mr. Johnson] would vote "yea"; the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. Neely] would vote "nay"; the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. Shipstead] would vote "yea"; and the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. Frazier] would vote "nay."

The result was announced—yeas 46, nays 24, as follows:

So Mr. O'Mahoney's amendment, as modified, was agreed to.
Mr. TYDINGS obtained the floor.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me?

Mr. TYDINGS. I yield to the Senator from Kentucky.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, from day to day I think practically all Senators have hoped that we might dispose of the pending measure before we adjourned on each particular day. That was true yesterday. It has been true today. We have made practically no progress, having adopted one amendment after 8 hours of deliberation.

Mr. President, there seems to be some sort of undercurrent, which I cannot locate or describe, which is causing the consideration of the bill to drift. I am wondering if we have not gone far enough to reach an agreement. Anyway, I shall try.

I ask unanimous consent, assuming that we shall recess until Monday, that beginning with the consideration of the bill on Monday next no Senator shall speak more than once or longer than 15 minutes on the bill, or more than once or longer than 15 minutes on any amendment; and that at an hour not later than 5 o'clock p. m. the Senate shall proceed to vote on the bill and all amendments thereto.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, I ask the Senator to consider for a moment a suggestion for an amendment to the unanimous-consent request in the following respects:

First, that in respect of the amendments proposed, we exclude from the limitation any amendment affecting the highway provisions of the bill which have been stricken out.

Second, that a limitation be not placed upon the time of voting, but only upon the duration of time of debate by any Senator upon the bill or upon any amendment.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I do not see why any possible highway amendment should be put on a pedestal and exempted from the rule applying to other amendments. So far as I am concerned, and so far as I know, no highway amendment will be offered. I have reiterated that statement over and over again. I suppose nothing would be lost by agreeing to exempt one if some Senator should offer it. Inasmuch as I have heretofore included the exemption, I have no objection to doing so now. However, in view of the length of time the bill has occupied, there should be a time fixed to vote on Monday.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. TYDINGS. I yield.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. I am perfectly willing to agree to a limitation of debate. I think the debate has been very extensive. For nearly a week we have been in session from 11 o'clock in the morning until 11 o'clock or later at night. The bill certainly has been discussed in full detail, largely by the Senator from Kentucky himself.

Mr. BARKLEY. I should not say quite that. I did take some time at first.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. I am not objecting to the Senator from Kentucky taking as much time as he pleases, but I do object to the idea of fixing a time to vote on a bill of this very diffuse nature. In view of the varied form which amendments to the bill have taken I do not think we ought to tie our hands and possibly create such a situation that amendments of very great import might be offered at the very last moment before 5 o'clock, and be pending at the hour of 5 o'clock, without any opportunity to debate them.

So far as I am concerned, I am just as anxious as is the Senator from Kentucky to dispose of the bill. I am sure every other Senator is anxious to bring about disposition of this matter at the earliest practicable moment. I have not taken any time in the debate; but I do not think the Senate ought to be put in the situation of possibly being confronted with many amendments of great import to a bill of such diffuse nature without having an opportunity to debate them at all.

Mr. BARKLEY. I will say to the Senator that the subject is not so diffuse now as it was when we started.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. That is true; but we do not know how widely it may be diffused at 5 o'clock Monday.

Mr. BARKLEY. If, after all the debate which has been in progress on the bill during the past week, in sessions which have lasted 11 or 12 hours a day, the important amendments which might be offered to it have not been conjured up, and could not be until 5 o'clock, a rather peculiar situation is presented.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Does not the Senator think that with the rather drastic limitation on debate of 15 minutes on the bill and 15 minutes on any amendment, the process of arriving at a disposition will move along sufficiently speedily without attempting arbitrarily at this time to fix an hour at which to vote? No Senator has any desire to fillibuster to delay the bill. I think the limitation on debate will operate to bring the measure to a sufficiently speedy conclusion without at this time fixing an hour to vote.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. TYDINGS. I yield to the Senator from Nevada.

Mr. McCARRAN. A request for an exemption from the rule has been suggested as to certain amendments. It has come to the attention of some of us during the day that an amendment proposed last evening, and voted down, might be revived in another form. I refer to the amendment pertaining to silver. I would not and could not consent to a limitation of debate if such an amendment were offered.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, it is apparent that we cannot obtain any agreement at this time. I withdraw the request.

SEVERAL SENATORS. Vote! Vote!

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, I do not know what we are to vote on. There is nothing before the Senate.

SEVERAL SENATORS. Vote on the bill!

Mr. TYDINGS. We cannot very well vote while I have the floor.

Mr. President, I send to the desk an amendment, which I ask to have stated.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment offered by the Senator from Maryland will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. At the end of the bill it is proposed to insert the following new section:

SEC. 20. (a) It shall be unlawful for any person to contribute to any candidate for office at any election, or to any political committee or political party, any amounts paid as dues, assessments, or fees by the members of any organization, lodge, or group, unless said dues, assessments, or fees were paid by such members for the sole purpose of alding a particular candidate, political committee, or political party, and such members had actual knowledge that the amounts so paid by them were to be used solely for such purpose. As used in this section, the terms "candidate," "election," and "political committee" shall have the meanings assigned to them in section 302 of the Federal Corrupt Practices Act, 1925.

(b) Any person who violates any of the provisions of this sec-

(b) Any person who violates any of the provisions of this section shall be fined not more than $1,000, or imprisoned not more than 1 year, or both.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, I do not believe the amendment really needs any explanation on my part. It does not prevent any member of any organization, or any organization itself, from collecting dues from the members of the organization for political purposes. It provides only that if dues are collected for general purposes, they may not be given to any political candidate or to any political party; but assessments and dues may be paid by members, and the organizations may give them over to political parties or to candidates, if the members know they are contributed for that particular purpose.

I have modified the amendment since I first broached it, because the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. Guffey] made the statement that in last year's gubernatorial election assessments were made by certain groups and organizations for political purposes with the knowledge of the members thereof. That could be done under the amendment. The amendment would only prohibit taking general funds which were not contributed for political purposes and handing them over by those at the top of the organization.

I hope there will be no objection to the amendment.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Maryland [Mr. Typings].

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that from this time forward—with the understanding that if the agreement is entered into the Senate will recess until Monday—during the remainder of the consideration of this bill no Senator shall speak more than once or longer than 15 minutes on the bill, or more than once or longer than 15 minutes on any amendment thereto.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, the acting minority leader [Mr. Austin] is temporarily absent. I ask the Senator to wait until he arrives. He will be here in a moment.

Mr. BARKLEY. Of course, that carries with it the exemption of the immortal road proposition, which has been here-tofore discussed.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, the Senator from New Hampshire is the leader now. Let him answer.

Mr. AUSTIN entered the Chamber.

Mr. BARKLEY. I will repeat my request. I ask unanimous consent that during the further consideration of this bill no Senator shall speak more than once or longer than 15 minutes on the bill, or more than once or longer than 15 minutes on any amendment, with the understanding that if a road amendment is offered it will be excluded from the agreement.

Mr. BYRD. An amendment dealing with roads, bridges, or tunnels.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, I understand this is on condition that the Senate will recess until Monday.

Mr. BARKLEY. I am planning to move a recess. We have some little preliminaries to dispose of first; but there will be no further discussion of this bill, I think.

Mr. AUSTIN. With that understanding, I have no objection.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection? The Chair hears no objection, and it is so ordered.

EXECUTIVE SESSION

Mr. BARKLEY. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business.

EXECUTIVE REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

Mr. McKELLAR, from the Committee on Appropriations, reported favorably the nomination of Denis W. Delaney, of Massachusetts to be Work Projects Administrator for Massachusetts.

He also, from the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads, reported favorably the nominations of sundry postmasters.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The reports will be placed on the Executive Calendar.

If there be no further reports of committees, the clerk will state the nominations on the calendar.

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE

The legislative clerk read the nomination of Francis M. Shea to be Assistant Attorney General in charge of the Claims Division of the Department of Justice.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

THE JUDICIARY

The legislative clerk read the nomination of Howard L. Doyle to be United States attorney for the southern district of Illinois.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

HIGH COMMISSIONER TO PHILIPPINE ISLANDS

The legislative clerk read the nomination of Francis Bowes Sayre to be United States High Commissioner to the Philippine Islands.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

FEDERAL DEPOSIT INSURANCE CORPORATION

The legislative clerk read the nomination of Leo T. Crowley to be a member of the Board of Directors of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

The legislative clerk read the nomination of Phillips Lee Goldsborough to be a member of the Board of Directors of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

Amy Foster to be postmaster at Warrensburg, in the State of Missouri.

PENNSYLVANIA

Charles A. O'Donnell to be postmaster at Frackville, in the State of Pennsylvania.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

SATURDAY, JULY 29, 1939

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

Rev. Clarkson R. Banes, pastor of Waugh Methodist Church, Washington, D. C., offered the following prayer:

Our gracious Heavenly Father and Father of our Lord, Jesus Christ, we humbly bow in Thy presence to acknowledge Thee as our Father. We are Thy children. Look upon us with Thy love, we beseech Thee, and richly reward us according to our faith.

May Thy blessings be upon this legislative body, and wilt Thou give them wisdom in all of their deliberations. May there be Thy divine guidance upon all the affairs of our Nation, and may our people live in peace and happiness. May the gospel of righteousness and of brotherly love be proclaimed throughout our land and even beyond our own borders until righteousness shall reign everywhere.

May Thy love be in our hearts this day and may we so live that the spirit of love shall go forth from our lives into the lives of others with whom we come in contact. Forgive us when we have gone astray, and lead us always in Thy way. We humbly ask in the name of Jesus. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate, by Mr. St. Claire, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed a bill of the following title, in which the concurrence of the House is requested:

S. 2879. An act to authorize the posthumous appointment of the late Arthur Mortimer Fields, Jr., to be an ensign of the United States Navy.

The message also announced that the Senate agrees to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the House to the bill (S. 188) entitled "An act to provide for the administration of the United States courts, and for other purposes."

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. BLAND. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Virginia?

There was no objection.

Mr. BLAND. Mr. Speaker, it is well at times to recall great events in the world's history. Parliamentary institutions are menaced by various movements. I wish to remind the House that tomorrow will be the three hundred and twentieth anniversary according to the calendar, old style, and August 9 will be the three hundred and twentieth anniversary according to the calendar, new style, of the meeting at Jamestown, Va., of the first legislative assembly in the New World. The assembly consisted of a Council of State, made up of the Governor and his councilors, and of another body consisting of two burgesses chosen out of each town hundred or other particular plantation. This popular body was known as the House of Burgesses. For the first time a legislative body opened its session with prayer.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. BLAND. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD and include therein historical and other quotations. I shall also include a brief summary of the laws passed at the first legislative assembly in the New World.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Virginia?

There was no objection.

IMPORT PROVISIONS OF AGRICULTURAL ADJUSTMENT ACT OF 1933

Mr. JONES of Texas. Mr. Speaker, on yesterday in the passage of the bill (H. R. 7171) to amend section 22 of the Agricultural Adjustment Act, through a printer's mistake the word "are" was left out of line 11. I ask unanimous consent that in the engrossment of the bill the Clerk be authorized to insert the word "are" after the word "or" in line 11.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

THE LATE HONORABLE SALVATORE A. COTILLO

Mr. KEOGH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. KEOGH. Mr. Speaker, may I, in view of the nature of the bill before us today, call to the attention of the House and the country, of the untimely death in New York City of one, who not many years ago, arrived in this country as an immigrant boy-a man educated in the public schools and colleges of New York-a member of the bar-the first native of Italy to serve in the Legislature of the State of New York and to serve on the New York Supreme Court bench who, upon the completion of his first 14-year term, was relected with the endorsement of all parties and received the largest vote given that year to a judicial candidate, who during his judicial career naturalized more than 30,000 persons, who spent a whole life in public service and whose passing shocks his friends-Supreme Court Justice Salvatore A. Cotillo-his star rises tonight, an immigrant, yes, but an American, for are we not immigrants all-Americans all.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. LUDLOW. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and include therein an address delivered by Judge Wilfred Bradshaw, of Indianapolis, at the grave of President Lincoln's mother in Indiana.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Indiana?

There was no objection.

ACCEPTANCE OF AN EASEMENT WITH RESPECT TO CERTAIN LANDS IN NEW MEXICO

Mr. DEROUEN. Mr. Speaker, I call up the conference report on the bill (S. 1558) to provide for the acceptance of an easement with respect to certain lands in New Mexico, and for other purposes, and ask unanimous consent that the statement be read in lieu of the report.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Louisiana?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the statement.

The conference report and statement are as follows:

CONFERENCE REPORT

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the House to the bill (S. 1558) to provide for the acceptance of an easement with respect to certain lands in New Mexico, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:
That the House recede from its amendment numbered 2.

That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the the House numbered 4, and agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 1: That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House numbered 1, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the House amendment insert the following: "Commissioner of Work Projects"; and the House agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 3: That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House numbered 3, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the House amendment insert the fol-lowing: "Commissioner of Work Projects"; and the House agree to the same.

STATEMENT

The managers on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the House to the bill (S. 1558) to provide for the acceptance of an easement with respect to certain lands in New Mexico, and for other purposes, submit the following statement in explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon by the conferees and recommended in the accommended in the accommended in the accommended in the accommended.

on amendments Nos. 1 and 3: These amendments struck out the words "Works Progress Administrator" in two places in the bill and inserted in lieu thereof "Commissioner of the Work Projects Administration." The Senate recedes with amendments inserting the words "Commissioner of Work Projects," which is the proper designation of the office as now constituted.

On amendment No. 2: This amendment of the House struck out that part of section 2 which makes the section applicable to the reservoir referred to in this legislation as well as to the dam. Since referred to the easement and the reversionary clause involved referred to the dam and reservoir together, it is necessary that this language be restored. The House recedes.

On amendment No. 4: This was a clerical amendment changing a reference to the Works Progress Administration to a reference to the "Work Projects Administration." The Senate recedes.

RENÉ L. DEROUEN, KNUTE HILL, J. W. ROBINSON, JAMES W. WADSWORTH, HARRY L. ENGLEBRIGHT Managers on the part of the House.

The conference report was agreed to. A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. HOUSTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kansas?

There was no objection.

Mr. HOUSTON. Mr. Speaker, they used to tell a story about three candidates who were running for the same office at one time, and in order for the voters to test the capacity and stability of the various candidates, a test was decided upon; so they got a skunk, put it in a room, and then sent the first candidate into the room. He stayed about a minute and came out. Then they sent the second candidate in, and he stayed about 2 minutes, and he came out. The third candidate then went in, and the skunk came out. [Laughter.]

Mr. Speaker, last night we had a Democratic caucus. This morning when I picked up the Congressional Record I was very much pleased to see that there was nothing stated therein regarding the caucus; but you can imagine my amazement when I picked up this morning's Post and found almost a stenographic report of everything that was alleged to have happened here last night. All I can say is that the skunk came out. [Laughter and applause.]

HON. ROYAL C. JOHNSON

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi?

There was no objection.

[Mr. RANKIN addressed the House. His remarks appear in the Appendix.]

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the Record and to insert therein a copy of the proceedings, together with the short addresses made by the friends of Mr. Johnson who appeared and participated in the presentation of an oil painting of him to the Committee on World War Veterans' Legislation, and that my remarks be printed in the Appendix.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi?

There was no objection.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. MASON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the Record and to include therein a short article on the new proposed spending-lending bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

Mr. Keefe asked and was given permission to revise and extend his own remarks in the Record.

TAXES OF THE GREAT LAKES STEEL CORPORATION

Mr. BENDER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

Mr. BENDER. Mr. Speaker, an interesting situation comes to light out Michigan way. The Great Lakes Steel Corporation had its taxes raised by a mere trifle of $6,000,000 out in Ecorse, Mich. Lo and behold! the 14 union organizations within the company's employee structure promptly protested to the Board of Review with such telling effect that the increase was cut down to $2,000,000. They realized at once that this huge boost in taxes would inevitably bring an increase in steel prices with a resultant loss of orders to competitors, with decreased wages and fewer jobs.

Here is a new development in the field of labor relations. Intelligent labor leaders are coming to realize that high taxes invariably affect the man who toils, the man who can least afford to absorb the burden. [Applause.]

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that my colleague [Mr. Clevenger] may extend his remarks in the Record by printing a statement made by him before the Committee on Appropriations.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

BLACK HAWK WAR ANNIVERSARY

Mr. BOLLES. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Wisconsin?

There was no objection.

[Mr. Bolles addressed the House. His remarks appear in the Appendix.]

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. ANGELL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD and to include therein a letter from the National Grange on the subject of lending and spending legislation.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oregon?

There was no objection.

Mr. KUNKEL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimons consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD and to include therein a resolution by the Shippensburg Legion Post relative to the antifireworks bill in Pennsylvania.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

Mr. MARTIN of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the Record with particular reference to an article in the National Geographic Magazine concerning the State of Iowa.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Iowa?

There was no objection.

WHY JOHN L. LEWIS LOST HIS TEMPER

Mr. HOFFMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 minute and to revise and extend my remarks. The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Mr. Speaker, John L. Lewis is accustomed to enforcing his will through his "goon squads" and "wrecking crews." He has often reminded the President of his United Mine Workers' New Deal campaign contribution. He has called the President's attention to what Lewis considered an unpaid political debt. When anyone ventures to oppose him, he flies into a rage. That is the method of all tyrants.

Correctly or incorrectly, Lewis apparently has been advised that Vice President Garner does not believe in Lewis' methods of levying tribute; hence, when opportunity offered, Lewis disclosed his true self by making an unfounded attack upon the Vice President. It is a sweet racket that Lewis has been working, and any exposure of or interference with it is reason for a tirade.

In the 2-year period to which I referred day before yesterday, Lewis collected over $7,000,000 from the miners. What became of the money? From July 17, 1935, to May 18, 1937, Lewis himself, for his salary and expenses, got $65,-768.11. That is something; that is a tidy sum, and all collected from the workingman for whom Lewis pretends to feel so sorry.

Then Lewis likes to make presents, and he saw to it that $6,250 be allowed for the purchase of Democratic campaign books at $250 each. Do you think any of the miners enjoy looking at the pictures in those books at that price? And can Lewis name one miner whose money he spent for the picture books who ever saw one of them?

Lewis likes to do things in a big way, so he saw to it that the United Mine Workers contributed $458,418.91 to the Roosevelt campaign and, after his candidate was elected, so that he might have an inaugural befitting royalty, Lewis took from the money collected from the miners $2,500 to contribute to the splendor of that inaugural spectacle.

Yes; Lewis is mad at GARNER, and he is mad at anyone who calls attention to the way in which he gets his money and the manner in which he spends it.

How much did he collect in Pennsylvania for the Tom Kennedy campaign and what did he do with it? Who got it? How much of an assessment has he levied on the United Mine Workers, to be spent for political purposes in the State of Kentucky to put in the Governor's chair John Young Brown, so as to have in the executive office of that State a man who he thinks will do his bidding?

Like a bee interrupted in its honey collecting, Lewis buzzes and stings whoever happens to come within the range of his venom. [Applause.]

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. HORTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD and to include therein an editorial from the Washington Star.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. SPRINGER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD on the housing bill and on the W. P. A. matter, and in the latter to include certain short excerpts from some letters that I have received.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? There was no objection.

INTERSTATE COMMERCE ACT

Mr. LEA. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (S. 2009) to amend the Interstate Commerce Act, as amended, by extending its application to additional types of carriers in transportation and modifying certain provisions thereof, and for other purposes, with House amendments thereto, insist on the House amendments, and agree to the conference requested by the Senate.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. WARREN. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object, but, of course, I say to the gentleman from California that I shall not object. This is the transportation bill. We all realize that the water section of the bill was retained, but there were three or four very vital amendments written into that bill by the House, on which the gentleman from California [Mr. Lea] or any other Member of the House could have had a roll call had he so desired. Those amendments, briefly, were the ones offered by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Jones], the one offered by the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. Whittington], an amendment offered by the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. HARRINGTON], protecting the rights of the railroad employees, and a very vital amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. Wadsworth], which was in identical form with an amendment already passed in the Senate, offered by Senator Miller. I think it is only fair to the House, in view of the fact that no separate vote was asked for by the gentleman from California on those amendments, that he state to the House that he will insist on those amendments being incorporated in the final conference report.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WARREN. Yes.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. There was a certain amendment which I proposed to the so-called Ramspeck part of the bill. which was accepted by the committee and that I think should

Mr. DISNEY. Then there was still another amendment, the barge-line amendment. That seems to me extremely important, to at least my section of the country and to the gentlemen with whom I have discussed it. I think that ought to be kept in the bill.

Mr. WARREN. I agree with the gentleman. The main point, I think, is this-and I think all the amendments were very important-but in the case of the Wadsworth amendment the House adopted it in the identical language of the Senate, and, of course, the long-and-short-haul amendment means nothing so far as affecting the Wadsworth amendment is concerned, but I do think, in view of the fact that the gentleman from California did not ask for a separate vote. that he ought to give the House real assurance as to that amendment.

Mr. MAY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WARREN. Yes.

Mr. MAY. I am not interested in the amendments or anything connected with them, but does not the gentleman from North Carolina think, in view of the fact that the House requires the conferees, and particularly the chairman, to contend for the House position, it is rather extraordinary to ask the chairman of any committee to commit himself?

Mr. WARREN. Not at all. This statement is made, as the gentleman from Kentucky knows, on bill after bill, before it goes to conference. It has been made here a dozen times during this session of Congress. I am merely calling the attention of the chairman of the committee and the chairman of the House conferees to the action of the committee, which later proved to be the unanimous action of the House.

Mr. RANKIN. And let me say to the gentleman from Kentucky that on occasions of this kind I have seen the House instruct conferees, as it has a right to do. I think the gentleman from North Carolina is entirely right, and that we ought to have assurance from the conferees that this amendment will be held in the bill.

Mr. MAY. I am not arguing about the amendment being proper or improper, but I think it is embarrassing to a chairman to be told what he must do in advance.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California? Does the gentleman from North Carolina yield the floor?

Mr. WARREN. Mr. Speaker, I am not objecting. The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The Speaker appointed the following conferees: Mr. Lea, Mr. Crosser, Mr. Bulwinkle, Mr. Cole of Maryland, Mr. WOLVERTON, Mr. HOLMES, Mr. HALLECK.

AMENDING CIVIL SERVICE RETIREMENT ACT

Mr. RAMSPECK. Mr. Speaker, I call up the conference report on the bill (S. 281) to amend further the Civil Service Retirement Act, approved May 29, 1930, as amended, and I ask unanimous consent that the statement may be read in lieu of the report.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Georgia?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the statement.

The conference report and statement are as follows:

The managers on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the House to the bill (S. 281) to amend further the Civil Service Retirement Act approved May 29, 1930, as amended, submit the following statement in explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon by the conferees and recommended in the accompanying conference report:

The House amendment to the bill was in effect a substitute bill for the one that passed the Senate, in that the House Committee on the Civil Service struck out everything in the Senate bill after the enacting clause and inserted a new bill as one amendment, which passed the House.

The Senate conferees have receded from the language of the Senate bill, but have refused to accept all of the sections of the House amendment. The House conferees have agreed to eliminate sections 1, 2, 6, 7, 8, 10, and 11 of the House amendment.

The following statement describes the resulting bill as agreed to

The following statement describes the resulting bill as agreed to by your conferees:

Section 1 will extend the Civil Service Retirement Act to post-masters who have been classified under the civil-service law and rules, and will also grant legislative and judicial employees an additional 6 months from January 1, 1940, to exercise an option of coming within the terms of the Retirement Act.

Section 2 deals with the computation of annuities and leaves of coming within the terms of the Retirement Act.

Section 2 deals with the computation of annuities and leaves the law as it now exists, with two additions, viz: (1) That the Government's part of the annuity shall not be less than the employee's purchasable annuity, and (2) that an employee may elect at the time of his retirement to receive a reduced annuity for himself with a survivorship annuity for a duly designated beneficiary.

Section 3 waives the time limit of 6 months as provided in present law for making application for retirement benefits for present law for making application for retirement benefits for mentally incompetent employees, who will be given 1 year after restoration to competency or the appointment of a fiduciary, whichever is the earlier. This section also permits retention on the annuity roll of recovered disability annuitants for 1 year instead of 90 days as under existing law.

Section 4 authorizes employees at their option to deposit, in addition to the compulsory contribution of 3½ percent of their salaries, additional sums in multiples of $25 but not to exceed 10 percent of their annual salaries to purchase additional annuity. Section 5 makes the effective date of the act January 1, 1940.

All of the above sections retained and agreed to by the con-

All of the above sections retained and agreed to by the conferees were embodied in the House amendment as originally passed.

ROBERT RAMSPECK, JENNINGS RANDOLPH. EDITH NOURSE ROGERS Managers on the part of the House.

Mr. RAMSPECK. Mr. Speaker, the bill as it passed the Senate had some changes in the optional retirement ages. The House made certain changes in that. The Senate bill provided for deductions from employees' salaries of 4 percent, and the House bill made it 5 percent. In the conference we were unable to agree on the difference between 4 percent and 5 percent, due to the objections of certain representatives of employee groups. For that reason the conference struck out all of the language of the bill reducing the present optional ages of retirement, or in any way changing the ages of retirement.

I just wanted to make that explanation. Of course, it saves the Government some money.

I have no requests for time, Mr. Speaker, and I move the previous question on the adoption of the conference report.

Mr. Speaker, under the privilege given me to revise and extend my remarks relative to the conference report on S. 281, I am including at the end of this statement a letter from William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, which is self-explanatory.

I think it is also fair to state that notwithstanding the letter from Mr. Green, Mr. Frank Bennett, president of the Railway Mail Association; Mr. William Horner, legislative representative of the National Federation of Post Office Clerks, and Mr. Charles I. Stengle, president of the American Federation of Government Employees, each personally assured me of their willingness to compromise the controversy relative to the percentage to be deducted from the salaries of the employees at 41/2 percent, in order that a reduction of the optional ages of retirement might be secured.

The credit or the blame, depending upon the point of view, for the failure of the conferees to agree about this matter must rest with the leaders of those employee groups who refused to compromise.

Mr. Jacob Baker, president of the United Federal Workers of America, also assured me of his willingness to compromise if necessary to secure lower optional retirement.

Other groups of Federal employee organizations expressed their views in a letter signed by Mr. Luther C. Steward, legislative chairman, and Mr. John J. Barrett, chairman of the council representing the National Federation of Federal Employees, the National Rural Letter Carriers Association, United National Association of Post Office Clerks, National Association of Postal Supervisors, National Federation of Post Office Motor Vehicle Employees, and the National Association of Post Office Laborers, in a letter dated July 20, 1939, attached hereto.

In more than 100 speeches delivered to groups of Federal employees during the past 2 or 3 years, I have stated to them frankly that I could not and would not support legislation reducing the optional ages of retirement unless the contribution of the employees was substantially increased.

In the face of the opposition of certain groups, the Senate conferees declined to yield in the matter of contributions, and as a result, the agreement was reached to eliminate the lower optional ages.

AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR, Washington, D. C., July 22, 1939.

Hon. ROBERT RAMSPECK,

House Office Building, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR CONGRESSMAN: I am writing you as a member of the House conferees, who along with Senate conferees, will endeavor to adjust the differences which exist between the two branches of Congress in the enactment of the retirement bill S. 281. The American Federation of Labor and the organizations affiliated with it which are directly affected by this measure favor a 4-percent deduction in this retirement bill.

I am transmitting this opinion and attitude of the American Federation of Labor and the organizations affiliated with it to you and your associates on the conference committee referred to, with the hope that you may agree to accept this recommendation providing for a 4-percent deduction as transmitted to you by the American Federation of Labor.

Sincerely yours,

WM. GREEN. President, American Federation of Labor.

NATIONAL LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL OF FEDERAL EMPLOYEE ORGANIZATIONS, Washington, D. C., July 20, 1939.

Hon. ROBERT RAMSPECK,

Chairman, House Conference Committee on S. 281, Washington, D. C.

DEAR CONGRESSMAN RAMSPECK: You have before you today consideration of S. 281. Favorable action on this measure is of the utmost importance to Federal employees, and we hope that the conferees may reach an agreement on it today.

The National Legislative Council of Federal Employee Organizations is strongly in favor of S. 281, particularly the following

Optional retirement after 30 years of service at age 60; Optional retirement after 15 years of service and up to 30 at

Optional retirement after 30 years of service at age 55 with immediate annuity in lesser amount;

Inclusion of postmasters of all classes;
Five percent deductions from employees' salaries;
Annuity for second life at option of employee;
Disability limit increased from 90 days to 1 year; and Option of depositing 10 percent of annual salary in multiples of

The National Legislative Council represents nearly 200,000 Federal employees in the National Rural Letter Carriers Association, National Association of Postal Supervisors, United National Association of Post Office Clerks, and the National Federation of Federal Employees.

Sincerely,

LUTHER C. STEWARD, Legislative Chairman.

Attest:

Chairman of the Council.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

The conference report was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

THE HOUSING BILL

Mr. LEAVY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Without objection it is so ordered. There was no objection.

Mr. LEAVY. Mr. Speaker, early next week we will be called upon to vote on the housing bill providing for an $800,000,000 authorization. Yesterday I secured from the Housing Authority certain facts and figures as to what had been done with the authorized money of last session and what is proposed to be done with this money if we pass the legislation. I placed that in the Appendix of the RECORD and it will be found on page 3602 and 3 pages following. I did that solely for the purpose of giving the membership the facts. An examination of those facts will disclose that the question is neither a sectional one nor is it a political one. The breakdown shows every State that has secured allocations and every State that has made application. Then it shows the cities and towns within those States that are directly interested in this legislation.

I merely took this time to suggest to the membership that an impartial examination of those facts will place each of us in a better position to intelligently pass upon the legislation when it comes before us.

SUPPRESSION OF CERTAIN SUBVERSIVE ACTIVITIES

Mr. HOBBS. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill (H. R. 5138) to make unlawful attempts to overthrow the Government of the United States; to require licensing of civilian military organizations; to make unlawful attempts to interfere with the discipline of the Army and Navy; to require registration and fingerprinting of aliens; to enlarge the jurisdiction of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals in certain cases; and for other purposes.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill H. R. 5138, with Mr. Chapman in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. When the Committee rose yesterday there was pending an amendment offered by the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. MARTIN].

The gentleman from Colorado is recognized for 5 minutes. Mr. SMITH of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the amendment may again be reported.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the Clerk will again report the amendment offered by the gentleman from Colorado.

There was no objection.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Martin of Colorado: On page 24, line 11, after the word "anarchists", strike out the period, insert a comma and the words "Communists, Nazis, or Fascists."

THE UNPARDONABLE SIN

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. Mr. Chairman, I was brought up in an environment where I became imbued with the old doctrine that "while the lamp holds out to burn the vilest sinner may return." I also heard in a vague way about the unpardonable sin, the unpardonable sin against the Holy Ghost; that "all manner of sin and blasphemy shall be forgiven unto men, but the blasphemy against the Holy Ghost shall not be forgiven neither in this world nor the world to come."

Now, that single unpardonable sin was denounced by the Saviour. A man could commit all manner of sin, even murder, said the Saviour, and he would be forgiven, but if he committed blasphemy against the Holy Ghost he should never be forgiven. As far as we know down to this time, that is the only unpardonable sin in the world that man is capable of committing. But in this bill we are inventing another unpardonable sin, a man-made sin, of which, if a man has once been guilty, he shall never be forgiven. For him there shall be no repentence, no redemption, and no pardon.

TORQUEMADA AND THE INQUISITION OUTDONE

Let me read the anathema of the bill, which places the curse of America, like the brand upon the brow of Cain, forever upon those who fall beneath the ban of the law,

It is enough to make Thomas Jefferson turn over in his grave. It is without precedent in the history of American legislation. It is an invention of intolerance contrary to every principle of democracy and abhorent to the spirit of Christianity. It seems incredible that it should be written into the law by the elected representatives of the American people or that it will be sustained by the courts of the land when in due course it reaches them. Indeed, I doubt that it will ever reach them. The provision reads as follows:

It being the intent and purpose of this section that membership in any one of the classes of aliens enumerated in section 1 of this act, at any time, of no matter how short duration, or how far in the past, irrespective of its termination, or of how it may have ceased, shall require deportation.

Only a mind incapable of a true concept of Americanism could have conceived this utterance, worthy of Torquemada and the Inquisition.

At any time, of no matter how short duration, or how far in the past, irrespective of its termination, or of how it may have ceased.

That sentence in all its inescapable implications, its hopelessness for humanity, its gross violation of all experience and of every instinct of reason and justice, would have taxed the imagination of the blackest tyrants of history. They asked only that a man recant, but under the bill there will be no recanting. Even Torquemada, whose name stands in history as the symbol of persecution, published a decree offering grace and pardon to all who presented themselves before the tribunal of the Inquisition and avowed their fault. But there is no tribunal in this bill before which erring humanity may appear and avow its fault. If a man stumbles for a moment, he is damned forever.

There are some good things in this bill and some not so good, and the foregoing is a sample; but the class who are to be condemned to everlasting perdition from the standpoint of Americanism in this bill are not the only classes who, in my judgment, if there is an unpardonable sin, are guilty of that sin against this country. Since I know the bill will pass, no matter what is in it, I propose by my amendment to treat them all alike; that we shall not make flesh of one and fish of another; that if there are other "isms" besides the "ism," not specifically named in this bill but intended and denounced by it, who are foresworn enemies of the American form of government and dedicated to the proposition of destroying it, we ought to equally denounce them in this bill.

This bill means communism and communism only. Let us name it, and name with it the two other "isms" whose goal is the destruction of America. That is the purpose of my amendment.

You will find in line 7, on page 24, section 1, enumerated classes which shall be excluded from admission into the United States and deported from it.

(a) Aliens who are anarchists.

My amendment simply proposes to add to that: "Communists, Nazis, or Fascists." This is the same amendment I offered to the Hobbs bill when that bill was before the House. The objection to the amendment at that time was that it affected in some way not explained some other provision of the alien laws. In view of the fact, however, that we are now amending those provisions in this bill, it seems to me that it is not only entirely germane and relevant, but it is absolutely essential to the rounding out of our statutory policy in dealing with aliens. These three words could take the place of several legalistic pages in the bill and everybody would know what they mean.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 3 additional minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Colorado?

There was no objection.

Several Members rose.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. I am sorry, I have not the time to answer any questions.

I called to the attention of the House when I presented this amendment before that anarchists, so far as I know, are an obsolete cult in this country. I do not know of any anarchist activities being reported in this country. I have not seen them mentioned in the papers in years, but if they are left in this country they would not include the three classes I propose to add to this bill, because an anarchist is a man who believes in no form of government, who is opposed to all forms of government. That charge cannot be laid to Communists, Nazis, and Fascists, because they believe in plenty of government, they believe in all government, they believe that men are made for government, not governments for man. They have the strongest, most efficient, and most orderly governments in the world. That language, therefore, would really not affect communism or nazi-ism or fascism.

The next paragraph (b) is directed entirely against members of societies, organizations, and groups and all that sort of thing who teach or advocate opposition to all organized government. That would not embrace the three classes I seek to reach.

ALL FOREIGN "ISMS" LOOK ALJKE

It is well known to all Members of this House that there is more than one European "ism" operating against the American form of government and democracy in this country. There are those who today in their embassies and in their consulates are plotting internal warfare against the United States, so that if we got into another war we would have the Black Tom and the Kingsland explosions duplicated one-hundredfold. I read an article the other day by one of the Washington correspondents who said that all these trails of espionage and sedition and plotting against this Government led to the doors of certain consulates in this country, but the doors were locked to them by international comity.

So far as I am concerned, I would bash those doors open. I would do more than that; I would padlock those doors. Why should this Government permit the existence of such things in this country as foreign national spy centers right here in Washington, plotting the destruction of this Government just as they did during the World War? What objection can there be to this amendment? Can we afford to go on record by voting this amendment down, and thereby, by implication, favoring the excluding of those classes from the operation of the law? I am going to get a division on this amendment and count noses this time.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. I yield.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. I would just like to say to the gentleman that out on the west coast we have one consul who goes out and makes speeches to foreigners about the glories of a certain dictatorial form of government.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. Why, sure. One of them is just as deep in the mud as the other is in the mire, but some gentlemen here in the House are soft pedaling on the one you refer to. You never hear them denounce the Nazis or the Fascists—always the Communists. They are all anti-American; they are all equally consecrated to the destruction of this form of government. They all consider America their No. 1 enemy in the world, because it is the greatest and most powerful democracy in the world. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. HOBBS. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

Mr. Chairman, there is a great deal of merit in what the distinguished gentleman from Colorado says. I feel, however, that it would be a mistake for the House to follow his logic.

The word "anarchist," as he said himself, means one who believes in no government, no order, no courts, or other forms of organized society. It is perfectly permissible, therefore, as we have done, to prevent such a person from coming into our midst, or to deport one who has illegally come in. The gentleman is mistaken in his statement that there are none in this country now; in fact, when the Hobbs bill was under consideration I was waited on by a committee, one of whom advanced the only novel argument that I heard during the whole of the discussion with reference to that bill, and it was that anarchists should not be deported, for they were the best people here. They felt that my bill was a measure of religious persecution, because anarchists were the most Christlike people in our body politic. That was the only novel argument made in the discussion. At any rate, there are people like that here who are constantly trying to get their relatives or cult members in.

This amendment would add Fascists, Nazis, and Communists to those banned. The adoption of this amendment would violate our solemn treaties with Russia, Italy, and Germany. Although we have the undoubted right to do so, I maintain that it would not be the part of wisdom for us to pass this sweeping ban.

Now, then, the other reason we oppose this amendment is because it is an attempt to legislate by labels. It might be that one member of these groups—a Fascist, a Communist, or a Nazi-would prove himself to be a bad actor. But it is equally true that there are others who would not be in any sense dangerous. Therefore, on the whole, I sincerely hope the gentleman's amendment will be voted down.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOBBS. I yield with pleasure to the gentleman from Colorado.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. We have a treaty with Russia?

Mr. HOBBS. Yes, sir.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. It is proposed by this legislation to deport a man from this country if he has ever been a Communist. The sole fact of communistic affiliation, no matter how remote, is sufficient. That is the form of government which only Russia has. Is that not a violation of the treaty with Russia?

Mr. HOBBS. In answer to the gentleman's question, I beg to assure him there is no such provision in the bill. The bill defines those aliens who are dangerous to be those who advocate the preaching and practicing or belonging to an organization that does so of the destruction of this form of government by force or violence.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. And that is communism.

Mr. HOBBS. The gentleman so interprets the law, and in many cases he might be right.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. That is the very essence of communism.

Mr. HOBBS. The gentleman has a right to his own interpretation.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. We know this bill is aimed at communism. I cannot see why we do not add the other two "isms," which are just as bad, and even more active in this country than communism. There is no use in the Congress shutting its eyes to the facts, because if we do we will wake up, just as we have in the case of Japan.

Mr. HOBBS. The fifth circuit court of appeals has held that the gentleman's interpretation is erroneous. In addition to that I submit that the definitive language of this bill applies equally to fascism and nazi-ism as much as to communism, and proof will have to be offered in the regular hearings provided under our immigration and naturalization statutes in each case to bring any one of the three groups within the purview of the law; and that applies just as much to one as to the other.

Mr. MURDOCK of Utah. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOBBS. I am always happy to yield to the gentleman from Utah.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. MURDOCK of Utah. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman may proceed for 1 additional

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Utah [Mr. MURDOCK]?

There was no objection.

Mr. MURDOCK of Utah. Does the gentleman know of any court in the United States or any action of the Secretary of Labor where an alien has been deported because of his affiliation or membership in either the Fascist or Nazi Party?

Mr. HOBBS. No, sir; I do not. I do not believe any such question could be properly presented in any deportation proceeding.

Mr. MURDOCK of Utah. But we do know that many of our courts have held that membership in the Communist Party is sufficient to warrant or support deportation.

Mr. HOBBS. In view of the proof made in the individual case, yes; that the defendant advocates the overthrow of this Government by violence.

Mr. MURDOCK of Utah. So that by leaving the language as it is now, coupled with the construction of certain court decisions, it places Russia in a little different category than either Italy or Germany would be. In my opinion, the argument of the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. MARTIN] is very sound that the bill is aimed by reason of those decisions particularly at the Communists and immigrants from Russia.

Mr. HOBBS. I do not think so.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. MARTIN].

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. Martin of Colorado) there were-ayes 21, noes 53.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment, which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. McCormack: Page 24, line 25, after the word "Government", insert "within the United States."

Page 25, line 16, after the word "Government", insert "within the United States."

United States.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Chairman, if you will notice the language, it says that this applies to any alien who believes, and so forth, in the overthrow by force or violence of the Government of the United States, or of all forms of law, or (2) the duty, necessity, or propriety of the unlawful assaulting or killing of any officer or officers-either of specific individuals or of officers generally—of the Government of the United States or of any other organized government.

Of course, we do not want to legislate here with reference to England, France, Czechoslovakia, or any place else. My amendment limits it to the United States or any organized government within the United States. For example, we have seen what has happened recently in Czechoslovakia. The Premier or President of that country is an exile and is in the United States now hoping that his people will again regain freedom. That language might possibly affect the activities of a man of that kind in the United States. I understand the amendment which I have offered is acceptable to the

Mr. FADDIS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. McCORMACK. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. FADDIS. Might not the gentleman's amendment make it possible for them, say, to advocate the overthrow of the Government of the United States in Hawaii or Alaska?

Mr. McCORMACK. Of course, "the United States" as used here means not only continental United States but all our possessions.

Mr. FADDIS. Anywhere?

Mr. McCORMACK. Certainly. The intent and construction of the language "within the United States" is that it is to apply to any area under the jurisdiction of our country. The purpose of this amendment is that we are legislating for the United States and do not want to interfere with activities within the United States which are proper, where aliens are organizing in a proper way in accordance with our law, in a law-abiding way, in the hope some day of obtaining freedom for their own people. For example, we have had in the past activities in the United States for the freedom of Ireland, for the freedom of Poland, and years ago for the freedom of Czechoslovakia, which is now practically eliminated as a result of recent European activities, yet the ambition exists and activities within our law are being engaged in in the United States in the hope that the people of other countries seeking will regain or attain their freedom. I know none of us want to interfere with the activities in the United States in accordance with our law of any such group, and my amendment will accomplish that purpose.

Mr. FADDIS. I fail to find in the bill anywhere a definition of terms that would make that clear.

Mr. McCORMACK. My language will be construed in the proper way, that this bill applies to the United States, and not only continental United States but any of our possessions. If there is any question about it, it can be corrected in the Senate. However, the language in its present form is so broad we are, in effect, as far as this provision is concerned, legislating for the whole world. What we intend to do is protect the United States from subversive activities. Any activity in the United States that has its effect or intended effect abroad must be in accordance with the law of the United States done in accordance with our law. The present language goes far beyond what is intended and what we should do. The committee is willing to accept the amendment. I believe it is an amendment which for our own protection we should incorporate into this bill. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. McCor-

MACK].

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. GWYNNE. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment. The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. GWYNNE: On page 26, line 20, after "1917", strike out the period and insert a comma and the following: "except as hereinafter provided."

On page 27, line 2, after "membership", strike out the period and On page 27, line 2, after "membership", strike out the period and the remainder of the section and insert a semicolon and the following: "Provided, however, That the fact of prior membership in any organization, association, society, or group referred to in section 1 of this title shall not of itself require deportation, if the said alien shall prove, first, that he had ceased to be a member of such organization, association, society, or group at least 5 years prior to the institution of the deportation proceedings against him; and, second, that such termination of his membership was in good feith and not for the purpose of preventing deportation." faith and not for the purpose of preventing deportation."

Mr. GWYNNE. Mr. Chairman, this amendment is a very simple one and will be very limited in its operation.

If you will refer to title III you will see that it deals with three subjects: First, it deals with the admission of certain aliens. This amendment does not cover that provision. Second, it deals with the deportation of certain aliens who have themselves personally done certain wrongs, such as to advocate the overthrow of the Government. This amendment does not deal with that part of title III. Title III further provides that any alien who at any time has been a member of certain organizations may be deported, irrespective of the time he may have joined or terminated his membership. This provision was placed in the bill to meet the situation left after the decision of the Supreme Court in the Strecker case. I agree that some legislation along that line is necessary. It seems to me, however, that the provision we have in the bill goes entirely beyond the necessities of the case.

You might have a situation such as this: An alien might in some unfortunate moment join a prohibited organization. He might be a member one day and resign, and thereafter be active in his opposition to that type of organization. Yet 25 years later, if that fact should be proved, the bill as it is now would require his deportation.

Under this amendment, if the Government proves in the deportation case that the alien has been a member of this organization the Government has made out a case and deportation would follow unless the alien would then sustain the burden of proving two things: First, that he terminated his membership 5 years prior to the beginning of the deportation proceedings, and, second, that he had done so in good faith and not for the purpose of avoiding deportation.

Mr. MURDOCK of Utah. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GWYNNE. I yield to the gentleman from Utah.

Mr. MURDOCK of Utah. Under the gentleman's amendment, as I understand, the burden of proving the 5-year period and the burden of proving good faith in severing his connection with the party is on the alien himself.

Mr. GWYNNE. The gentleman is correct.

Mr. WALTER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GWYNNE. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsyl-

Mr. WALTER. During the course of the investigation in connection with the resolution calling for the impeachment of the Secretary of Labor the attention of our committee was called to the case of an alien who had joined what he believed to be an organization for the benefit of laboring people, but it subsequently developed that he had joined the Communist Party. When he learned of this fact he withdrew from the organization, but because he had joined he was actually deported. Would not this amendment meet a situation of that sort where an innocent man suffered?

Mr. GWYNNE. That is correct. That is the purpose of the amendment. It is not to protect the undesirable alien That is correct. That is the purpose of but to protect the alien who is innocent.

Mr. McCORMACK. Also, is not this fact pretty well established, that a lot of people during depressions are under an emotional reaction, and do things which under normal conditions they would never think of doing, and when normalcy is restored they appreciate the emotional action they have engaged in, and many do everything they can to remove its effect.

Mr. GWYNNE. That is correct.

Mr. McCORMACK. And the 5-year requirement seems to be a complete protection for our institutions, with the additional requirement which puts the burden of proof on the alien himself.

Mr. GWYNNE. I think that would adequately protect the Government. In every State we have statutes of limitations. A man may commit almost any crime, with few exceptions, and yet after a lapse of a certain time unless the Government has proceeded against him all is forgiven.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Iowa has expired.

Mr. HOBBS. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment. I do so with great reluctance, for I have the most profound and well-founded respect for the opinion of my distinguished friend of the Judiciary Committee, the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. GWYNNE], the author of this amendment. I know that he is sincere. I know that he is able, and the amendment that he has proposed comes very close to being a good one. If the House sees fit to adopt it, that of course is the prerogative of the House, but I believe we should do so with our eyes open. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Walter] cited the same case in our committee deliberations which he has cited here today; and in order to correct any possible hardships that might arise under the provisions of this section, on his motion, the words "knowingly and voluntarily" were inserted, so that the case of the poor Swede who joined the Communist Party without full knowledge of what he was doing, or the case of someone who might be under the influence of liquor or a narcotic and joined ignorantly, would be removed from the field of operation of this section. Those words were inserted by a vote of the committee on the motion of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Walter] to take care of such cases as the one which he hypothecized.

Mr. GWYNNE. But it does not cover the case of a man who joined voluntarily.

Mr. HOBBS. I realize that, and that of course is the crux of this situation. If gentlemen will give me their attention for a moment I shall give the underlying philosophy of this section. It is that in this day and time we have floods of applications from perfectly good aliens who want to come here and make their homes and make the same splendid contribution to our civilization that good aliens have throughout the ages. This country has been builded by good aliens who have come here and have worked wonderfully with the good people of this Nation.

We are all aliens, if you trace the family tree far enough, so we have no prejudice against aliens. With the world to select from, with the cream of the alien world seeking admission, when we are unable to accommodate millions because of our quota limitations, why not select the best? Why insist upon keeping some of the worst? They may have sinned only once, but there are thousands who have never sinned. I prefer those. You may as well say that one slip, one sin, does not militate against chastity. No matter how long since, nor for how short a time, anyone may have knowingly and voluntarily strayed from the straight and narrow path of virtue, he cannot be sinless. Of course there is virtue in sincere repentance. Many really reform. Forgiveness is a divine attribute, which we should practice whenever possible. We are perfectly willing to forgive every one of those aliens who brought or bring themselves within the purview of this title. This title inflicts no punishment upon any of them; it says to them, "Go and sin no more."

They came to our home and plotted the destruction of our Government that bade them welcome, but all we do here is to send them-not to prison or gallows-but back to their own home.

Though we deal only in such kindly fashion with them, we feel in duty bound to prefer those who have never been guilty of allowing themselves to be inoculated with the poison virus of those alien isms that seek to destroy our Government by violence. That is the issue.

In the passage of the original exclusion law, Congress sought to express the intent which title III of this bill makes clear. The Supreme Court recently said that such an intention was not expressed in the original act. With all due respect, that seems to be a rather strained construction. But whether it be so or not, the Judiciary Committee has tried in title III to express that intention so clearly as to remove all possibility of doubt or question. I beg of you not to impair the force and effect of this declaration by adopting the Gwynne amendment. Title III will help our immigration authorities to preserve America for real Americans, and for those who long to become real Americanswho have never sinned by espousing the cause of assassination of our officials or Government. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Alabama has expired.

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I hope that this amendment will be voted down. Superficially it has merit. I do not want to do an injustice in this bill to anybody, and I know the Judiciary Committee does not, but I think you ought to be advised further as to the purpose of that title.

This provision was not in the bill as I introduced it, but while the matter was under consideration by the Judiciary Committee the Supreme Court decided the famous Strecker case. You know, we have on the west coast a gentleman by the name of Harry Bridges who is an alien. I guess he has given this country about as much trouble as all the rest of the aliens put together. He has certainly given us more trouble than many thousands, and I might say many millions of our own citizens here, and yet in the face of his outrageous violation of all rules of hospitality since he has been in this country, under the decision in the Strecker case we are probably powerless to get rid of him.

Now, why did the Judiciary Committee put this title in the bill? Because under the language of the law as it now exists. to the ordinary person there was no question about the deportability of Harry Bridges or Strecker, either one; but by a strained construction, as the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. Hobbs has told you, the Supreme Court in that case decided, notwithstanding what seemed to me the clear language of the law, that if this man had previously belonged to one of the inhibited organizations, but had resigned a day or a week or a year or 10 years before, he was no longer deportable.

For your information, I want to read you the language of the present law as quoted in the decision in the Strecker case. Listen to this carefully, will you? It will show the necessity of being very careful in the language which we use in this bill today. We ought to make it so clear that the Supreme Court cannot misunderstand what this Congress means about it. Let me read it to you. This is the present

Any alien who at any time after entering the United States is found to have been at the time of entry or to have become thereafter, a member of any of the classes of aliens enumerated—

Now, in the face of that language the Supreme Court held that a person who had resigned from that organization could not be deported.

Mr. HOBBS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. SMITH of Virginia. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. HOBBS. I will ask the gentleman, although Joe Strecker was admitted to have ceased to be a member of the order because of failure to pay dues, if he did not reiterate under oath in the hearings that he still believed in the Russian system, still bought Russian bonds with the proceeds of his business in this country, and that when the revolution came to overthrow this Government, if he did not pledge himself to fight on the side of Russia?

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. Now, that is the kind of a situation we have with the law as it exists today. What the Judiciary Committee is seeking to do is to make this law so clear that these people will know that we have the power and will deport them if they belong to or have belonged to these organizations.

Mr. GWYNNE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. SMITH of Virginia. I yield.

Mr. GWYNNE. Is it not true that this amendment would not affect the Strecker case? The evidence clearly showed in that case that Strecker had not resigned in good faith.

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. What I am talking about now is the danger of writing into this bill on the floor of the House language which may cause misapprehension and may defeat the purpose of this act.

Mr. BROOKS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. I yield.

Mr. BROOKS. Will this bill as presently proposed give Congress authority to handle the Bridges case, to which the gentleman referred?

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. That is exactly what it is designed to do. I do not want in the confusion of the Committee of the Whole House to write into a bill that has been so carefully considered by the Judiciary Committee language which may destroy its entire effect.

Mr. WALTER. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I do not believe that there are two men in this body more interested in a sane solution of this problem than are the men who spoke for and against this amendment. They have worked most diligently in an effort to meet what, in my opinion, is a very acute problem, and I pay my respects to both of them for the fine work they have done in connection with the legislation the gentleman from Virginia sponsored. However, I have to differ with the distinguished gentleman from Virginia with respect to his interpretation of the decision of the Supreme Court in the Strecker case.

In that case, and I think the decision was strained to some extent perhaps, the Supreme Court said that had Congress intended that membership in the Communist Party at any time was a deportable ground, then Congress would have Unfortunately under the act that was being interpreted. I believe the intent of Congress was perhaps ambiguous, but certainly the language of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. GWYNNE] is not ambiguous. It describes exactly what many of the members of the Judiciary Committee intended doing. There can be no doubt in the minds of the Justices of the Supreme Court or of any other court what Congress intended if this amendment is adopted. It certainly is in conformity with our fundamental belief that a man is entitled to a chance where he has sincerely and honestly recognized the error of his ways. I believe that we can very safely adopt the amendment offered by the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. GWYNNE]. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell].

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Iowa. I think it is a step in the right direction, for it is my belief that even an alien is entitled to justice tempered with mercy in this great land of ours. Should a young man at some time, through force of economic conditions, be misled to join an organization which he finds later advocates principles which are un-American, principles which he does not approve and did not know of at the time of joining, and when he discovers them and resigns from the organization, should he be penalized by the proposed provision of the law and be deported? Surely such harsh and unfair action on the part of the great Government of the United States would in itself be thoroughly un-American and contrary to all established ideas of American justice and fairness.

Just a short time ago we all read of the appointment of a man to one of the highest positions in our Government. It was urged against his confirmation for the position that he had once belonged to an organization that advocated principles that are considered un-American by great masses of our citizens. Great effort was made to prevent his confirmation, notwithstanding the fact he stated he joined the organization as a young man, never attended a meeting, and when he learned its real purposes and activities withdrew from membership. You all know to whom I refer. Had he been unfortunate enough to be an alien, he would have been subject to the provisions of this act. I address myself to the gentleman from Alabama as well as to other Members, because the gentleman from Alabama knows to whom I have reference in citing this little instance.

For 24 years I was a member of the Committee on Immigration. Section 19 of the Immigration Act and some of the most stringent deportation provisions were written by me and adopted by the Congress. I have favored the deportation of all those aliens who fail to recognize and appreciate the privileges accorded them by our Government. Some people, however, seem to believe that an alien, simply because he is an alien, must be above sin, must be always virtuous, and never make a mistake. Mr. Chairman, there never was a perfect human being, there is no such thing as perfection, and every human being makes a mistake now and then. In fact, and even at the risk of offending some professional patriot, I never saw a perfect native-born American, a perfect Member of Congress. It would be the height of legislative unfairness and hypocrisy thus to subject an alien who desires to remain in this country and become a citizen to the unusual, harsh, and inhuman double punishment carried in this bill for some slight mistake, transgression, or error of Aliens, Mr. Chairman, by and large, have contributed a great deal to the welfare of this great Nation. Aliens helped us gain our independence. Aliens have served with distinction our Government, our industry, our scientific progress. They have developed many of our great inventions, pioneered our vast undeveloped lands, aided in every way to make this the greatest country on the face of the globe.

Prejudice against the alien is not new. It existed in 1700, in 1800, in 1900, just as it does today. Search through the reports of committee and commission studying the problem of the immigrant and the alien and you will find, as I have, that even as far back as 1790 some people looked with alarm on the alien, charging he represented the criminal element of Europe. Those people were no more criminals as a class than those who come here today. They made good citizens and they were the forbears of some of the most outstanding citizens of this country, some of their progeny even serving in this distinguished body.

We cannot let prejudice and narrow-mindedness blind us to what is fair and just and American, even in dealing with the problem of the alien who comes to our shores seeking to become a citizen. I hope, therefore, that the amendment offered by the gentleman from Iowa will be adopted. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. DONDERO. Mr. Chairman, I would like to be heard on the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Michigan for 5 minutes.

Mr. HOBBS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman from Michigan yield to permit me to submit a unanimous-consent request?

Mr. DONDERO. I yield.

Mr. HOBBS. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this amendment and all amendments thereto close in 10 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama?

There was no objection.

Mr. DONDERO. Mr. Chairman, undoubtedly, I am one of a large number of Members of this House whose parents were alien immigrants to this country. More than three-quarters of a century ago my parents came to these shores, one from Italy and the other from Germany. Notwithstanding that fact I have not the slightest interest in the Rome-Berlin axis of today. [Applause.]

I believe I understand what it was that induced millions of people to come to this land from other countries. We beckoned to the downtrodden and the oppressed people of the world. They saw here privileges and opportunities their own lands did not provide or afford to them. They came to enjoy the blessing of a new government founded on liberty and justice for all. They came not to disobey our laws, but to obey our laws and to become useful and loyal citizens of the United States. They and their descendants today constitute the masses of the American people.

It must be a strange condition of mind on the part of anyone who can live here in this country, enjoy its privileges, have the protection of its laws, enjoy its opportunities, and at the same time advocate, act, and exert his influence to overthrow this Government by force and violence, and even bloodshed if necessary. I say it must be a strange condition of mind to make a man want to do that. Remember they are the same people who want to overthrow this Government and set up in this country some foreign "ism" or alien form of government from which they or their ancestors fled in days gone by, to come here and enjoy the privileges granted under the Stars and Stripes.

I see nothing in this bill that any alien, any resident, or any citizen of this country need stand in fear of as long as he acts and conducts himself like an American. This bill proposes to make it hard for aliens who do wrong, and easy for those who desire to do right. I intend to support it, and appeal to my colleagues to do likewise. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Montana [Mr. O'CONNOR].

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Chairman, the amendment offered by the gentleman from Iowa, I think, is directed at the paragraph we had under discussion on page 27 of the bill yesterday, in which I attempted in my humble way to point out that under the provisions of that paragraph, even though a man may have been a Communist for an hour in Russia or in this country for the same length of time, he would be forever stamped; he could not live it down. I pointed out at that time in a question I asked that in my opinion this is not Christianity.

In this connection I want to read some remarks made by a distinguished colleague in the United States Senate from the State of Montana, which it seems to me may have an indirect bearing upon the question that we are now discussing.

In an address before the recent convention of the Baltimore Conference of the Methodist Church, Senator Burton K. Wheeler said that this Nation needed a moral reawakening to save it from utter collapse. Senator Wheeler pointed out that leaders of business, labor, agriculture, and politics must sit down together in a Christian spirit, forget their selfish interests, and work for the welfare of the Nation.

He continued and made the following statement:

Until we have learned how to distribute all our surpluses of food and clothing you will find it hard to go out and preach Christianity to hungry men. They want to see the practical application. Christianity and democracy go hand in hand.

If we do not give man the right to reform, we deny the right of forgiveness which we understand was the underlying principle of the preachings of the Man from Galilee. Let us not take hope away from the repentant. Of course, it is wrong to preach overthrow of this Government by violence or in any other fashion. Of course, it is wrong to go out and kill somebody; but murderers have been known to have reformed. All kinds of trespassers and violators of the law have been known to reform.

Let us adopt a policy of forgiveness of people when they show they have it coming. Under the provisions of this law as written, once the brand is placed, never can it be removed. That is the reason I support the amendment of the gentleman from Iowa.

Now, my fellow citizens [laughter]-

Mr. HOBBS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. O'CONNOR. I have only a few minutes.

Mr. HOBBS. I wanted to ask the gentleman if all his colleagues were not fellow citizens?

Mr. O'CONNOR. Yes; the finest in the world.

Mr. Chairman, I call attention to something else. It will be recalled that about 2 years ago, when Justice Black was promoted to a position upon the Supreme Court of the United States, it was charged that he had been a member of the Ku Klux Klan. It will be recalled there was considerable discussion whether or not he should be confirmed if he had been a member of that organization. It will be further recalled, according to newspaper reports, that Justice Black said at one time he either had had a card in the organization or had become a member of it, but he did not know what sort of an institution he had joined, and as soon as he learned he got out. Do the people of the United States hold that against Black? Absolutely not, because they are tolerant of man's mistakes. He may have gone into that organization, just as many other men have gone into what we call this communistic theory of government, without knowing the vitals of it.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 additional minute.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Montana [Mr. O'CONNOR]?

There was no objection.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Chairman, in closing, may I say that you cannot legislate morals into people. That was demonstrated by the eighteenth amendment. You cannot legislate patriotism into people any more than you can legislate morals into people. You have to feed the people. Let us find a way of taking care of a third of our population that need care and quit spending our time trying to pass laws to put them in jail and to deport them. Let us try to make them love our country, instead of hate it, by giving each man, rich or poor, a square deal.

Mr. HARE. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. O'CONNOR. I yield to the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. HARE].

Mr. HARE. Under the gentleman's theory or philosophy, what would be the use for any general laws at all?

Mr. O'CONNOR. We have plenty of laws already. What I am trying to get over is this: Let us spend our time endeavoring to rectify the economic conditions that are destroying this country today, just as Senator Wheeler said.

Mr. HARE. This is not an economic question.

[Here the gavel fell.]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. GWYNNE].

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. EBERHARTER), there were-ayes 48, noes 54.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. HOBBS. Mr. Chairman, I offer a committee amendment, which is on the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Committee amendment offered by Mr. Hobbs: Page 20, line 10, after the word "law," insert a comma and the following: "or a violation of the Marihuana Tax Act of 1937, Public Law 238, Seventy-fifth Congress."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

Mr. FLAHERTY. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Flaherty: On page 20, line 11, after "entry", strike out "possesses or carries" and insert "has been convicted of possessing or carrying."

Mr. FLAHERTY. Mr. Chairman, this amendment is reasonable and can be explained in one or two sentences. The object of the amendment is to make an alien deportable only upon conviction of carrying or possessing arms illegally. We know that practically every State in the Union has laws on this subject and the State courts have the authority to determine whether a person in specific cases carries arms legally or illegally. Otherwise, the Department of Labor would be required to perform the judicial function of determining when a State law has been violated. Aside from the possible conflict that might arise from different interpretations given to State laws by State courts and by the Department of Labor, I do not believe that the Department of Labor-and I think you will agree with me in that respect—is equipped to carry out this essential judicial function of determining when State laws are violated. I understand that the author of the bill is in accord with the amendment and I hope it will be accepted by the Committee.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Flaherty.]

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. Flaherty) there were—ayes 39, noes 46.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. WALTER. Mr. Chairman, a moment ago a committee amendment was adopted on page 20, line 10. As I understand, the Starnes amendment took out the language in that line. I ask unanimous consent that the action taken in regard to the committee amendment be vacated and that the committee amendment be inserted in line 16 after the words "sawed-off shotgun."

Mr. HOBBS. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman modify his request to say "or at the appropriate place," having regard to the Starnes amendment already adopted?

Mr. WALTER. Yes; I so modify my request, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amend-

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. SMITH of Virginia: Page 19, line 18, insert a new title as follows:

"TITLE II

"Sec. 6. It shall be unlawful for any person by word of mouth or in writing, or by transmission by radio, to advocate, abet, advise, or teach the duty, necessity, desirability, or propriety of overthrowing or destroying the Government of the United States, or the government of any State of the United States, or the government of any subdivision thereof, by force or violence, or by the assassination of any officer of the United States, or any officer of any State of the United States, or any officer of any subdivision thereof, or by any other unlawful means.

"Sec. 10. Any person who violates any of the provisions of this title shall be subject to the same penalties prescribed in section 5."

Mr. SMITH of Virginia rose.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. I want to find out to what title this is an amendment.

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. It is a new title, after title I. Mr. Chairman, those of you who have the bill before you, if you will refer to the first page of the original bill, will find that title I is stricken out by the committee. It is this title I in identical language I am seeking now to restore to the bill. I regard that feature of the bill as the very heart of the legislation. I think perhaps the Committee on the Judiciary agrees with me in that respect. I want to explain to you why it was stricken out of the bill.

After this bill was introduced, and when it was pending before the Committee on the Judiciary, the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. McCormack], who is really the author of the language, obtained passage of substantially the same bill by attaching it as a rider to some other bill, as I understand. As it had already passed the House, the Committee on the Judiciary were of the opinion that it should not be included in this measure, and they will probably oppose the amendment. My view is that the McCormack bill having passed and gone over to the Senate as a separate measure it may perhaps never become law. I regard it as very essential that we have a complete piece of legislation on this subject, and I should like to see my amendment included in the bill. It certainly can do no harm if you are for the principles enunciated in that legislation.

Now I want to tell you what title I does. We have heard a lot of talk here about abusing the poor alien. The gentlemen who have been talking that way cannot complain about this section. We have laws against aliens who advocate the overthrow of this Government by force, but do you know that there is nothing in the world to prevent a treasonable American citizen from doing so? He can advocate revolution, the overthrow of the Government by force, anarchy, and everything else, and there is nothing in the law to stop it. This amendment makes it unlawful for any person, be he American citizen or alien, to advocate the overthrow of the Government of the United States by force. So I ask that you restore this provision to the bill. Because it has already passed the House there certainly should be no objection to it, and it can do no harm in case the bill which has been sent to the Senate is not adopted.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. The gentleman is undoubtedly familiar with the decisions of the Supreme Court on the question of the various criminal syndicalism statutes, statutes that make it illegal to advocate the overthrow of the Government by violence.

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. The gentleman does me a high honor.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. The gentleman undoubtedly knows that the Supreme Court has ruled that when such advocacy becomes incitement, then, and only then, can the statute be invoked against a person. If it continues to be mere advocacy, you cannot proceed against that person, because such an application would be unconstitutional. Therefore, can the gentleman tell this House when does advocacy cease and when does incitement begin, or where is the line of

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. No; I cannot tell the gentleman that, and I cannot tell him any more when anything is constitutional or unconstitutional.

Mr. MAY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. SMITH of Virginia. I will be pleased to yield to the gentleman.

Mr. MAY. I notice that the title just offered as an amendment provides penalties for conspiracy to overthrow the Government or to assassinate officers, or things of that sort. there any conflict in the penalty that is provided in the section referred to that fixes the penalty and the various penalties that may be provided in the various States that have statutes on the same subject?

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. This has nothing to do with State This provides penalties for violations of this law.

Mr. MAY. I understand it is a Federal statute, or will be when enacted; but I was just wondering if there was any more severity to be exercised under this law than under the usual State law

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. I am not familiar with that.

Mr. MAY. What is the penalty provided?

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. If you will look at section 5, you will find the penalties prescribed for any violation of this act. [Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. GEYER of California. Mr. Chairman, I do not know how much longer we are going to be working on this bill, but I am very anxious that the Record be made clear.

There has been a lot of heat generated here, particularly on yesterday. The implication has been made by certain ones on this floor that those who are opposing this bill are un-American. Gentlemen got up on the floor yesterday, after a facetious amendment had been offered, and inferred that those who were opposing this bill were trying to establish foreign principles here in the United States. Another gentleman got up and after defending the American bund, inferred that Members, particularly on this side, were not good Americans.

Now, I want the RECORD to be straight, at least so far as I am concerned. I do not want any man anywhere, and most of all on this floor, to question my loyalty to American principles. I wore the uniform at the time we felt our country was in danger, and I am ready to put that uniform on again if ever the occasion demands. I have two sons, and if the time comes when their services are needed. I will say to them, as my dad and mother said to me, "Go, son, and do your duty; God bless you."

Now, let us not have any misunderstanding. I am op-posed to this bill because I believe, in opposing it, I am defending American principles. Let us look for a moment at what Americanism is. Does it consist in merely waving the flag and saluting and clicking our heels together when the emblem of democracy, the flag, goes by? I say that is merely an indication of what should lie within when we do that. Real Americanism consists of being able, willing, and anxious to defend the fundamental principles on which Americanism is founded. What are those fundamental principles? Let us examine our fundamental document. I know no better place to go to find what it is that Americanism stands for. Let us take the first of the Bill of Rights, without which this Constitution could not have been established. It says something like this: Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridging the freedom of speech or of the press or the right of the people peaceably to assemble and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances.

Then we have other amendments guaranteeing the right of trial by jury and the other rights Americans enjoy.

I maintain that by your action on a previous amendment you have denied the right of trial by jury, and this amendment of the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. Smith] is denying most of the other rights.

Mr. WALTER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. GEYER of California. No; I cannot yield.

This amendment offered by the gentleman from Virginia denies the right of freedom of speech, yet, under the guise of Americanism, we are trying to pass this Hitler measure. It is identically the thing that is being done in Germany. The people's liberties were destroyed by the acts of government, and not by what some foreigner did. I say to you that this measure, as I pointed out during the consideration of the rule, is a labor-baiting measure. The author of this bill admits that it is to get Harry Bridges. I do not know about Harry Bridges. I do not know whether he is a member of the Communist Party or not. He claims he is not. I do know this. I know, as the gentleman has said, he has caused a lot of trouble here. Yes; he has caused a lot of But for whom? For the employers who were trying to make the longshoremen work for 10 cents an hour. Do they want to get him because he is an alien or because he might be a Communist? No; they want his scalp because he is going to bat for the underprivileged group. That is at the bottom of this type of legislation. That is exactly what you have in front of you and, under the guise of Americanism, you are fostering this thing of foreign origin upon our own people.

My colleagues, look well to your vote, lest under the guise of defending democracy you undermine its very foundations. You cannot preserve it by destroying it bit by bit, as this bill does. You cannot defend our Americanism by denying it to a minority group, as this bill does. Let us take care lest if we get the habit abroad in the land of discriminating against minority groups, this foreign custom creeps slowly upon us and we be included in some minority group of which we are a member. There is only one way to defend democracy, and that is to never allow it to be denied to anyone.

(Mr. GEYER of California asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks in the RECORD.)

Mr. HINSHAW rose.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from California, a member of the committee.

Mr. HOBBS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HINSHAW. Yes.

Mr. HOBBS. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate upon this amendment and all amendments thereto close in 10 minutes.

Mr. WALTER. Mr. Chairman, reserving the right to object, does that contemplate my having 5 minutes?

Mr. HOBBS. Yes.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Chairman, I reserve the right to object. I have an amendment which I desire to offer to the Smith amendment. I would be satisfied with 3 minutes.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Mr. Chairman, I would like to have 2 minutes.

Mr. HOBBS. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this amendment and all amendments thereto close in 12 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. HINSHAW. Mr. Chairman, on a great many subjects the gentleman from California [Mr. GEYER] and I are divided. On this particular amendment to this bill I am in accord with him, and I think that it should be rejected. That may surprise a good many of you, but I can conceive of a good many situations in which parts of that amendment would be bad provisions to have in the laws of the United States. We can look back into the history of the United States and see times of turmoil, times of strife among the people. We can look back to the point where the United States itself was born by a revolution from the mother country. The people in those days were subject to laws which were equally stringent to those proposed in this amendment, but the people of the United States went ahead and did revolt against England and became a nation. They were subjected to being hanged and drawn and quartered, or to any particular type of punishment that seemed to be suitable at the moment, and yet they persisted and this Nation was formed. I speak to my colleagues on the Republican side, as it appears there are a good many there, as well as many on the Democratic side, who would favor this amendment, and I call attention to the fact that it is quite conceivable that at some time in the future of the United States a government might come into power that was not at all to their liking, and it might come there by ballot. I refer to such a government as a virtual dictatorship, supported by a Congress as supine as the German Reichstag. There might be those among you who would feel that the persons who were in command of the United States through such a government should not be there, and I suggest that you consider whether it is not a fact that in some words that you might speak, you yourselves might be subjected to the conditions of this title which it is proposed to have inserted in the bill.

First, let me say that nearly all of the provisions of this proposed title were accepted by the House when we voted on the McCormack amendment to another bill. That amendment was designed to prevent the overthrow of government by force and violence, and with those principles I am heartily in accord. But listen to this. I shall read section 3 of this amendment:

It shall be unlawful for any person to openly, willfully, or deliberately justify or defend by word of mouth or in writing the assassination or unlawful killing or assaulting of any officer of the United States, or any officer of any State of the United States, or any officer of any subdivision thereof, because of his official character or act, or openly, willfully, or deliberately justify or defend or teach, spread, or advocate the propriety, desirability, or necessity of overthrowing or overturning the Government of the United States, or the government of any State of the United States, or the government of any subdivision thereof, by force or violence, or by any other unlawful means.

Note the use of the words "or deliberately justify or defend by word of mouth," as contained in line 20, and then go on and read line 25 to the end.

Now, no man in his right senses under present conditions is going to commit any of these acts, but it is not difficult to conceive of intolerable conditions that might arise in the future under which perfectly good American citizens in the heat of controversy might subject themselves to the full penalty of this act and at the same time be in their own minds entirely justified at the moment. Persecution could run rampant under this section.

We are here considering a bill to prevent aliens from violating the hospitality of our people. If we here insert a title which has to do solely with the citizens of the United States, and which smacks of the laws of George III, we shall be, in my opinion, taking a long step backward.

I believe in fair play to all concerned. I certainly agree with the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. Hobbs] in his statement that aliens in this country have no right whatever to tell us how to run this Government nor to advocate its overthrow. But I submit to you that so long as we citizens are to have freedom of speech and freedom as individuals some word or thought that we as citizens might express offhand, without intending to violate the law, might be taken under this title to mean something very serious, and a man could be subjected to persecution and to the heavy penalties of this act. I do not think it is right, I do not think it is fair, and I hope that the title proposed as an amendment to this bill will be voted down. I do not believe in meeting intolerance with injustice. I value my liberty as did my ancestors who fought to set this country free.

Mr. WALTER. Mr. Chairman, 5 years ago a special committee was appointed to make an investigation of activities in the United States that all of us are opposed to. As a result of the investigation made by this committee, headed by the distinguished gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Mc-CORMACK], a bill was drafted and reported favorably by the Committee on the Judiciary of the House. Just recently that bill was made a part of a bill increasing the punishment for the crime of espionage, which I introduced. After the House accepted this amendment and it was passed by the House our committee concluded that the language in title I, which the amendment offered by the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. SMITH] seeks to put back in the bill, was no longer necessary. and for that reason it was stricken from the bill before it was reported by the committee. We felt that the language adopted by the House in the amendment to the espionage bill met the situation in a much better and more effective way than does the language in title I as introduced by the gentleman from Virginia. We feel that the measure already passed very adequately meets this situation and that the amendment which the gentleman from Virginia has offered is surplusage, capable and susceptible of almost any kind of interpretation. I sincerely hope that this amendment will not be adopted. The bill as reported by the committee represents the result of months of hard, painstaking work. I am certain that the aliens in my district-and there are a great many of them-do not approve of the classes that are affected by the bill under consideration. In my opinion, they are more bitter toward these classes than is any of us because of the fear that the doing of those things covered by the bill brings to every alien unwarranted suspicion, to say the least.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment. The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. McCormack: After the word "to", in the second line of section 1 of the Smith amendment, insert the words "knowingly or willfully."

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Chairman, in the event the Smith amendment is adopted, I feel that the amendment which I have offered should also be adopted. The special committee of which I was chairman 5 years ago recommended the passage of a law of this kind, but we felt the Government should have the burden of proving that a person "knowingly or willfully" advocated overthrow of the Government by force or violence. We did not feel that a person should be indicted who is a good American citizen and who is distressed, who is out of employment, for example, and saw his wife and children looking to him with longing for something to eat; out looking for a job all day and come home and find them with a look of hope and then be disappointed. If that man got up and said something that might be construed as advocating the overthrow of government by force or violence, when he never meant it, we do not want that man to be subject to indictment and possibly conviction.

A Communist is one who "knowingly or willfully" is committed to a movement which has as its objective the ultimate overthrow of government by any means, legal or illegal, or a combination of both. We all know that the Communist movement has as its ultimate objective the overthrow of government by force and violence or by any means, legal or illegal, or a combination of both. That testimony was indisputably produced before the special committee of which I was chairman, and came from the lips not of those who gave hearsay testimony, but of the actual official records of the Communist Party of the United States, presented to our committee by the executive secretary of the Communist Party and the leader of the Communist Party in the United States, Earl Browder. That was the testimony, the best evidence presented to our committee at that time, that such is the objective of the Communist Party. Therefore, a Communist is one who intends knowingly or willfully to participate in any actions, legal or illegal, or a combination of both, that will bring about the ultimate overthrow of our Government. He is the one we are aiming at, and the Government should have the burden of proving that a person "knowingly or willfully" advocates the overthrow of government and is "knowingly or willfully" a member of an organization that believes in the ultimate overthrow of our Government.

Section 2 of the Smith amendment carries the word "knowingly." Section 3 of the Smith amendment carries the word "willfully." I think the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. SMITH], himself, from a conversation that I had with him, will agree to the acceptance of my amendment.

I am for legislation of this type. Whether this particular amendment should be adopted, in view of what the House has heretofore done, is a matter that I will not pass upon, but if it is adopted, certainly the words "knowingly or willfully" should be inserted in the amendment.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I will accept the amendment, as far as I am concerned.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. McCor-MACK] to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. SMITH].

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. Smith], as amended.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. Marcantonio) there were-ayes 79, noes 32.

So the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HOBBS. Mr. Chairman, there seems to be some misunderstanding as to the request that the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Walter] made a while ago as amended by me. Therefore I ask unanimous consent that the committee amendment, relating to marihuana be inserted after the words "District of Columbia" in the Starnes amendment at the proper place.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. HOBBS. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this bill and all amendments thereto close in 10 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

Mr. FLAHERTY. Mr. Chairman, reserving the right to object, I have an amendment to offer.

Mr. HOBBS. I will modify the request, Mr. Chairman, to make it 20 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. Hobbs] as modified?

There was no objection.

Mr. FLAHERTY. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment. The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Flaherty: On page 22, line 8, after the word "deported", strike out the word "provided" and the remainder of the proviso ending with the word "act", in line 14.

FLAHERTY. Mr. Chairman, the purpose of this amendment is to delete the proviso which provides "that the marriage to an American citizen of a female of the sexually immoral classes, the exclusion or deportation of which is prescribed by this act, shall not invest such female with United States citizenship if the marriage of such alien female shall be solemnized after her arrest or after the commission of acts which make her liable to deportation under this act."

Since the Cable Act of 1922, the language which appears in this proviso is obsolete, but it is still contained in the Immigration Act, section 19, of February 1917. Under the Cable Act the marriage of an alien female to an American citizen does not confer upon her any of the rights of American citizenship. She still must comply with the naturalization laws to this extent.

Mr. HOBBS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. FLAHERTY. I yield.

Mr. HOBBS. As far as I am concerned, I am perfectly satisfied with the explanation which the distinguished gentleman has made. If this law has been, in effect, repealed, it, of course, ought not to be in this bill, and as far as I am personally concerned, I will be glad to accept the gentleman's amendment.

Mr. FLAHERTY. I thank the gentleman. I think the language is merely surplusage at this time.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Smith of Virginia: Page 23, line 19, after the word "final", strike out the period and quotation mark and insert a colon and the following: "Provided, That such decision shall be made pursuant to recommendation by the Board of Review, which Board shall have discretionary authority in respect of a deportable alien not racially inadmissible or ineligible to citizenship in the United States, and who last entered the United States prior to January 1, 1937, and who is not deportable under the act of October 16, 1918 (40 Stat. 1008; U. S. C., title 8, sec. 137), entitled 'An act to exclude and expel from the United States aliens who are members of the anarchist and similar classes,' as amended by the act of June 5, 1920, or the act of May 26, 1922, entitled 'An act to amend the act entitled "An act to prohibit the importation and use of opium for other than medicinal purposes," 'approved February 9, 1909, as amended

S. C., title 8, sec. 156a), and the provisions of the act of February 5, 1917, entitled 'An act to regulate the immigration of aliens and residence of aliens in the United States' (39 Stat. 874; U. S. C., title 8, sec. 156) as such act relates to prostitutes, procurers, or other immoral persons, the mentally and physically deficient, anarchists, and similar classes, having proven good moral character for the past 5 years. (a) to having proven good moral character for the past 5 years, (a) to permit such deportable alien to depart the United States to any country of his choice at his own expense in lieu of deportation (r) to order suspension of the deportation warrant if the Board shall find that the execution of such warrant would work or (b) to order suspension of the deportation warrant it the Board shall find that the execution of such warrant would work a serious economic detriment to a dependent citizen or legally resident alien wife, parent, or minor child of such deportable alien; but if any order suspending execution of a warrant of deportation shall have effect more than 6 months all of the facts and pertinent provisions of law in the case shall thereupon be reported to the Congress with appropriate recommendations and the reasons for clemency, which report shall be printed as a public document by the Clerk of the House. Upon the failure of Congress to act or resolve in respect of the case before the next adjournment of regular session after recommendation made, the order suspending deportation shall be vacated and deportation of the alien shall be immediately effected. If by act or resolution the Congress shall direct the deportation warrant to be canceled, the Commissioner of Immigration and Naturalization shall thereupon issue a certificate of arrival as if the alien's last entry had been lawful; whereupon the Secretary of State shall reduce by one the immigration quota of the country of the alien's nationality for the fiscal year then current or next following; and any alien in whose case the Board of Review shall decline to suspend an order of deportation shall be immediately deported. In funcan order of deportation shall be immediately deported. In functioning under this bill, the Board of Review shall act independently as a quasi-judicial body and its decisions and recommendations shall not be subject to the control of any other officer of the Government."

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. SMITH] for 5 minutes.

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. Mr. Chairman-

Mr. HOBBS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman from Virginia yield?

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. I yield.

Mr. HOBBS. Mr. Chairman, this amendment is thoroughly acceptable and I believe will strengthen the bill. It simply gives the alien "a break" by giving him the right to have his case heard by the regular Board of Review of the Bureau of Immigration. It relieves aliens of the necessity of getting private bills through Congress for their relief. It is a thoroughly well worked out amendment, very carefully drawn, and I believe that it should be adopted.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Virginia.

The amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the committee amendment as amended.

The committee amendment as amended was agreed to. The CHAIRMAN. Under the rule, the Committee rises.

Accordingly the Committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. CHAPMAN, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that Committee, having had under consideration the bill (H. R. 5138) to make unlawful attempts to overthrow the Government of the United States, to require licensing of civilian military organizations, to make unlawful attempts to interfere with the discipline of the Army and Navy, to require registration and fingerprinting of aliens, to enlarge the jurisdiction of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals in certain cases, and for other purposes, pursuant to House Resolution 257, he reported the same back to the House with an amendment adopted in the Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER. Under the rule, the previous question is

The question is on the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the amended bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, and was read the third time.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion to

The SPEAKER. Is the gentleman opposed to the bill? Mr. MARCANTONIO. I am.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the motion. The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. MARCANTONIO moves to recommit the bill H. R. 5138 to the Committee on the Judiciary.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion to recommit

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. Marcantonio) there were-ayes 28, noes 149.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present, and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER. The Chair has just counted the membership present. Evidently there is no quorum present.

The Doorkeeper will close the doors, the Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members, and the Clerk will call the roll.

The question was taken; and there were-yeas 48, nays 272, answered "present" 1, not voting 107, as follows:

CORRECTION OF MILITARY RECORD OF OBERLIN M. CARTER

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. Speaker, on July 6 I reported for the Military Affairs Committee, to the House, a bill (H. R. 4723) to correct the military record of Oberlin M. Carter, formerly captain, Corps of Engineers, United States Army, to show that the judgment of court martial in his case is unlawful and invalid. I ask unanimous consent that this bill may be transferred from the Private to the Union Calendar.

The SPEAKER. Is that request by direction of the committee?

Mr. ANDREWS. It is the request of the majority of the members of the Committee on Military Affairs, who made the report.

The SPEAKER. The Chair suggests that the gentleman withhold that request until he gets authority from the committee. Under the rules that is necessary.

Mr. ANDREWS. I may say that the report was filed on behalf of the majority of the committee.

The SPEAKER. Is the gentleman making the request by direction of that committee?

Mr. ANDREWS. Not by direction of the committee; no. The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks that is necessary and suggests that the gentleman temporarily withdraw his request.

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. Speaker, I temporarily withdraw my

LABOR POLICIES OF EMPLOYERS' ASSOCIATIONS—REPORT OF COM-MITTEE ON EDUCATION AND LABOR (REPT. NO. 6, PT. 5)

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to submit a report from the subcommittee of the Senate Committee on Education and Labor, pursuant to Senate Resolution 266, of the Seventy-fourth Congress, entitled "Labor Policies of Employers' Associations, Part II, the Associated Industries of Cleveland."

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the report will be received and printed.

INVESTIGATION CONCERNING COURT MARTIAL OF CAPT. OBERLIN M. CARTER

Mr. MINTON, from the Committee on Military Affairs, reported a resolution (S. Res. 176), which, under the rule, was referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate:

Whereas on May 1, 1935, Senate Resolution 60, Seventy-fourth Congress, was passed by the Senate to authorize the investigation of the facts leading up to the court martial and the court-martial proceedings and all the findings relating to the court martial of Capt. Oberlin M. Carter, formerly of the United States Army Engl-

Whereas the papers and records pertaining to this matter are voluminous and the facts are involved and relate to a case whereas the Committee on Military Affairs, after some hearings in the matter, believe the cause worthy of the most searching inquiry, and the same is a matter beyond the time available to the members of the committee, the committee is further of the opinion that an expert investigator should be employed by the committee in this matter and funds be made available therefor:

Therefore, be it

Recolled That the Military Affairs Committee be and the same

Therefore, be it Resolved, That the Military Affairs Committee be, and the same is hereby, authorized to employ and pay an expert investigator to aid the committee in carrying out the purpose of Senate Resolution 60 of the Seventy-fourth Congress and to otherwise defray the necessary expenses of said committee, and there is hereby authorized to be paid from the contingent fund of the Senate the sum of $5,000 to employ said investigator and to defray the expenses of said investigation, said appropriation to be disbursed upon vouchers approved by the chairman of the committee or the chairman of the subcommittee that may be in charge of said investigation.

BILLS INTRODUCED

Bills were introduced, read the first time, and, by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred as follows:

By Mr. CHAVEZ:

S. 2922. A bill for the relief of Mr. and Mrs. Juan Ramirez; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. NYE:

S. 2923. A bill for the relief of Joseph Darabout; and S. 2924. A bill for the relief of Joseph Darabout; to the Committee on Finance.

(Mr. Norris introduced Senate bill 2925, which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, and appears under a separate heading.)

By Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma:

S. 2926 (by request). A bill for the relief of the Osage Tribe of Indians in Oklahoma; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. WALSH (for himself, Mr. Byrnes, Mr. Brown, and Mr. La Follette):

S. 2927. A bill to authorize the Secretary of Agriculture to enter into cooperative agreements or leases with the owners of forest lands in order to provide for their management in accordance with proper forestry practices, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

By Mr. LA FOLLETTE:

S. 2928. A bill providing for payment to the State of Wisconsin for certain State-owned lands which the United States by treaties granted to certain Indian tribes; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

TAXATION OF TENNESSEE VALLEY AUTHORITY PROPERTIES

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, when the Congress recently passed the act amending the Tennessee Valley Authority Act, having for its object carrying out the tentative program of purchase by the Authority, there was considerable agitation in regard to the money, if any, that should be paid by the Tennessee Valley Authority in lieu of taxation.

I promised at that time, both in the Senate and outside, that I would introduce a bill covering that subject as soon as possible; that the subject was under discussion by experts of the T. V. A., Federal authorities, and State authorities; and that it would require some time to complete those studies. Mr. President, those studies have not as yet been completed, but I desire to fulfill the promise I made; and today Representative Sparkman, of Alabama, of the House of Representatives, and I are each introducing identical bills in the House and Senate for the purpose of eliciting criticism, study, and advice on this very complicated subject. It is not our intention that hearings even be had at this session of Congress, but the desire is to obtain sufficient publicity and to elicit recommendations and suggestions concerning the problem from any party interested, either on the side of the Federal Government or of the States.

I ask consent to introduce that bill in the United States Senate, and also ask that it be printed in the RECORD, and that, in connection with it, in the RECORD there be printed a letter to me from Dr. Morgan, Chairman of the Tennessee Valley Authority Board, together with some statistics showing the study that has thus far been made on the subject and some conclusions that have been reached; and also publish with it in the RECORD a joint statement from Representative SPARKMAN, of Alabama, and myself as to the objects to be accomplished or attempted to be accomplished by the bill and the purpose of introducing the bill at this time.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the bill will be received and properly referred, and together with the matters referred to by the Senator from Nebraska will be printed in the RECORD.

The bill (S. 2925) to amend the Tennessee Valley Authority Act of 1933, was read twice by its title and referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 13 of the Tennessee Valley Authority Act of 1933 be, and the same is hereby, amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 13. In order to render financial assistance to those States and local governments in which the power operations of the Corporation are carried on and in which the Corporation has accorporation are carried on and in which the Corporation has acquired properties previously subject to State and local taxation, the board is authorized and directed to pay to said States, for each fiscal year, beginning July 1, 1940, the following percentages of the gross proceeds derived from the sale of power by the Corporation for the preceding fiscal year as hereinafter provided, together with such additional amounts as may be payable purpose. together with such additional amounts as may be payable pursuant to the provisions hereinafter set forth, said payments to be in lieu of taxes and to constitute a charge against the power operations of the Corporation for the fiscal year then beginning and to be made upon condition that no State, county, or local taxes shall be assessed or levied against the property, operations, or business of the Corporation; for the fiscal year (beginning July 1) 1940, 10 percent; 1941, 9 percent; 1942, 8 percent; 1943, 7½ percent; 1944, 7 percent; 1945, 6½ percent; 1946, 6 percent; 1947, 5½ percent; 1948 and each fiscal year thereafter, 5 percent. Gross proceeds, as used in this section, is defined as the total gross proceeds derived by the Corporation from the sale of power for the preceding fiscal year, excluding power used by the Corporation or sold or delivered to any other department or agency of the Government of the United States.

The payment for each fiscal year shall be apportioned among said States in the following manner: One-half of said payment shall be apportioned by paying to each State the percentage thereof

The payment for each fiscal year shall be apportioned among said States in the following manner: One-half of said payment shall be apportioned by paying to each State the percentage thereof which the gross proceeds of the power sales by the Corporation within said State during the preceding fiscal year bears to the total gross proceeds from all power sales by the Corporation during the preceding fiscal year; the remaining one-half of said payment shall be apportioned by paying to each State the percentage thereof which the book value of the power property held by the Corporation within said State at the end of the preceding fiscal year bears to the total book value of all such property held by the Corporation on the same date. The book value of power property shall include that portion of the investment allocated or estimated to be allocable to power. Provided, That the minimum annual payment to each State shall not be less than the 2-year average of the State and local ad valorem property taxes levied against power property purchased and operated by the Corporation in said State plus that portion of reservoir lands related to dams constructed by or on behalf of the United States Government and allocated or estimated to be allocable to power. The said 2-year average shall be calculated for the last 2 tax years during which said property was privately owned and operated. Provided, further, That the minimum annual payment to each State in which the Corporation owns and operates power property shall not be less than $10,000 in any case. The determination of the board of the amounts due hereunder to the respective States shall be final.

The payments above provided shall in each case be made to the State not later than July 31 of each year, and it is the intention of the Congress that each State shall redistribute said payments or a portion thereof to counties and other local taxing districts affected by the program of the Corporation.

It is likewise intended that each of the said States shall in like manner redis manner redistribute all payments made in lieu of taxation paid to municipalities by municipal authorities as provided in contracts made for the purchase of power from the Corporation.

The Corporation shall, not later than January 1, 1945, submit to the Congress a report on the operation of the provisions of this section, including a statement of the distribution to the various States hereunder and the redistribution by the States of the amounts paid to them; the effect of the operation of the provisions of this section on State and local finances; an appraisal of the benefits of the program of the Corporation to the States receiving payments hereunder and to the local subdivisions thereof, and the effect of such benefits in increasing taxable values within such States and local subdivisions; and such other data, information, and recommendations as may be pertinent to future legislation.

The letter, statistics, and statement presented by Mr. Norris are as follows:

TENNESSEE VALLEY AUTHORITY, KNOXVILLE, TENN., July 28, 1939.

Tennessee Valley Authority,
Knoxville, Tenn., July 28, 1939.

The Honorable George W. Norris,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

Dear Senator Norris: Some weeks ago during the course of public hearings before the Committee on Military Affairs on the bill to amend the bond-issuing powers of the Tennessee Valley Authority, you stated that you would introduce in this session of the Congress a bill revising section 13 of the T. V. A. Act which deals with payment in lieu of taxes by T. V. A. to the States. You urged that this subject should not be dealt with in the bond legislation because, among other things, it was advisable that conferences be held between the T. V. A. and the States concerned and that further study be given to the matter. The conferences were proposed for the purpose of seeking agreement on the amount of tax losses that would arise from the transfer of private property to tax-exempt public ownership and the fiscal effects to be anticipated from such transfers. It was proposed in addition that there be an exchange of views between the T. V. A. and the various States on the complicated problem of T. V. A. contributions to the cost of State and local government.

These conferences have proceeded with due diligence. In Tennessee, Governor Cooper appointed a State committee consisting of Mr. George Fort Milton, publisher of the Chattanooga News; Mr. Lon McFarland, general counsel for the Tennessee Railroad and Public Utilities Commission, and Mr. Will Gerber, city attorney of the city of Memphis. A number of conferences were held between representatives of the T. V. A. and this State committee. In Alabama, such conferences were had with Governor Dixon, Mr. John W. Lapsley, counsel for the State department of revenue, and also with an interim committee of the State legislature appointed for the purpose of considering this subject. In Georgia, conferences were had with Governor Rivers and other State officials. In Kentucky, the conferences included Governor Chandler and Acting Commissioner of Rev ing of this draft will indicate clearly its content, some additional comments may be useful.

1. The in-lieu-payment problem involves fundamental policy considerations as well as public-finance issues that are more technical in character. There was considerable difference of opinion on the issues involved within the T. V. A. staff itself and among the able tax consultants who considered the problem. Differing and conflicting interests were found among the States and between the Authority and the various States.

2. The draft of the recommended bill provides that the payment by the T. V. A. to the States as a contribution to the cost of State and local government be 10 percent of gross proceeds from the sale of power for the first year and that it be graduated downward over a period of years to 5 percent. Due to the expanding gross revenues of the T. V. A. from the same service area and without any expansion of its market area the declining percentages are estimated to yield substantially a constant amount until 1949. After that date the amount payable to the States under the constant 5 percent would increase in proportion to revenue expansions.

under the constant 5 percent would increase in proportion to revenue expansions.

3. The enclosed statistical tables show that the total estimated annual payments to the States will be approximately $1,200,000. The percentages of gross proceeds from power sales provide about $1,100,000 of this annual payment. The remaining $100,000 is added because of a proviso that the minimum annual payment shall be equal to the former State and local ad valorem property taxes levied on property acquired from utility companies and on that share of the purchased reservoir lands properly allocated to nower.

4. An important feature of this recommended bill is a formula 4. An important reature of this recommended bill is a formula for the allocation among the several States of the total payment set aside by T. V. A. for tax equivalents. This formula gives equal weight to (a) T. V. A. power-property investment in the State and (b) T. V. A. power revenues derived in the State. Estimates of the percentage distribution by States of power sales and power property are given in the accompanying tables for the fiscal years (beginning July 1) 1940-44. 5. The minimum payment of $10,000 a year to each State means that prior to an allocation of properties in process of construction in North Carolina (Hiwassee) and Kentucky (Gilbertsville, now known as the Kentucky Dam) these States will receive some revenue in recognition of the tax problem which certain of their counties in the presence of the lax problem.

ties in the reservoirs will experience.
6. The payments to the States under the proposed bill are less than the total of State and local taxes formerly collected on the than the total of State and local taxes formerly collected on the purchased property and operations of privately owned utilities and private landowners. We consider the 10-percent payment for the first year to be a fair State and local tax equivalent. Since the power program of the Authority is conferring valuable benefits in the area and is producing and marketing a volume of power greatly in excess of the operations that could have been expected under private ownership, it appears equitable that a portion of this tax equivalent be retained by the Authority for the Federal Treasury. The report required on January 1, 1945, should indicate whether or not the allowance for such benefits conforms to sound and desirable fiscal policy.

The only subject dealt with in this recommended draft of bill

The only subject dealt with in this recommended draft of bill The only subject dealt with in this recommended draft of bill is the Federal Government's contribution on property which it owns; the contribution to the State and local subdivisions by municipalities and other public agencies owning their own electric facilities is, of course, not included in these computations nor covered by this proposed bill. We have reason to believe that the States—certainly the State of Tennessee, which is most extensively affected—will energy State legislation providing for such payments by municipalienact State legislation providing for such payments by municipalities to the State and other local agencies.

As you know, the T. V. A. Board has committed itself to indicate to the States and other interested parties the results of its investigation of the facts and its recommendations respecting tax adjust-Such a report, directed to the agencies with whom we have been conferring, will be made sometime next week.

Drafts of this letter and the proposed amendment to section 13 have been submitted to the Bureau of the Budget, which has advised that there would be no objection to their transmission with the understanding that no commitment would thereby be made with respect to the relationship of the proposed legislation to the program of the President.

Sincerely yours,

TENNESSEE VALLEY AUTHORITY, HARCOURT A. MORGAN, Chairman of the Board.

I Minimum payment to States guaranteed under proposed amendment to see. 13. Drafted July 13, 1939.

Includes $1,725 State and local property taxes estimated to have been lost through War Department land purchases for Wilson Dam, Reservoir, and a small amount of reservation located north of the Tennessee River.

Estimate based upon probable Tennessee Valley Authority land acquisition through fiscal year 1940. Preliminary data indicate that the ultimate tax-revenue loss as a result of Tennessee Valley Authority purchase of reservoir lands in Kentucky may approximate $15,000.

Includes total computed tax losses resulting from Pickwick, Guntersville, Chickamanga, and Norris Reservoirs, plus estimate of $10,000 for Gilbertsville and $5,000 for Watts bar reservoirs. Preliminary data indicate that the ultimate tax-revenue loss as a result of Tennessee Valley Authority purchase of reservoir lands for the Gilbertsville project in Tennessee may approximate $50,000, and for the Watts bar project, $30,000.

JOINT STATEMENT OF REPRESENTATIVE SPARKMAN, OF ALABAMA, AND SENATOR NORRIS, OF NEBRASKA, RELATING TO BILL INTRODUCED TO AMEND SECTION 13 OF THE TENNESSEE VALLEY AUTHORITY ACT OF 1933. WITH REFERENCE TO CONTRIBUTIONS OF THE TENNESSEE VALLEY AUTHORITY, IN LIEU OF TAXATION

JULY 31, 1939.

We have today introduced in the House and the Senate identical bills, the purpose of which is to amend section 13 of the Tennessee Valley Authority Act to provide for payments to the States by the Tennessee Valley Authority, in lieu of taxation.

The bill provides that a fund shall be created for this purpose by a levy upon the gross receipts from power sales in the fiscal year 1940 of 10 percent of such sales. This percentage shall gradually be reduced during succeeding fiscal years until the fiscal year 1948 and thereafter, when such percentage shall Excluding power used by the Authority or sold or delivered to any other department or agency of the Government of the United States.

The sales estimates for each year have been reduced by about $775,000 to allow for contingencies such as the curtailment in delivery of interruptible and secondary power to industry.

Revenue estimates assumes transfer of Tennessee Electric Power, Alabama and Mississippi properties by Aug. 15, 1939.

be 5 percent. It is estimated that on account of increased sales practically the same amount of money will be raised during each of these years.

This fund so created shall be divided among the States where the properties of the T. V. A. are located, as follows: One-half of said fund shall be apportioned by paying to each State the percentage thereof of which the gross proceeds of the power sales by the corporation within such State during the preceding fiscal year bears to the total gross proceeds from all sales of power. The other one-half of said fund shall be apportioned by paying to each State the percentage thereof which the book value of the power property held by the corporation within said State bears to the total book value of all property held by the T. V. A. on the same date. The book value of the power property includes that portion of the investment allocated to power. It is provided that the minimum annual payment to each State under this division shall not be less than the 2-year average of State and local ad valorem property taxes levied against said property purchased and operated by the T. V. A. in said State, plus that portion of reservoir lands related to dams constructed by the Government of the United States and allocated to power. The 2-year average is calculated for the last 2 years during which This fund so created shall be divided among the States where The 2-year average is calculated for the last 2 years during which

The 2-year average is calculated for the last 2 years during which said property was privately owned and operated.

The bill we have introduced is tentative in its nature. We do not intend to attempt to secure the passage of the bill at this session. We introduce it now for the purpose of inviting criticism from all interested parties. We expect further studies to be made of the subject matter by the T. V. A., the tax representatives of the various States affected, and other experts representing the Government of the United States between now and the beginning of the next session of Congress, at which time it is ing the Government of the United States between now and the beginning of the next session of Congress, at which time it is also our expectation that such studies will be completed and that hearings shall be held upon the bill, with a view of changing or correcting anything that appears to be wrong as a result of such studies, that Congress may be informed of all the facts relating to the subject, so that legislation can be had at the beginning of the next session of Congress.

We desire also to call attention to the fact that the money to

We desire, also, to call attention to the fact that the money to be raised by the provisions of this bill is not the only contribution made in lieu of taxes. When the T. V. A. contracts with a municipality to sell power, it is provided in said contract there shall be paid out of revenues received from the sale of power a sum equal to what the distribution system would pay in taxes, if such system were privately owned. The vertous sums thus if such system were privately owned. The various sums thus raised should be added to the fund created by the bill in order to get a true picture as to what the entire T. V. A. system would pay in lieu of taxes, if this is enacted into law.

We have also had printed in the Congressional Record a alter from the chairman of the Board of the Tennessee Valley Authority, with accompanying tables and statistics, showing the study which has thus far been made by the T. V. A. and the various State representatives of this very perplexing question.

FOREST RESTORATION

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, in behalf of myself, Senator Byrnes, of South Carolina, Senator Brown, of Michigan, and Senator La Follette, of Wisconsin, I ask consent to introduce, for appropriate reference, a bill embodying a forest-restoration plan. The purpose of the bill is to restore idle forest land to production and help to rehabilitate men and bring communities new forest areas without additional appropriations-the money to pay for the work being transferred from relief or public works funds to the Secretary of Agriculture who would use the funds as a form of credit to improve those lands. The bulk of the work would be done in distressed forest regions where the struggle for existence is most strenuous. These regions are located in the sections of the country where the forests have been denuded, namely: New England States, Midwestern Lake States, and Southern States. It is believed the proper development of these areas will afford both an opportunity for worth-while employment of relief labor on the basis of recovery in part of the labor cost and will also result in community betterment and an economic gain of substantial proportions.

It is estimated the program of forest work, if carried out on a Nation-wide scale, would give temporary part-time employment to as many as 1,000,000 relief workers in localities adjoining rural areas.

The plan is to be administered by the Secretary of Agriculture in association with State forestry agencies, voluntary State committees, and county advisory committees.

The essence of the plan is the leasing by the Government of private-owned depleted forest lands by voluntary contractual agreement. No owner of denuded forest lands is under any compulsion to lease his land. The rental under the lease, payable annually by the Government to the owners, is an amount not exceeding the annual average of the taxes for the preceding 5 years. This rental would permit the owner to pay his local real-estate tax. The term of the lease by the Government from the owner would run until the Government has obtained reimbursement for its expenditures to the extent of 50 percent, without interest in all cases, except where the lease embraces more than 500 acres from an owner. In such cases the reimbursement to the Government is to be 100 percent.

The owner may, at any time, terminate his lease with the Government if he refunds the advances made by the Government on his land.

The work by the Government is to include planting, harvesting, and marketing of forest products, all costs paid by the Government.

It is believed this plan will encourage villages, towns, and school districts to start a community forest since the plan will aid and assist them in properly managing the property.

Preference in employment under this program of work is to be given to the owner or occupant of the lands in the forest restoration units and to qualified local persons in need of employment in the vicinity of these areas.

The plan has been under consideration for some time by a number of public-spirited citizens residing in the areas and after consultation and cooperation with the Federal Forest Service, and is now submitted to the Congress for study and investigation.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the bill will be received and appropriately referred.

(See Senate bill 2927, introduced today by Mr. Walsh (for himself, Mr. Byrnes, Mr. Brown, and Mr. La Follette), which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, and appears under the appropriate heading.)

EXTENSION OF CREDITS AND LOANS TO FOREIGN NATIONS AND NATIONALS

Mr. GILLETTE submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 173), which was referred to the Committee on Banking and Currency:

Resolved, That a special committee of five Senators, to be appointed by the President of the Senate, is authorized and directed to make a full and complete study and investigation with respect to make a full and complete study and investigation with respect to (1) the extension of credits, and the lending and advancing of funds, by agencies or instrumentalities of the United States to foreign governments or to foreign governmental agencies or instrumentalities or to foreign nationals, (2) the effects and desirability of such extensions of credits and loans and advances of funds, and (3) the use which has been or may be made of such credits and funds. The committee shall report to the Senate, as soon as practicable, the results of its study and investigations, together with its recommendations.

For the purposes of this resolution the committee, or any duly authorized subcommittee thereof, is authorized to hold such hear-authorized subcommittee thereof, is authorized to hold such hearauthorized subcommittee thereof, is authorized to hold such hearings, to sit and act at such times and places during the sessions and recesses of the Senate in the Seventy-sixth and succeeding Congresses, to employ such clerical and other assistants, to require by subpena or otherwise the attendance of such witnesses and the production of such books, papers, and documents, to administer such oaths, to take such testimony, and to make such expenditures, as it deems advisable. The cost of stenographic services to report such hearings shall not be in excess of 25 cents per 100 words. The expenses of the committee, which shall not exceed $15,000, shall be paid from the contingent fund of the Senate, upon vouchers approved by the chairman.

TOBACCO INQUIRY

Mr. GEORGE. I submit a resolution for reference to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry. With the permission of the Senate I will read the resolution, because it is in my own handwriting, and the clerk might have some difficulty in deciphering it.

The resolution (S. Res. 175) is as follows:

Resolved, That a committee of five Senators be appointed by the Vice President to inquire into:
(1) The stocks of flue-cured tobacco now on hand, whether in the hands of growers, warehousemen or manufacturers;

(2) The consumption of tobacco during the last 12 months;
(3) The cause of the present decline in prices of unmanufactured tobacco (raw tobacco) prevailing in the 1939 market;
(4) What if any steps have been taken by the Department of Agriculture to stabilize the price to the American producers of the 1939 crop now coming on the market;— and report to the Senate at the earliest practicable time.

That $1,000 be appropriated for such inquiry and investigation, and that the committee shall have the usual powers of investigating committees.

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, I ask that the resolution be referred to the committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered.

INVESTIGATION OF NEGOTIATIONS BY AMERICAN CITIZENS RELATIVE TO CERTAIN OIL SALES IN MEXICO

Mr. BRIDGES submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 177), which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations:

Whereas various editorials and news articles have been published in the daily press from time to time concerning the activities of certain American citizens with the Mexican Government in connection with the sale, barter, or exchange of Mexican oil; and Whereas, due to the expropriation of certain American-owned oil

Whereas, due to the expropriation of certain American-owned oil properties by the Mexican Government, such activities of the American citizens are vitally important to the Government of the United

Whereas it is alleged that a certain official or officials of the United States Government have appeared in Mexico and made public statements to the effect that the expropriation of the said property of certain American citizens was in accord with the social objectives of the New Deal; and

Whereas it is alleged that the expropriated property of the said American citizens has been sold, traded, or bartered to certain foreign powers with the aid, assistance, and connivance of American citizens to the detriment of American trade and industry; and

Whereas it is alleged that certain American citizens, members of the Congress of Industrial Organization and the Non-Partisan Labor League, were active in promoting the expropriation of the said properties of American citizens; and

Whereas the said expropriation of American-owned properties in Mexico is not compatible with the so-called good-neighbor policy maintained by the United States and Central and South American governments; and

Whereas it is alleged that certain of the above-mentioned American citizens who are concerned with the activities in connection with the expropriation of the said American properties in Mexico have been large contributors to political campaigns in the United States; and

Whereas the United States Government aids and assists the Mexican Government, which has expropriated the above-mentioned properties of American citizens, by its purchase of Mexican silver at a premium: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That a committee of three Senators be appointed by the President of the Senate and directed to make a full and complete investigation of any and all negotiations carried on by officials of the United States Government or other citizens of the United States with the Mexican Government, or any official thereof, or citizens thereof, in connection with the sale, barter, exchange, or trade of oil produced on American-owned property expropriated by the Mexican Government, with the view of determining whether such editorials, news articles, or other statements made in connection with such negotiations are true or whether any criminal statute of United States has been violated. The committee shall report to the Senate as soon as practicable after the commencement of the next session of the Seventy-sixth Congress the results of the investigation, together with its recommendation, if any, for necessary legislation. For the purposes of this resolution the committee, or any duly authorized subcommittee thereof, is authorized to hold such hearings, to sit and act at such times and places during the recesses and adjourned periods of the Senate in the Seventy-sixth Congress, to employ such clerical, investigators, and other assistants, to require by subpena or otherwise the attendance of such witnesses and the production of such books, papers, and documents, to administer such oaths, to take such testimony, and to make such expenditures as it deems advisable. The cost of stenographic services to report such hearings shall not be in excess of 5c cents per hundred words. The expenses of such hearings, which shall not exceed $25,000, shall be paid from the contingent fund of the Senate upon vouchers approved by the chairman.

RESIGNATION OF JESSE H. JONES AS CHAIRMAN OF THE BOARD OF THE RECONSTRUCTION FINANCE CORPORATION

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the Record the letter from Jesse H. Jones, tendering his resignation as Chairman of the Board of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, together with resolutions passed by the Board extending their felicitations to Mr. Jones on the new avenues of useful activity opened to him in his position as Federal Loan Administrator.

There being no objection, the matters were ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

RECONSTRUCTION FINANCE CORPORATION, Washington, July 15, 1939.

To the Board of Directors:

To the Board of Directors:

I hereby tender you my resignation as Chairman of our Board. Tomorrow I shall resign as a director of the Corporation to accept appointment by the President as Federal Loan Administrator.

I need not tell you that I resign as your Chairman and leave the Board with a heavy heart. Not because I feel that someone else cannot take my place, and do as well both as a director and as Chairman, but because of the more than 7 years' association with you and the others who have served on the Board and in the Corporation since it was organized February 2, 1932.

It is my belief that no body of men in public or private business has ever gotten along more harmoniously than our Board and those who have served the Corporation with us.

Bipartisan by act of Congress, I am glad to be able to say that politics and partisanship have never influenced our decisions.

The R. F. C. has rendered a great service to the American people, far greater than can be generally known. It has averted ruin and disaster for millions of our citizens.

disaster for millions of our citizens.

It has saved millions of depositors and shareholders in banks and building and loan associations; it has strengthened the banking system of the country, making loans to and putting capital in more than 10,000 banks; it has aided millions of farmers and stockmen through loans and advances on their products and livestock, and through refinancing drainage, levee, and irrigation districts has enabled a great many farmers and landowners to reduce by two-thirds the water and debt charges on their lands; it has helped thousands of home owners save their homes, and made possible the construction of many new homes; it has created work for millions of nearly through loans to husters enterprises and for useful of people through loans to business enterprises and for useful public works; it has extended aid to thousands of victims of disasters; and in many other ways has contributed to the economic stability of our country.

All this has been accomplished without any net loss or cost to the Government, and yet every deserving borrower who has asked for credit has been given credit where he could comply with the letter and the spirit of the law under which we operate.

If I were leaving the R. F. C. entirely, I would be unhappy beyond expression. I love the organization, and have a deep affection for every member of it. I appreciate the service and loyalty they have given it, and like to believe that everyone connected with the Corporation has the same pride in its achievements that I have. I love the very name "R. F. C." It represents 7½ years of my life, and is a part of me. a part of me.
With every good wish for its continued success,

Sincerely yours,

JESSE H. JONES. Chairman.

Whereas Jesse H. Jones became a member of the Board of Directors of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation on February 2, 1932, the date the Corporation was organized, and was elected Chairman of the Board on May 5, 1933; and Whereas Mr. Jones has been appointed by the President of the United States Federal Loan Administrator, in charge of the Federal Loan Agency, of which this Corporation is a part; and in consequence thereof has resigned as Chairman and a member of this Board:

Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the members of the Board of Directors of this Corporation express to Mr. Jones their sincere congratulations and best wishes in his new undertaking and their genuine happiness that they will continue to be closely associated with him as Federal Loan

Administrator; that It is the sense of the Board that the great emergency service which the R. F. C. has rendered in a national crisis has been due in greatest measure to the statesmanship and rare business ability of Mr.
Jones, whose outstanding qualities of leadership have commanded public confidence; that

His attributes of high character, understanding of human problems, and devotion to the public interest have been an inspiration to his associates and have endeared him to the people of all political faiths, so much so that the R. F. C. and Jesse Jones have become synonymous in the public mind; that

It is the unanimous view of the members of this Board, concurred in by the entire staff, that there be recorded in the minutes of this Corporation an expression of their genuine love and friendship for Mr. Jones; and that it has been a privilege to serve with him on the Board of Directors of the R. F. C., and it will be an honor to serve under him as Federal Loan Administrator; be it further

Resolved, That these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of this Corporation this the 17th day of July 1939, and an engrossed copy thereof, signed by the members of the Board, be transmitted by the secretary, under the seal of the Corporation, to Mr. Jones with the high esteem and affectionate regard of the members of the Board and the entire staff of the Corporation; be it further Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be transmitted by the Secretary to the President of the United States, the President of the Senate, and the Speaker of the House of Representatives.

UNEMPLOYMENT AND CORRELATED PROBLEMS OF SECURITY-ADDRESS BY W. ARTHUR SIMPSON

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD an address entitled "Unemployment and Correlated Problems of Security," delivered by Hon. W. Arthur Simpson, director of old-age assistance, State of Vermont, at the Social Work Institute, University of New Hampshire, Durham, N. H., on July 31, 1939.

In this connection, I wish to call attention to certain phrases which are contained in the address. I quote only a part of it:

The dangerous trend in social legislation today is toward a federally paid pension for the aged without regard to need and the abandonment of the social concept of insurance to each on the basis of earned contributions.

Any attempts to fix minimum amounts of public assistance by legislative enactment destroys the means test as a requisite for aid. Good social practice requires that public assistance be given on the basis of need as determined by sound budgetary standards. Any other policy will lead to endless political manipulation and abuse, and would be economically disastrous.

We have embarked on a great social experiment. The program represents the most comprehensive insurance undertaken in the world. Its provisions are as liberal as can be expected from any Government. It remains to be seen whether the country will be financially able to carry out these new and stupendous social undertakings.

undertakings.

The best friend of social security is the friend who keeps it solvent

Mr. Simpson has had a distinguished record as administrator of social security in the State of Vermont, and I regard his address as important for public consideration.

There being no objection, the address was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

ADDRESS BY W. ARTHUR SIMPSON, DIRECTOR OF OLD-AGE ASSISTANCE, STATE OF VERMONT, AT THE SOCIAL WORK INSTITUTE, UNIVERSITY OF NEW HAMPSHIRE, DURHAM, N. H., JULY 31, 1939

For many years in this country we went on the theory that any man who wanted a job could get it; and if he worked hard, he could support himself without the help of Government. Private initiaman who wanted a job could get it; and if he worked hard, he could support himself without the help of Government. Private initiative and enterprise and our policy of encouraging industry and thrift had resulted in the American system under which a reasonable economic prosperity was more nearly universal than in any other country in the world. Our living was more expensive and more enjoyable than any developed elsewhere at any time in human history. It required 300 years of sacrifice, hard work, careful planning, and prudent saving to build this Nation into the high position it occupies among the nations of the world.

The depression which began in 1929 brought home to everyone that even America was no Utopia, that many people could not secure work, that many hard workers were unable to provide for their old age, and that savings had been wiped out or exhausted and earnings from investments had been greatly reduced. The uncertainties of jobs, wages, and of returns from efforts put into farming and other producing occupations have been and are everincreasing factors in the great social problem of the Nation.

America was largely a self-sustaining country for over 200 years. A majority of its citizens lived off the land or in relatively small self-sustaining communities supplying their own needs. The Nation had tremendous room for expansion. Life was not easy, sacrifice and hard work were essential to existence, but opportunity was virtually unlimited. Less than 100 years ago our great industrial developments were in their infancy. The shoe business and then textiles were the first great New England industries which built up our urban centers and drained away the young blood from the farms of Vermont, New Hampshire, and Maine. With approximately every 20 years new and specialized great industries came into operation in the Nation. The employment of persons in industry was progressively increased in an expanding ratio for nearly two generations. progressively increased in an expanding ratio for nearly two generations.

In our most prosperous year, 1929, there were gainfully employed 36,000,000 workers. A decade later, this year, we have gainfully employed only 33,000,000 workers, in spite of the fact that about 10,000,000 new workers have grown up and become available in the Nation. A simple mathematical calculation gives the reason for nation. A simple mathematical calculation gives the reason for many of our prevailing social and economic problems.

Agriculture has passed from the self-sustaining stage to a highly specialized industry hedged about by many man-made restrictions. It is at the mercy not of the elements alone but of highly organized distributors. Specialized agriculture is in competition not only with other parts of the Nation but with many and similar products with other parts of the Nation but with many and similar products from abroad negotiated for through trade pacts with the entire world. Consequently, nearly all the rural sections of our northern New England States are progressively declining in productive land use, in population, and particularly in taxing ability. We must not forget that all the civilizations of history came into being and were supported by the self-sustaining way of life.

This country was built up by the constant establishment of new business and the expansion of old businesses. In every city and every village throughout the country men were constantly starting out on their own initiative to improve on the enterprises of others or develop a new product. They put a few men to work. If successful, they expanded to employ ten or a hundred or thousands. If unsuccessful, they passed from the picture without need of Government subsidy. New methods of production were found and small industries expanded into large industries. Men were willing to spend their time and their money in order that they might provide more completely for themselves and their family in their old age, in order that they might rise above the average standard of living and enjoy a little more luxury or a little more power. In the last 6 years this process has come to an end.

The first and most important problem is that of unemployment. The question is how we can encourage again in the United States the tremendous volume of private enterprise which existed in the twenties. Our national income is still far below that of 1928, although there are 10,000,000 more people today among whom it must be divided. If we could get back to the business activity of those days, we should have a $90,000,000,000 income, 40 percent larger than we have today. Any such increase would take up the greater part of the present unemployment. Unless it can be cured we may have to admit that the whole American system of democratic government is a failure.

Further reference to the background of the problems of insecurity are unnecessary, nor is it my purpose to review the social democratic government is a failure.

Further reference to the background of the problems of insecurity are unnecessary, nor is it my purpose to review the social security legislation which has been enacted for the very laudable purpose of erecting barriers against some of the hazards and vicissitudes of life. Some of us are concerned with one particular group, but we are all enlisted in the broad field of public service.

We have adopted the principle that unfortunate people must be assisted by Government and, since the resources of local governments are limited, we have recognized that the State and Federal Governments must supply a portion of the financial help. Programs of this nature are humanitarian in character and have met with the approval of a great majority of our people and are endorsed without political bias. There can be no question that these programs must be continued. If wisely and soundly administered they offer a dignified method of self-help, either in whole, or in part. Dependency may be complete in some instances, but in a vast majority of cases, public assistance must be made objective and rehabilitating; otherwise, it will destroy itself through unbearable burden upon the taxpayer. The only people through unbearable burden upon the taxpayer. The only people who can support men and women who cannot work, are those who through unbearable burden upon the taxpayer. The only people who can support men and women who cannot work, are those who are working. Obviously, even humanitarian measures must be administered conservatively and economically.

No government can long endure if any large group of its people are solely dependent upon government bounty. Otherwise, you reduce by taxation and extravagance those still engaged in productive enterprise and of necessity supporting those on relief, to the same common denominator. We cannot maintain humanitarian measures through a policy of taxation and borrowing which will completely bog down our industrial machine. Continued borrowing and a continued deficit can only lead to bankruptcy, inflation, confiscation, and repudiation.

We have been teaching all classes of our population to come to the Government for subsidies and handouts. Everybody is doing it. Every group numerous enough to form a lobby has been successful in dipping into the Treasury. The clamor to be on Government pay rolls is an indication of the trend. We may face a time when there will not be enough producers and wage earners to support privileged classes—public employees, delinquents, defectives, young children, the handicapped, and the aged.

We may be actuated by the most humanitarian motives and still insist that the menacing danger to sound programs and to the very existence of government itself lies in extreme liberalizing movements for class advantage or group control.

In many States militant minority groups constitute a voting meterity under our two-party relitical system and it is nossible that

In many States militant minority groups constitute a voting majority under our two-party political system, and it is possible that the only method to resist these pressure groups and to avoid national confiscation, repudiation, and bankruptcy will be a coalition form of government.

form of government.

It is required in this hour that the representatives of the people have vision, courage, and judgment. Politicians are continually tempted by the idea of promising from the Public Treasury greater benefits to certain groups. Thomas Jefferson dreaded a time to come when government could not be stopped from "wasting the substance of the people under pretense of taking care of them."

I realize that those who mention taxes and debt are not speaking on popular subjects. We are literally "voices crying in the wilderness." People do not want to listen to disagreeable subjects. They prefer to talk about the great unlimited resources of the Nation without being reminded of the mortgage on it. We administer relief and public assistance without thought of the future, still under the cloak of an emergency, still on a day-to-day basis and still imagining that there is some magic formula for solving the ills of the human race. There is grave need for genuine efforts toward rehabilitation and the situation constitutes a challenge to America greater than any challenge which America has faced.

and the situation constitutes a challenge to America greater than any challenge which America has faced.

We should honestly ask ourselves if the generation in control of this country today has the right to barter away the credit of the coming generation and their vested heritage. I contend that we have no right to pass on to posterity a crushing burden of debt which will put a mortgage upon the ambitions, the initiative, the ability, and the thrift of those who must take over the operation of the Nation.

The dangerous trend in social legislation today is toward a federally paid pension for the aged without regard to need and the abandonment of the social concept of insurance to each on the basis of earned contributions.

of earned contributions.

I am particularly concerned that the program for the aged be practical and sound. It must be financed in accordance with the ability of the Nation to support it, and it must not be enhanced to the detriment of other worthy and needy groups. The senior citizens of America whose work and sacrifice made it great among nations should have a sound conception of our system of government and, unless encouraged by political promises that run wild, would be the last to ask for any special consideration without reasonable effort to provide the ways and means to justify new benefits which some are promising to pay.

Any attempts to fix minimum amounts of public assistance by legislative enactment destroy the means test as a requisite for aid. Good social practice requires that public assistance be given on the basis of need as determined by sound budgetary standards. Any

The best friend of social security is the friend who keeps it solvent.

Mr. PEPPER subsequently said:

Mr. President, the Senator from Vermont [Mr. Austin] this morning put into the RECORD certain excerpts which he emphasized relative to social security. They are just three. He quoted from a speech delivered by W. Arthur Simpson as follows

The dangerous trend in social legislation today is toward a federally paid pension for the aged without regard to need and the abandonment of the social concept of insurance to each on the basis of earned contributions.

Any attempts to fix minimum amounts of public assistance by legislative enactment destroys the means test as a requisite for aid. Good social practice requires that public assistance be given on the basis of need as determined by sound budgetary standards. Any other policy will lead to endless political manipulation and abuse, and would be economically disastrous.

The last quotation was:

We have embarked on a great social experiment. The program represents the most comprehensive insurance undertaken in the world. Its provisions are as liberal as can be expected from any government. It remains to be seen whether the country will be financially able to carry out these new and stupendous social undertakings.

I want to ask the Senator whether or not by approving the quotations he put into the Record he intended to intimate or disclose that he was opposed to the Townsend plan.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, I do not feel obliged to pass on that question tonight.

PROGRAM FOR FINANCING RECOVERABLE EXPENDITURES

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill, S. 2864. to provide for the financing of a program of recoverable expenditures, and for other purposes.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, I offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 17, line 24, after the word "loans", it is proposed to insert "approved in the case of loans made under subdivision (2) of section 4 hereof by the Federal Loan Administrator."

Mr. BARKLEY. I have no objection to that amendment. The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the amendment is agreed to.

Mr. TAFT. I offer a further amendment, which I ask to have stated.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment will be stated. The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 18, line 15, it is proposed to strike out "$200,000,000" and insert "$125,000,000." Mr. TAFT. The Export-Import Bank was established as a District of Columbia corporation by Executive Order 6581, under authority of the National Industrial Recovery Act. The life of the bank was extended to June 30, 1939, by the act of January 31, 1935, and further extended to June 30, 1941, by an act which we passed on March 4 of this year. That act limited the amount of loans outstanding at any one time to $100,000,000. The spending-lending bill proposes to increase this limit to $200,000,000, and my amendment proposes that instead it shall be increased to $125,000,000.

The function of the Export-Import Bank is to promote our export trade by providing credit for American exporters. It was designed to assist these exporters, large and small, by providing credit for which the existing commercial machinery is somewhat inadequate. It was not intended to make longterm loans, and the $100,000,000 was to be revolving fund, constantly replacing itself as the short-term credits were paid off.

The Banking and Currency Committee and the Senate in February considered that $100,000,000 was ample for the proper purposes of the bank; but I have made this amendment $125,000,000 because that was the amount asked for by Mr. Jones in February, and I am willing to give full respect to his opinion at that time. In testifying before the House committee at that time he said:

I don't think we would ever need more than $125,000,000. like to have you put that in the act. (House hearings on H. R. 2011 and H. R. 4012, p. 95.)

In testifying before the Senate committee at that time, he

We suggested a limitation. Probably $100,000,000 is not quite enough, but Chairman Steagall asked me about that, and I told him we could get along with it.

The Senator from Delaware [Mr. Townsend] asked: Does that include the authorization of $25,000,000 to China?

And Mr. Jones said:

Yes, sir.

Mr. President, if $125,000,000 was sufficient in March, what is the reason for asking an increase at this time?

The answer is to be found in the President's letter to Senator Byrnes, which appears in the Record. In that letter he requests Congress to authorize him to lend $500,000,000 to foreign governments on short-term and long-term loans for the purpose of promoting our foreign trade. That created such a furor at the time that when the bill actually came in the only proposal was that the amount be increased by $100,000,000 and that it be given to the Export-Import Bank.

The Export-Import Bank has now outstanding, after many years' operation, loans in the sum of $53,000,000. Even of this $53,000,000, $10,000,000 is to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation itself for purposes which could be handled by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, and $10,000,000 is a loan recently made to the International Telephone & Telegraph Co., which has only an indirect relation to exports, and, according to Mr. Jones' testimony, could be handled by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation itself. In other words, it is not required that the money be used to finance exports. The company referred to is an exporting company, but it conducts its operations in foreign lands and probably the money would be used for that purpose. If these loans were paid off, the bank would have only $33,000,-000 outstanding, and this amendment would give it $92,000,-000 more. This would be ample for all legitimate purposes of the Export-Import Bank.

I think the fact that this money is sought for the purpose of making loans to foreign governments is perfectly clear from the record which has been made. Since February the bank has loaned $19,200,000 to the Bank of Brazil, for the purpose of freeing Brazilian exchange. In other words, Brazil was unable to pay its debts to American exporters, so we loaned them the money with which to pay those debts. It is in effect a loan to Brazil, which may be paid if the export balance of Brazil improves, and certainly will not be paid if the export balance of Brazil becomes worse. No one can tell what the condition of Brazil may be.

In addition to that, the bank has undertaken a half-million-dollar commitment to Nicaragua, with an additional commitment of $2,000,000 for freeing exchange. It has entered into a commitment to Paraguay for half a million dollars, and apparently has made a further commitment of $2,000,000 for sales of additional American materials. It has entered into a commitment for 5 years with the wholly Government-owned Bank of Uruguay for $4,000,000. It is understood that Paraguay and Nicaragua are also to get $2,000,000 more apiece with which to buy American goods.

In Haiti the bank has undertaken to finance, and has financed in part, $6,000,000 worth of internal improvements, and it is said that at least 20 percent of this amount is to be spent within Haiti, while the other 80 percent is spent for importing American road machinery and the like. Mr. Jones' discussion of this matter, on page 205, is very interesting. Mr. Jones said:

I think it is entirely fair to say to this committee that these loans you are discussing—to Haiti and to Nicaragua and to Paraguay—are loans made somewhat as a big brother to a little one. There is no argument about that. We would not go out and seek to make a loan in Haiti, to make money. If we can help our whole situation by making a small loan to Haiti, we think that we have served our country and we do not think that we shall loss any money on it. lose any money on it

Senator TAFT. Would you extend this power of having the Government loan money to other governments all over the world?

Mr. JONES. No; I certainly would not.

However, he now testifies that there is a commitment to the Portuguese railways, which is in effect the Portuguese Government, for $5,000,000, and a commitment to China to a total of $25,000,000, of which some $9,000,000 has been

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. TAFT. I would prefer if the Senator would wait until I conclude, on account of the limitation of time.

Mr. Jones also testifies that he is contemplating more loans to Brazil for heavy equipment. When asked what other future loans were contemplated, requiring an increase at this time, he referred to loans on cotton to be sold in Spain on 27 months' credit. As far as cotton is concerned, I see no reason why the Commodity Credit Corporation should not use some of its vast resources to sell cotton on credit, if that seems to be a desirable purpose, without calling on the Export-Import Bank.

An interesting discussion of the real point of view of the Government is contained in an article by Leon M. Pearson. brother of Drew Pearson, in the Washington Times-Herald of last Thursday, which I quote:

It was a party given by Hal Horan, of Time, and the speaker was the chairman of one of the most important New Deal agencies.

We ought to take a leaf from the German notebook, and offer terms to the Latin Americans that they can't refuse. And loans—they need more money, and we have this glut of gold. It takes only a little to give them a healthy shot in the arm.

Good neighbors? We're piddling! Kissing the fingertips! What we need is a good abrazo!

To understand what lies ahead in the field of United States—

To understand what lies ahead in the field of United States-Latin American relations, you have to sit in with a man like that, out of office hours. He is one of the New Deal thinkers, one of the planners. What he says is important, and he is not alone in saying it. There are two Cabinet officers who, in similar private corners, say the same thing.

Another thing in the article is interesting:

Paraguayan General Estigarribia, hero of the Chaco War, is passing good news around Asuncion these days. Just returned home from the Washington post, he is saying, in effect: "You read in the papers that we are to have half a million from the United States. The real fact is we are to have three million."

The official statement of the United States-Paraguayan agree-The official statement of the United States-Paraguayan agreement, dated June 13, carried only one dollar figure in the text—$500,000. And the press stories that followed made mention of this loan. No attention was paid to the statement, which carried no dollar figure, that the Export-Import Bank would cooperate with United States exporters and with Paraguay "in arranging for the financing of equipment" for highway construction.

Discreet inquiry disclosed that this financing would reach the figure of $3,000,000, possibly three and a half.

The question whether this Government shall loan money to foreign governments is certainly a fundamental question, which question Congress should determine. We have had a most unfortunate experience with such loans in the past, and foreign governments today owe this country more than $10,000,000,000, which there seems to be no possibility of collecting. Short-term credits contemplated by the Export-Import Bank really are likely to be paid off. People who make the loans feel the moral obligation to see that they are paid. But once a new government comes in, its attitude is likely to be one of complete lack of responsibility for obligations entered into years before. Unlike the other loans provided in this bill, there is no possible way in which loans to foreign governments can be collected short of war, and this country will not stand for threats of war to collect debts.

It is proposed that these loans be made to South American countries. Nearly all of these countries are in default on their obligations held in the United States.

There is inserted in the record of the hearings a list of the bonds of Latin-American countries held in this country. Out of $1,728,000,000, $1,277,000,000 of bonds are now in default. Of those the state of Brazil, for instance, is in default $366,000,000. Yet we have just loaned them another $19,000,000, and are contemplating further loans as part of the good-neighbor policy. Of those loans $168,000,000 represents obligations of the Brazilian Government itself held in this country, and something like $195,000,000 loans of Brazilian States and municipalities held in this country.

Some of the loans are to Mexico, which is in default $349,-000,000; and the testimony before the committee was that Mexico had a perfect record. They have never at any time paid a long-term debt held in the United States.

Those are the people to whom it is proposed that we set out on a new policy of Government loans. Whether we are justified in increasing our exports by selling the exports for silver, in effect, is a question which we debated a few days ago. But whether we are justified in selling exports for poor paper, for obligations which we cannot enforce, and which history seems to show are likely never to be paid, is certainly open to question. That is no legitimate way in which to increase the exports of the United States.

Our total export trade today is approximately two and a half billion dollars, and the most the Import-Export Bank has ever financed is about $50,000,000 a year, or 2 percent. The increase proposed, if entirely used, would increase the total export trade of the United States only 4 percent. That certainly is not a vitally important question in our entire economy. But I think that $125,000,000 will finance every feature of legitimate commercial enterprise, and assist American exporters as they should be assisted.

Incidentally, I notice that among the loans to foreign governments which are in default is $289,000 due from the Government of Nicaragua, to whom it is now proposed we extend loans of additional money. I think it may be somewhat doubtful whether under the Johnson Act they would be extended, because those appear to be part of the war debts.

The total foreign debt now in default is $11,436,000,000.

The whole purpose of this policy as I see it is to give the Government more chips in the game of international politics, if you please, supposed to be part of the good-neighbor policy. That is the purpose for which it is advanced. I question very much whether it is a legitimate part of the good-neighbor policy. I never saw a man who loaned money to all his neighbors around about who was regarded as a good neighbor for more than about 3 months after he made the loan. The Government does not make good credit for itself, it does not prove itself a good neighbor, by lending money to everybody in sight, because the day comes when it is necessary to ask the debtors for money. Uncle Sam is regarded as a Shylock today in every country in Europe simply because he is insisting on the payment of perfectly good, legitimate debts. If this policy is followed long, we will be regarded as a Shylock in every country in Latin and South America. That will be the inevitable result. It is not a policy of good neighborliness. If we cannot get the good will of South America except by sending them our goods for nothing, or for promises to pay money which, in the backs of their minds, they know they do not have to pay if they do not want to, then we might as well give up the

I think all our export trade should be sound export trade. No one has criticized more than the present administration the fact that the people of this country loaned $5,000,000,000 during the twenties for the export of foreign goods, $5,000,-000,000 which is still largely unpaid, in addition to the Government debts. It was an unsound policy; it was properly criticized; it was criticized because it built up on an unsound foundation large export trade in many industries which cannot possibly continue.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. TAFT. Will not the Senator wait until I conclude? The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator's time on the amendment has expired.

Mr. TAFT. I will use my time on the bill.

Mr. TYDINGS. Many loans were made by private citizens to foreign countries during the twenties, amounting to over $13,000,000,000.

Mr. TAFT. I thank the Senator for his correction.

Mr. President, I am as anxious as anyone to build up export trade, but not to build up export trade on unsound foundations, on loans that we cannot continue making. Americans thought in the 1920's that trade could be built up on foreign loans. But they found suddenly that such loans were unsound; that those to whom the loans were made would not pay the debt, and no one would finance further loans, and all those who were to be put to work in industry on the assumption that employment would be created by this export trade were suddenly put out of work and the condition was worse than it otherwise would have been.

Mr. President, that very policy has been criticized by the Government, by the present administration; it has been criticized by no one more strenuously than by the present administration itself, and for it to come forward now and say, "We want to adopt this policy of lending money to foreign governments in order to stimulate our export trade" is an absolute reversal of the position the administration has adopted for the last 7 years.

The other day the majority leader made a general attack on the theory of "dollar diplomacy." I say if anything can be called properly by the name of "dollar diplomacy" the proposed policy can. It may be contended that the only way to get the good will of these countries is by lending them money; that the only way to get the good will of these countries is by paying out gold, by shipping our surplus all over the world, through this dollar diplomacy, this diplomacy based solely on money, on financial advantage, but I say we will get exactly what we pay for, and that is an obligation on paper, but we will not get any good will and we will not get any substantial or permanent political advantage.

Mr. President, I, therefore, say that it seems to me the time has come to end the policy of lending to foreign governments. One hundred and twenty-five million dollars will take care of every legitimate purpose of trade. The adoption of this amendment will result only in the limitation to such an amount that the Government cannot effectively continue its policy of continuing to loan money to foreign governments. I feel confident it is a matter which the Senate and the other House should decide.

The provision of the bill is another general grant of power. It says that the Government may, in effect, make treaties with Brazil or with Paraguay or other countries without the consent of the Senate. The Senate should pass on the question, and if we do pass on the question by adopting this amendment I think we can be certain that the Government, except in the most extreme and absolutely essential cases, will no longer continue the policy of extending and developing loans to foreign governments.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, when this matter came up earlier in the year, under different circumstances not connected with any intensive efforts particularly such as we are trying to make now to expand our foreign trade, Mr. Jones, the chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, and Mr. Pierson, the president of the Export-Import Bank, asked Congress to increase the capital stock of the Export-Import Bank to $125,000,000. Congress increased it to $100,000,000. Now the success of the Export-Import Bank, through its operations in making loans to facilitate the exportation of American products, has been not only satisfactory but I think it has been outstanding. It has now to its credit by reason of these operations a profit of $1,700,000.

The argument made by the Senator from Ohio would almost convince one that he looked with a great deal of disfavor upon the Government of the United States doing anything to foster foreign trade or the export of American products. The argument has been made over and over again here that about 10 percent of our industrial production depends on foreign markets.

I realize that 10 percent is not so important as 90 percent, but if we are to adopt the policy of curtailing the sale of that 10 percent, or interfering with it altogether, we certainly shall be obliged to absorb that extra 10 percent in our domestic consumption, or stop that much production, and therefore throw more men and women out of employment.

It is nothing new for governments of the world to foster exports. We have sent commercial attachés and commercial representatives all over the world to work along with our consuls and our diplomats to try to find markets for American products.

The Japanese Nation is at this time concentrating on its efforts to find markets in South and Central America, and whenever they find those markets, to that extent they deprive manufacturers and laboring men in the United States of the opportunity to work and sell our products to the people to the south of us.

Loans made by the Export-Import Bank directly increase our exports of manufactured and agricultural commodities, and thereby increase employment. It is particularly true in reference to cotton and cotton products.

Most of our creditors now are promoting their trade and their exports by the extension of Government credits. In order to enable the United States to maintain its export markets abroad it is necessary that we take at least partial steps to be on a competitive basis with our chief competitors, particularly in Latin America. Several foreign countries are employing the devices of clearing agreements, subsidies, special currency units, and other instruments to obtain an increasing share of the world trade, particularly in the field of South and Central America. One of the steps this country can take to help protect its share of this commerce is to help our businessmen to sell goods abroad by giving them credit at low rates of interest.

The record of the Export-Import Bank is one of sound investment, which yields a substantial return to the Government.

Mr. President. I should like to call attention to some of these loans. The Senator from Ohio talks about ten billion or twelve billion or fourteen billion dollars now due the Government of the United States from foreign countries. The loans about which he speaks are loans which were made in connection with the war, either during it or following the World War, and they have no connection whatever with our effort here to create a corporation and to expand its operations to loan money to American institutions in order that they may finance exportations.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President-

Mr. BARKLEY. I have only 15 minutes, and I do not wish to take any time on the bill at this moment; and if the Senator will permit, I will ask him to wait until I have concluded my general observations.

So far as the defaulted debts in the United States, to which the Senator from Ohio refers, neither have they any connection with the operations of the Export-Import Bank. All these debts represented by bonds bought by American citizens were brought about through high-pressure methods of American bond and stock dealers. Our hearings back in 1932 before the Banking and Currency Committee show that many of these obligations were sold by American bankers and American bond and stock agents with the encouragement and almost with the connivance of the Government of the United States, in some cases, under another administration.

Now we are asked, because of those conditions, to deny to American industries an opportunity to sell their products and employ American labor. There is no connection whatever between the two situations.

What sort of loans have we been making? I have here a table furnished by the Export-Import Bank, giving the names of those who have acquired and who have received these loans. Here is one to Alexander Sprunt & Son, of Houston, Tex., for the purpose of exporting cotton to Czechoslovakia. That was a loan made to an American corporation to enable it to export American cotton.

Here is one to George H. McFadden & Bro., of New York. Loans were made to other companies, as follows: Williamson Cotton Co., of Dallas, Tex.; Bartz & Co., of Dallas, Tex.; American Cotton Cooperative Association, of New Orleans.

These loans amounted to $1,600,000, every dollar of which has been repaid.

A loan to Crespi & Co., of Dallas, Tex. A loan to Cook & Co., of Memphis, Tenn. A loan to Hannay-O'Donnell, of Dallas, Tex.

Another loan to George H. McFadden & Bro., of New York. A loan to S. B. Smith & Co., of Mayfield, Ky., in order to export tobacco to Spain. That was a loan of $672,000, all of which has been repaid except $46,000; and the unpaid balance is secured by the deposit of foreign currencies in the United States. Without that loan not an ounce or a pound of that tobacco could have been sold. Spain was formerly a very large customer for American tobacco. Time came when there was no purchase at all by Spain of American tobacco. Through this loan the exportation and sale of tobacco was facilitated without loss to the American Gov-

I have here a list of loans to other companies: Byington Co., of New York. Fisk Tire Export Co., Chicopee Falls, Mass. J. & H. Goodwin, Ltd., New York. H. S. Henry & Son, New York. A. G. Khouri & Co., Inc., New York. G. Lindner & Co., of New York. National Paper & Type Co., New York. Parker Pen Co., of Janesville, Wis. R. K. O. Export Corporation, New York. Raleigh Smokeless Fuel Co., Beckley, W. Va. H. W. St. John & Co., of New York. United American Bosch Corporation, of Springfield, Mass. Well Machinery & Supply Co., Inc., of Fort Worth, Tex. Duplex Printing Press Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Cameron Can Machinery Co., Chicago, Ill.

American Car & Foundry Co., in order to facilitate exports of freight cars.

American Locomotive Sales Corporation, in order to facilitate the exportation of American locomotives. The Brazilian Oiticica, Inc., of New York. While it has a Brazilian name, it is a New York corporation.

Centennial Cotton Gin Corporation, of Columbus, Ga.

Baldwin Locomotive Works, Philadelphia. American Locomotive Sales Corporation, New York.

Whitin Machine Works, of Whitinsville, Mass.

Bessa-Jones, Inc., of New York.

So, I might call attention to a long list of American corporations to which the Export-Import Bank has made loans. The list is too long for me to give it all in 15 minutes. So, there is today, Mr. President, according to the testimony of Mr. Pierson and according to the testimony of Mr. Jesse Jones, a demand for the increase in the capital stock of the Export-Import Bank. Mr. Jones testified that many of these loans were sound, but they were of a sort that a private banker would not be justified in taking the risk and making the loans, and if they had not been made these exports would not have been facilitated.

It may be said that the Government should not take a risk which a private banker is unwilling to take. However, if we should adopt that policy we should curtail and terminate the activities of the Government in making loans to farmers, to home owners, to industry, and to many other activities. If it had not been for the unwillingness or inability of private lending agencies to make these loans the Reconstruction Finance Corporation would not have been necessary at the outset. Neither would the Farm Credit Administration, the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, the Federal Housing Administration, the United States Housing Authority, or the Export-Import Bank itself. If it had not been for the fact that private credit was unable to perform the duties necessary in carrying out exports of American products, these other agencies would not have been necessary. If we do not want to sell anything to any foreign country we ought to abolish the Export-Import Bank altogether.

A small loan was made to Haiti, in which little country we have had some relationships in the past; and an American corporation was created to make a loan for the benefit of China, most of which has not even been used.

Mr. WAGNER. All that has been used has been repaid. Mr. BARKLEY. The Senator from New York reminds me that all that has been used has been repaid. The Export-Import Bank during its existence has made loans to American corporations. It has made loans to the Amtorg Corporation of New York in order to enable it to sell goods to Russia. Whatever may be said about Russia from a political standpoint, she has not defaulted in 20 years on a single obligation to anybody in the United States, and is now current with all her obligations. If it had not been for the loan we could not have exported cotton, farm machinery, and railway equipment to the people of Russia.

Mr. Jones says he needs this additional capital. In a conversation with me yesterday he reiterated the need for additional capital for the Export-Import Bank; Mr. Pierson, the president of the Export-Import Bank, has said the same thing.

These loans have turned out to be sound. The Export-Import Bank has made a profit of nearly $2,000,000 for the benefit of the United States. I think we can rely upon those in charge of the Export-Import Bank not to abuse the additional capital. The addition of only $25,000,000 to the $100,000,000 is an insignificant amount. The fact that $125,000,000 may have been all Mr. Jones asked for last March is no evidence that that is all he needs in August or September, or for the rest of the year.

I hope the Senator's amendment will be defeated. I do not wish to take any additional time. I think we all understand the operations of the Export-Import Bank. We know its history. We know the kind of loans it has been making. We know the kind it will continue to make; and we know that the more we can sell to the nations of the world of our products which are unsalable at home, the more men can be employed and the more profits can be made for American industry. Certainly the Senate of the United States does not desire to strike down the opportunity for expanding our markets in foreign countries.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, the Senator from Kentucky is, of course, correct when he says, that in effect these loans are made by the Export-Import Bank to American businessmen, because American businessmen hold the trade acceptances of foreign concerns. They cannot discount them in any of the other banks, so they take them to the Export-Import Bank, through which the Federal Government lends the money. However, in effect, the security upon which the loan is made is the obligation of the foreign concern, and not of an American concern.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. TYDINGS. I yield. Mr. BARKLEY. I am sure the Senator will agree not only that that statement is true with respect to the Export-Import Bank, but that the same practice is indulged in all over the world with respect to loans made by private lending agencies. They take the acceptances and securities of foreign corporations.

Mr. TYDINGS. The Senator is correct. However, the loan is made, of course, upon the securities of foreign corporations.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. TYDINGS. I have only 15 minutes. If the Senator will wait until I finish, I shall be glad to yield to him. I do not wish to be discourteous, but I cannot very well yield and have much time left.

Mr. President, some years ago I had a very industrious man working in my office who happened to be a former secretary for Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor. We became interested in the question of foreign loans, and at my request Mr. Oyster wrote to every financial, bonding, and stock house in America, and ascertained from them the foreign obligations which had been floated in this country—obligations of governments or subdivisions of governments, or of corporations. He compiled a very interesting record, which took him about 6 months to put together, and which at that time I put into the Congressional Record. I think it is apropos here, although several years have passed since the record was made. The figures are still very interesting.

At that time, about 1930, the total indebtedness in post-war loans owed to the United States or to the people of America who held Government bonds was $26,371,848,233. Of this amount $8,212,398,000 had been publicly offered by foreign governments, or subdivisions thereof, and sold in the United States. Three billion ninety-one million nine hundred and ninety-five thousand dollars had been publicly offered by foreign corporations and sold in the United States. These figures are exclusive of the war debts. Foreign governments and foreign corporations together borrowed from our people-not from our Government, but from our people-$11,304,393,000.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. TYDINGS. I yield.

Mr. PEPPER. During what period?

Mr. TYDINGS. This was from 1914 to the end of 1927, inclusive. It has nothing to do with the war debts. These were loans floated in the United States by foreign governments or subdivisions of foreign governments, and by foreign corporations, and not bought by our Government but by our people.

Mr. PEPPER. Does the Senator have the figures from the close of the war on down to 1927?

Mr. TYDINGS. I shall put the whole table in the RECORD. I ask unanimous consent that immediately following my remarks there may be printed in the Record a table showing the country, the amount of loans to foreign governments, the amount of loans to foreign corporations, the war debts, and the total indebtedness per capita of the foreign governments to the people of the United States.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the table may be printed in the RECORD. (See exhibit A.)

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. TYDINGS. In a moment.

I wish also to have printed in the RECORD immediately following my remarks a table showing the loans made in the United States in a single year—1927.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the table may be printed in the RECORD.

(See exhibit B.)

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, in the year 1927 foreign governments or subdivisions thereof or foreign corporations borrowed from our people $1,939,982,000, nearly $2,000,000,000 in a single year. Strange to say, that very year the same countries spent $3.973.484,000 on their national defenses. In other words, we let them have more than 50 percent of what their total war budgets cost that year.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. TYDINGS. I yield.

Mr. AUSTIN. Does the Senator's tabulation include loans made in 1916 and 1917?

Mr. TYDINGS. The table to which I have just referred is for the year 1927 alone. The first table included all loans from 1914 to 1927. However, the war loans appear in a separate column. They were not the loans which I was discussing at the time, which were private in their nature.

Mr. AUSTIN. Will the Senator yield for another question?

Mr. TYDINGS. I yield.

Mr. AUSTIN. My question referred to the table first introduced—that is, the nonwar loans—and I should like to ask the Senator another question if he will permit.

Mr. TYDINGS. Certainly.

Mr. AUSTIN. Does the Senator know whether or not the table includes a loan negotiated for the Republic of China for the building of national railways, made in 1916 and 1917 by a bank in the United States, and not by the Government of the United States?

Mr. TYDINGS. There is shown in the table a loan of $10,752,000 to the Government of China. I do not have the year.

Mr. AUSTIN. Does the Senator know whether or not his list includes other loans negotiated during 1916 and 1917 to the Chinese Republic for the dredging of the Grand Canal through Shantung Province?

Mr. TYDINGS. No; I do not have that figure before me.

It may be accurate. I have not the figure.

Mr. AUSTIN. I ask the Senator whether or not it is possible that other loans of similar character negotiated by American banks to foreign nations are not contained in his table.

Mr. TYDINGS. There is no doubt that there may be loans not incorporated in this table, for the simple reason that at that time no Government agency kept account of foreign loans. But what the Senator from Maryland attempted to do in 5 months of research and study and assembling figures was to get all the loans that he could discover and put them all into one category. This table is the result of facts and figures furnished me by the different bond houses of the United States that were engaged in selling foreign securities. From those figures this table was prepared. I do not mean to contend that there may not be and probably were not other loans, but these are the principal private loans and they amount to eleven-billionthree-hundred- and- four- million- and- some- odd- thousand dollars.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a further question?

Mr. TYDINGS. Yes. But I can only yield once more.

Mr. AUSTIN. I will not take long. Are those loans which were perfected by the sale of the bonds or were they loans which were merely contracted for?

Mr. TYDINGS. These are loans actually made for the sale of foreign securities, bonds, or obligations to the people of the United States.

Mr. AUSTIN. My question related to contracts negotiated and completed for loans.

Mr. TYDINGS. The figures that I have show how many foreign obligations were publicly sold to private citizens of the United States by foreign governments, subdivisions thereof, and foreign corporations.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. TYDINGS. I yield.

Mr. PEPPER. What was the last year given by the Senator in connection with those loans?

Mr. TYDINGS. The figures go up to 1927.

Mr. PEPPER. What I wanted to ask the Senator was, first, how much of that money was spent in the United States during that period of time?

Mr. TYDINGS. No doubt, some of it was.

Mr. PEPPER. The Senator, no doubt, would say that a large proportion of it was?

Mr. TYDINGS. No; I would not say that.

Mr. PEPPER. What could have been the incentive for the United States to be lending money unless some advantage was to be derived from it?

Mr. TYDINGS. Interest and investment purposes. Mr. PEPPER. Those loans were made by Republican administrations, were they not?

Mr. TYDINGS. Most of them were; yes. There is no doubt that a large majority of these foreign loans were made under the administrations that were in power from 1920 up to 1929, which was a period when foreign securities were being floated in this country almost every day. Several of us here questioned whether or not they could be repaid under existing international economy.

Mr. PEPPER. And a great many of them were impliedly, if not expressly, almost recommended by the United States Government, were they not?

Mr. TYDINGS. I would not want to say that, but certainly there was very little discouragement of the loans at the time.

We are about to walk slowly into another one of these lending programs. I do not doubt that we can lend money to Brazil, England, or to other countries and get some benefit from the loans, but the record shows that in 1929 and onward most of these foreign bonds held by the people of this country were in default as to interest, and there are bond committees all over the country today that are trying to work out some plan of settlement with foreign governments.

I shall support the amendment of the Senator from Ohio because it reduces the amount, and I shall support it because I believe it is a very dangerous policy for this Government to go further down the road of international loans. If private banks want to make them, that is something else, but for the Government to go into the business of making loans to foreign interests-for that is what it amounts to-in view of our past history is, indeed, very short-sighted.

I am not denying that there will be some benefit; in fact, the prosperity from 1920 to 1929 was largely secured through the medium of lending to our foreign customers the money with which they were buying our goods, for in those years our export trade was nearly $5,000,000,000 a year—the greatest we have ever had—and we were lending our foreign customers the money to pay for it, as the balance of trade was continually in our favor. But I think we will be very wise, even in this emergency, to go slowly in further committing this Government to a policy of international loans. If private industry wants to engage in that business, if private banking wants to engage in it. that is one thing, but to take the money out of the Treasury of the United States for such purposes, in view of our past relationships as a government and our present situation as a nation is to me unthinkable and most inadvisable. The loan authorization ought to be reduced in accordance with the amendment offered by the Senator from Ohio.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, I should like to ask the able Senator from Kentucky a question in my time. He presented an estimate indicating that the Export-Import Bank had made a profit of some $2,000,000. Will he indicate to me the period covered by that operation?

Mr. BARKLEY. I will have to consult the hearings; I cannot give the date from memory. I will do so later and will inform the Senator.

Mr. VANDENBERG. I think the question is rather important, because I strongly suspect that the profit to which the Senator refers was made during the time when the Export-Import Bank was confining itself almost exclusively to loans to exporters and importers and not loans to governments.

Mr. BARKLEY. I will state to the Senator in that connection that there has been no loss up to this time on any loan of the Export-Import Bank to any foreign government, but the number of such loans is so infinitesimal that it can hardly be considered in this whole picture. There was a loan made to Haiti, all of which was to be spent in this country; there was a loan to an American corporation for the benefit of China, which has been repaid; there was a loan to a concern with respect to some exportations into Brazil to enable Brazil to help carry on some internal improvements involving American trade; but the comparative amount and number of loans of that character is so insignificant that it is unfair to pick them out and try to make a "sore thumb" out of them.

Mr. VANDENBERG. The Senator is simply emphasizing the precise point I want to submit. The loans to governments heretofore have been infinitesimal. Therefore the losses have been infinitesimal. That is the precise point I am making, but from now on the purpose is different.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield there?

Mr. VANDENBERG. Yes.

Mr. BARKLEY. There is nothing in the hearings, nothing in the program that indicates that it will be carried on in any different way from that which has characterized it heretofore. The mere fact that the President in his letter to Senator Byrnes suggested direct loans to foreign governmnts has no relationship whatever to this proposal.

Mr. VANDENBERG. That is what I want to talk about, Mr. President, because I think it definitely and specifically has a relationship. If there is anybody in Washington who has a right to know definitely how much money the Export-Import Bank can use safely and expeditiously in connection with the promotion of foreign trade it is Jesse Jones.

Mr. Jones not only testified earlier in the year that a $125,000,000 maximum was all that he could possibly use but he was content to accept the $100,000,000 at that time for the purpose of making the kind of loans which were then contemplated by the Export-Import Bank.

The Senator from Kentucky has referred to his personal conversations with Mr. Jones. I do not know whether or not I am at liberty to refer to my personal conversations with him, but I had considerable to do in the initial conversation with Mr. Jones in fixing the limit at $100,000,000, and I know that at that time it was believed to be the completely adequate maximum for the direct promotion of American exports. Now the situation seems to have suddenly changed.

Mr. BARKLEY. Will the Senator yield for a moment further?

Mr. VANDENBERG. Yes.

Mr. BARKLEY. The net profit for the fiscal year 1939 of the Export-Import Bank was $1,744,630.

Mr. VANDENBERG. I thank the Senator. That was while we were still dealing substantially with loans to exporters and importers, that is when the Senator from Kentucky says loans to foreign governments were an infinitesimal part of the operation, and because they were an infinitesimal part of the operation, the Export-Import Bank operated at a profit; but when such loans cease to be an infinitesimal part then the Export-Import Bank is not only not going to operate at a profit but at a distinct and specific loss, as we know from all American experience on all external loans of this nature. The Senator from Kentucky said that at the time Mr. Jones made his estimate of $100,000,000 last February or March there was no special effort being made to promote American export trade.

Mr. President, ever since it started, this administration has been making a special effort to encourage export trade. Of course, there was a special emphasis at that time, as much as there is now, and there is just one thing that has happened to change the prospectus of the Export-Import Bank, and that one thing was disclosed by the President's letter to the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. Byrnes] when he said he wanted $500,000,000. For what purpose? For the extension of short-and-long-term loans to foreign governments.

Since the letter was written, and without waiting for any increased authorization from the Congress, the Export-Import Bank has gradually begun to make foreign loans to instrumentalities of foreign governments, precisely in line with the theory and purpose of the President's letter. Therefore, I submit that we are driven to the inevitable conclusion that the purpose of the increase is to deal with the instrumentalities of foreign governments, and that is the reason the money is required, rather than for the direct promotion of foreign trade. On that basis we are not entitled to proceed with one single, additional dollar of United States commitments. We know what the experience has been. The Senator from Ohio has presented it in unanswerable form.

If we are to continue to encourage export trade, which is a totally different thing, it can be done with the $125,000,000 provided by the amendment offered by the Senator from Ohio. The encouragement of export trade can be accomplished with maximum advantage and maximum utility upon the basis of the testimony of Mr. Jesse Jones himself. For that reason I submit that the amendment of the Senator from Ohio should be adopted.

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, in connection with the observations of the Senator from Michigan, I should like to read into the RECORD a few questions and anwers involving this very point. Senator Townsend asked Mr. Jones:

How much money have you now in the R. F. C. that you could loan?

Mr. Jones. For all purposes? Senator Townsend. Ye Mr. Jones. About $1,400,000,000.

Mr. WAGNER. Will the Senator state the page from which he is reading?

Mr. DANAHER. Page 219. Mr. President, at the top of page 220 the Senator from Delaware [Mr. Townsend] asked this question:

In your judgment, you have sufficient money to take care of any applications that you have?

Mr. JONES. Correct.

Now, skipping a few questions, I find this:

Senator Tart. Secretary Morgenthau said he expected they would spend $770,000,000 in the next few months, and you have $1,250,000,000 available. Senator Barkley. How close have you ever come to having your loans absorb your entire capital?

Mr. Jones. Not very close.

Senator Barkley. Is the present condition an average condition, or above or below?

Mr. Jones. I do not think we have ever been without at least a billion dollars of available credit.
Senator Byrnes. Why haven't you?

Mr. Jones. Because you have given us a pretty liberal allowance. Senator Byrnes. Is it necessary or not? Senator Townsend. You took care of all the applications that you thought were good, didn't you?

Now, Mr. President, referring again to a statement by Mr. Jones, which is found at the top of page 221:

Mr. Jones. I think we could carry a substantial amount of the equirements under this bill, under the present borrowing authority of the R. F. C.

Mr. Jones. I expect we could carry $770,000,000 in the next 12 months-certainly until you come back.

Mr. Jones. Yes; and you propose to give us $2,570,000,000 more in this bill. We can do some of this work under our present borrowing power, if the Congress should decide that they would authorize the projects but not authorize this much of increased borrowing power.

Mr. President, every question and every answer developed clearly that this program could fit within the already existing powers of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. With reference to the Commodity Credit Corporation, at this minute it has the power to handle all the cotton loans to which the Senator has referred.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. DANAHER. I yield.
Mr. BARKLEY. I understand there is no increase in the borrowing power or authority of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation by reason of the increase in the stock of the Export-Import Bank from $100,000,000 to $200,000,000. That is simply absorbed out of the authority they already have; so that there is no increase whatever in this bill of the borrowing authority of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation due to the Export-Import Bank. There was a reduction by that amount, $100,000,000, in the borrowing power, for general purposes, of the R. F. C.

Mr. DANAHER. However, Mr. President, there are at present over 46 millions of dollars of Export-Import Bank funds uncommitted, and if the amendment offered by the Senator from Ohio shall be adopted and we add $25,000,000 to that amount, we will have nearly doubled the available resources of the Export-Import Bank.

Mr. BARKLEY. Will the Senator yield there? Mr. DANAHER. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. We increased the capital to $100,000,000 only last March, and since that time they have been able to make commitments of practically $95,000,000, about $50,000,-000 of which has been repaid; so that within the very short period of 3 or 4 months the Reconstruction Finance Corporation or the Export-Import Bank absorbed practically the entire capital stock by making commitments.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield at that point?

Mr. DANAHER. I yield to the Senator from Michigan.

Mr. VANDENBERG. It made the increase chiefly by making commitments to foreign governments and instrumentalities of foreign governments.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. DANAHER. I yield. Mr. WAGNER. I wish to refer to the testimony of Mr. Jones, at page 260 of the hearings, in answer to the statement made by the Senator that some $46,000,000 are now available and have not been committed.

The Senator from Alabama [Mr. BANKHEAD] asked:

Then you have only forty-six millions of available resources? This is committed.

Mr. Jones. We have nothing that is not committed.

So, Mr. President, all of the money now available for lending purposes, under the control of the Export-Import Bank, is committed. Therefore, unless additional funds are provided, the Export-Import Bank will have absolutely no money with which to continue loaning, until some of the loans which have been made are repaid.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. DANAHER. I yield.

Mr. TAFT. As I explained, of the total outstanding loans of $53,000,000, twenty millions are not of foreign loans at all. The R. F. C. can take them over tomorrow. That makes $33,000,000 of foreign loans really outstanding. commitments are commitments to foreign governments in nearly every case.

Mr. WAGNER. The Senator does not mean to say that the commitments are foreign commitments in nearly every case?

Mr. TAFT. The large amounts are for foreign governments. Nineteen million dollars has been loaned to Brazil. in cash, since March. The commitments to Nicaragua and commitments to Brazil and, in fact, practically all of the large items, except the International Telephone & Telegraph loan, are commitments or loans to foreign governments.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield at that point, so that the statement may be accurate in the RECORD?

Mr. DANAHER. I yield.

Mr. WAGNER. Strictly speaking, the loan to Brazil was not made to the Brazilian Government. It was made to a bank, 50 percent of which is owned by the Brazilian Government and 50 percent of which is privately owned, and the entire loan was made to pay for products purchased in this country.

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, has the Senator concluded?

Mr. WAGNER. Yes.

Mr. DANAHER. Of course, drawing that neat distinction between loans to foreign governments and loans to agencies either partially or wholly owned by foreign governments is the basis upon which it is said there is no loan to a foreign government, as in the case of Mexico. In that instance Mr. Jones testified that the loan was for the purpose of purchase of locomotives for the Mexican National Railways. Of course, that was not a loan to Mexico in the sense used by the Senator from New York; it was a loan made to an organization in Mexico.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. DANAHER. Certainly.

Mr. WAGNER. The loan was for commodities purchased from American citizens, and every dollar of that loan has been paid.

Mr. DANAHER. I question the accuracy of that last statement. I think the Senator means it is not in default.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. DANAHER. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. Referring to the $25,000,000 credit given by the Export-Import Bank to cover products exported to China, that money was loaned to the Universal Trading Corporation, of New York.

Mr. DANAHER. Yes.

Mr. BARKLEY. It was not all taken. My recollection may be faulty, but I think about $17,000,000 was taken. The loaning of that money to the Universal Trading Corporation for the exportation of goods to China benefited a total of 30 or 40 corporations, the names of which are set out in the report of the Export-Import Bank. Without that loan, those corporations could not have been able to make the exports. Among this list of 30 or 40 corporations we find the names of the Chrysler Corporation, General Motors Corporation, United States Rubber Export Co., Goodyear Tire & Rubber Export Co., Paul E. Sammann & Co., International General Electric Co., Dodge & Seymour, Ltd., General Motors Overseas Operations, Iron City Tool Works. Two pages are filled with the names of the corporations which were enabled to do business and to sell materials to China because the Universal Trading Corporation was able to borrow money, all of which has now been repaid. It is not fair to hold that out as an example of bad business.

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, I must observe to the Senator from Kentucky that I made no reference whatever to the loan to the Universal Trading Corporation, nor did I make any reference to China. My point was simply to bring out, as Mr. Jones himself did, the available capital and the basis upon which that capital could be used.

I now yield to the Senator from Ohio.

Mr. TAFT. With regard to the statement that the loan has been paid back, the total shows there is now outstanding $8.680,000, and that there is committed but not yet advanced $15,840,000. So, far from being paid back, it has not even been loaned.

Mr. BARKLEY. The payments are current, and are being kept up as they fall due.

Mr. TAFT. Of course, I have no doubt: and to the extent that they finance export credits, I see no objection. That is part of the purposes of the Export-Import Bank. However, the general term was a 5-year loan, and that makes it a foreign-government loan.

Mr. WAGNER. I wish to make a correction with reference to the statement regarding the loan to the railway company, which I understand is controlled by the Mexican Government. With reference to the repayment of that loan, I understand that there were two loans made. One was for the sale of locomotives by the American Locomotive Sales Corporation, amounting to $602,000. That has been completely repaid. The other loan, made to the Mexican Railway Co., was for the purchase of equipment from the American Car & Foundry Co. Of that loan, which was in the amount of $225,000, $69,000 has been repaid and $156,000 is due, but the payments are current. In other words, it is repaid so far as the loan is due.

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, that coincides with what I stated in that particular. I thank the Senator from New York.

I may say, in conclusion, that the entire program just goes to illustrate the absurdity of the whole set-up, when we now are faced with the proposal to pay an export bounty of a cent and a half a pound on cotton. Curiously enough, we are going to finance the exportation of that cotton by loans from the Export-Import Bank, and we are going to pay some-body to take cotton to Japan, which is the chief user of American cotton at this time, for use in a war over there. What an anomaly!

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. President, I did not hear all of the remarks of the Senator from Connecticut, but I judge from what I did hear him say that he contends that the Export-Import Bank has been making liberal use of its credit for exporting cotton. The fact is that since the organization of the Export-Import Bank they have aided in the export of cotton only to the extent of 106,000 bales.

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BANKHEAD. I yield.

Mr. DANAHER. Is the Senator quite certain of that? Mr. BANKHEAD. We had before the Committee on Banking and Currency at least a detailed statement of the disbursements of the Export-Import Bank, and I had the figures compiled. I did not do it myself. The figures presented to me show that the amount used for aiding in the export of cotton was only 7 percent of the total amount disbursed by the Export-Import Bank.

Mr. DANAHER. I certainly thank the Senator from Alabama, and I hope that the Senator from Kentucky has heard every word he said.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, as to the business wisdom of lending money for the carrying on of export-import trade, I do not propose to speak. It may be wise and it may not be. Later perhaps we will come to a conclusion on it when we have had more experience. I have always had grave doubts about the ultimate success of the plan.

I wish to say a word about loans to governments. It will be recalled that when the message came in from the President it was proposed that a $500,000,000 authorization be made for the purpose of lending money to foreign governments. At that time some debate took place in regard to the matter on the floor of the Senate, and objection was raised to the proposal. I specifically and earnestly objected to loans to governments.

I do not think it is at all improper for me to make the statement I am about to make. While it refers to a private discussion, in a sense, it was a discussion by an officer having charge of this matter, not in any sense regarded as private so far as the conversation was concerned. He was giving me information with regard to the business which he was conducting and upon which I was seeking information to enable me to vote intelligently. I do not think Mr. Jones regarded it as private.

Mr. Jesse Jones came to the office and stated his position with reference to lending money to foreign governments, and in the conversation he made it clear to me that he was as much opposed to lending money to foreign governments as I was, and that if the matter were under his control he would confine it entirely to the lending of money as they had been lending it, for export and import business.

Upon that basis we discussed the question of reducing the $500,000,000 proposed to $100,000,000, and as to whether or not that would be satisfactory to those of us who had raised a serious question as to the $500,000,000 and as Government loans. The question was raised as to whether under $100,000,000 additional appropriation it would be practical to make loans to foreign governments, if the amount would be sufficient to enable this Government to make such loans. He was of the opinion that the appropriation could only be successfully utilized along the lines on which the loans had been made heretofore. He made it definitely clear that in his opinion no money should be loaned to governments or for governmental purposes, but for trade purposes only.

Mr. President, I am very much opposed to lending money to foreign governments, but I am quite clear that if it is left under the control of Mr. Jones to direct, the loans will not be made to foreign governments. If I thought that were not true, I certainly would feel that there had been a misunderstanding upon my part in regard to the matter.

When we come to lending money to governments, other questions enter about which Congress ought at all times to take particular notice at the time a loan is made. If a loan is to be made to a foreign government, there are many things which enter into the question which ought to be considered, aside from the mere question of putting out so much money. There may be involvements. If I am not very badly misled, within a very short time some facts will be presented to us which will show how unwise it is to lend money to foreign governments without a full knowledge on the part of the Congress and without full authority and an understanding of the terms upon which the loan is to be made.

I therefore rise to say that the policy of lending money to foreign governments, except through specific action, and that action made known to the Congress and the Congress permitted to act upon it, in my judgment is a dangerous policy. In fact, stating a general principle, we ought not to loan to governments at all.

It is claimed by some—and they may be better informed than I—that this money will be loaned to foreign governments, or that some of it will be so loaned. I myself do not find in the record evidence of that fact. But if there is such evidence, I should like to have it pointed out, because it will control my vote.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BORAH. I yield.

Mr. TAFT. The last loans that have been made, on June 9, 1939, were to the Banko de la Republica, Oriental de Uraguay. That is a bank the entire stock of which is owned by the Uraguayan Government. That, of course, is not technically a loan to a foreign government, but in effect it is, because the bank is merely an agency of the foreign government. The loan before that was on January 12, 1939, of $5,000,000 to the Portugese railways. I understand that the Portugese railways are 100 percent owned by the Portugese Government. Since Mr. Jones was here in February $19,200,000 have been loaned to the Bank of Brazil, which is 50 percent owned by the Brazilian Government. Therefore, unless Mr. Jones is making a distinction between agencies of foreign governments and foreign governments, I cannot understand what he is saying, because half of the outstanding loans of the Export-Import Bank today are loans of the character to which I have referred.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, I did not have before me the details of the loans to which the Senator refers, nor did Mr. Jones refer to the details of the loans.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BORAH. In a moment. I am permitted to say that my understanding was that loans to a government, as a government, for the purpose of performing governmental duties, in the discharge of governmental obligations, are distinctly contrary to Mr. Jones' theory of lending this money.

Mr. TAFT. It is entirely true that these loans are all made for the purchase of American materials, so far as I know, with a single exception, that exception being 25 percent of the loan to Haiti. I think the loan is made to a corporation, which takes the notes of the Haitian Government, and the Export-Import Bank have acquired those notes without recourse. So in that case about 25 percent is being spentnot for the purchase of American goods. In general, it is correct that all this money is being spent for exports from this country.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BORAH. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. I was going to say that even the loan with reference to the Portuguese Railways was for the purpose of enabling them to purchase certain railway equipment in the United States.

Let us take our dealings with Russia. Of course, it may be that there are some Americans who think we should not sell anything to Russia or have any dealings with Russia, but still we do have such dealings. They have a corporation, the Amtorg Co., which is a trading corporation in this country, through which we have been able to sell. That corporation is controlled by the Russian Government, I think. Its policy certainly is. We have sold vast amounts of machinery, we have sold cotton, we have sold many things, and through that corporation we have been able to export them. There has not been a single instance in 20 years when they have defaulted on any payment.

Mr. BORAH. The Russian Government is about the only European Government which seems to be paying its debts.

Mr. BARKLEY. There are one or two little exceptions, like Finland.

Mr. BORAH. Yes; Finland.

Mr. BARKLEY. It is the outstanding European Government that has kept up its record of paying its debts. Such a loan might be said to be an indirect loan to the Russian Government. It is not. It is the type of loan which over 20 years has turned out to be sound. If we are to be denied the opportunity of making that kind of loan, of course we are going to cripple our trade.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, will the Senator from Idaho yield?

Mr. BORAH. I yield.

Mr. CONNALLY. I had a question in mind which has been already somewhat developed. Is it not true that the primary purpose of the whole organization of the Export-Import Bank is to facilitate exports and imports? The fact that, incidental to that, a foreign government might have an interest in some institution, is beside the point, because we are not making a governmental loan at all in the strict sense of that term. We are making a loan to aid exports or to facilitate imports, and the fact that the Government. in the case of these corporations mentioned by the Senator from Ohio [Mr. TAFT], had an incidental financial interest, does not bring the loans within the category of the loans to which the Senator from Idaho is objecting.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, I have no doubt that Mr. Jones had in mind that kind of a loan. I do not think Mr. Jones would have stated to me that he was loaning for governmental purposes, on behalf of the Government, if he had not so understood it. Whether it is to be confined to that course of conduct is a very important question. But I was specific and asked him the question whether $100,000,000 would permit the carrying on of the course of conduct which had been carried on, or would it also permit the loaning to governments, because I was desirous only of limiting the loans to loans to governments. That was as far as I cared to go at that time, whatever might be my judgment in the future as to loaning for business purposes.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BORAH. I yield.

Mr. TAFT. One thing that shows the character of these Government loans was that the Finance Minister of Brazil came here and made a Brazilian Government loan. It was the dictator of Nicaragua who came here and made a Nicaraguan Government loan. It was the head of the Paraguayan Government who came here and made a loan for the Paraguayan Government. Now, the theory that these are not Government loans is contrary to the real facts of the case. The truth of the situation is that these governments have come in here and asked for money; and every dictator in South America is planning to come here to the United States to pick up the millions that are lying around loose in Washington.

Mr. BORAH. There is no doubt about that. They are all waiting for loans, if we are to lend money to governments and for governmental purposes. The Senator is entirely correct about that. It is an unsound policy, an unwise policy, and we ought not to pursue it. But when they struck out the $400,000,000 it was my opinion that they had limited it to such figures as to necessitate the bank to confine itself to loans which were not Government loans. That, together with the language of the bill and the views of the administrator, seems to me to protect the thing I

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, I do not want unduly to delay a vote on this question. There are just one or two matters which were developed before the committee to which I should like to refer. The Export-Import Bank was not created to make loans to foreign governments for governmental purpose. The purpose of the Export-Import Bank was to help our citizens and our manufacturers and our domestic producers to export their commodities, to facilitate the sale of their commodities in other countries, and to aid them in financing those transactions. So far as the transactions of the Export-Import Bank are concerned up to date that purpose has been carefully adhered to, because except the 25 percent referred to by the Senator from Ohio in regard to the Haitian loan, every loan represents a sale of our products to nationals of a foreign country. I think, in this connection, it should be pointed out that we are only doing in an extremely modest way what other countries are doing on a very much larger scale.

Mr. President, I ask for the special attention of the senior Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. Thomas]. The other day he proposed to offer an amendment, and in connection therewith he introduced an article appearing in the New York Times in which it was stated that England had proposed to aid its producers and manufacturers to the extent,

I think, of-

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Six hundred and nine million dollars.

Mr. WAGNER. Six hundred and nine million dollarsto aid English producers and manufacturers in financing their exports to other countries.

I read the other day that England had given a loan to Poland which Poland was going to use to stimulate its exports, that is, to help finance its exporters' sales in other countries. Of course, the loans of the Export-Import Bank are made for sales primarily to the South American countries, and there is quite a contest going on to win the markets of South America. England, Germany, and other European nations have adopted the barter policy.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WAGNER. I yield.

Mr. CONNALLY. In connection with the Senator's statement that it is intended primarily for South America, I may suggest that the cotton-producing States are interested in the Export-Import Bank increase of capital inasmuch as exporters of cotton expect to do considerable exporting business, and they need these credits to carry on the export business. For instance, the foreign cotton buyer can secure temporary credit and not be obliged to pay cash for the cotton, but so soon as he sells it he meets his bill. So the cotton trade is greatly interested in the proposed increase in the capital of the Export-Import Bank. The sales to which I have referred relate more particularly to Europe than to South America.

Mr. WAGNER. Yes; that is true. I did not intend to imply that loans are made only for exports to South America, but many of the loans have been made with respect to sales to countries to the south of us.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. WAGNER. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. To corroborate what the Senator from Texas has stated——

Mr. CONNALLY. I thank the Senator from Kentucky.

Mr. BARKLEY. I am always glad to corroborate what the Senator says and I am even more glad to have him corroborate what I say. My attention has been called to the fact that negotiations have been undertaken looking to the possibility of the sale of 1,000,000 bales of cotton in Europe that would have to be financed through the Export-Import Bank. Certainly to take off the market of the United States a million bales of cotton would be a great boon to the cotton producers of the United States.

Mr. TAFT. I mentioned that in my main talk. The United States Government has a considerable amount invested in cotton, and the Commodity Credit Corporation has entire authority to sell that cotton abroad and take the goods of foreigners in payment for the cotton. I do not think the Government needs the Export-Import Bank for that purpose in any respect whatever.

Mr. CONNALLY. While I am sure the Senator from Ohio is an outstanding authority on cotton, the cotton exporters do not agree with him.

Mr. BARKLEY and Mr. TAFT rose.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator yield, and, if so, to whom?

Mr. WAGNER. While Senators have not been willing to yield to me, I shall yield; first to the Senator from Kentucky.

Mr. BARKLEY. In that connection, let me say that the Commodity Credit Corporation can sell cotton that it is now holding, on which the Government has a lien, only with the consent of the owner, and it cannot sell it for less than the loan, with the interest and storage upon it, whereas there might be a great deal of free cotton in this country which may be sold through the Export-Import Bank.

Mr. CONNALLY. Of course. The new cotton crop is moving in my State. The exporters have personally taken the matter up with me and urged the increase in the capital of the Export-Import Bank in order to facilitate their exports of cotton, of the new free crop. It is to the interest of those who raise cotton to keep the new cotton out of the loan and sell it if they can.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WAGNER. I yield.

Mr. BORAH. I should like to ask the Senator from New York and the Senator from Kentucky a question in connection with this matter. Was it not understood at the time the $500,000,000 was changed to $100,000,000 that there were to be no loans to governments for governmental purposes?

Mr. WAGNER. Exactly, and I am one of those who was opposed to the $500,000,000 extension of authorization to the Export-Import Bank. There have not been any loans made to foreign governments for governmental purposes. The discussion has proceeded on a theory which I think has confused the issue. One would think that the Export-Import Bank was created simply as a bank to finance foreign governments in their governmental transactions. Nothing of the kind was contemplated. It is a very modest contribution toward aiding our manufacturers and producers to sell their commodities abroad, and that is all.

Mr. BORAH. I think we got over the line in China pretty badly. But the question is whether or not under this new bill it was to be understood that there were to be no loans to governments henceforth for governmental purposes, to be used by governments for governmental purposes.

Mr. WAGNER. That is certainly the purpose of those who are advocating this proposed legislation, if I may say so.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. WAGNER. I yield.

Mr. LUCAS. Is it not a fact that Jesse Jones in testifying before the Committee on Banking and Currency upon that very question stated that, in the event a loan to a foreign government was contemplated, he thought it would be necessary to bring the question before the Congress and obtain the consent of Congress before the loan was consummated?

Mr. WAGNER. Yes; certainly. He asserted, as I recall, that he had no authority to make any such loan, and, of course, he would not do so in any event without a previous authorization from the Congress of the United States. The Senator is absolutely correct about that.

I asked Mr. Jones when he was before our committee whether any of the sales which were financed in part by the Export-Import Bank could have been made in other countries without such aid and he said emphatically "No." Because of the chaotic condition in other countries the banks themselves are not prepared to take the risk alone, although they do share in some of these risks.

Mr. BARKLEY. I wanted to suggest to the Senator from New York, in his time, as I have no time of my own, and to the Senator from Idaho, that in order to clear up this matter so there may be no misunderstanding with respect to the object of these loans, I am prepared to offer an amendment of this nature.

Provided, That no loan shall be made hereunder for any purpose other than increasing exports from the United States.

Mr. CONNALLY. The Senator should not leave out imports.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WAGNER. I yield.

Mr. TAFT. It does not seem to me that the amendment would change the situation.

Mr. WAGNER. Will the Senator discuss that amendment a little later on?

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, it would be impossible to write anything that would satisfy the Senator from Ohio.

Mr. WAGNER. There has been much discussion about loans to foreign governments. Strictly speaking, loans have not been made to foreign governments, for the Export-Import Bank and the applicant, the exporter, conduct the transactions through the existing bank in the foreign country. If sales are to be made, the financial transactions must be handled through the foreign bank. In both the instances of Poland and Brazil, only 50 percent of the stock of the bank in either of those countries is controlled by the government. The other 50 percent is controlled by private investors.

So, strictly speaking, even in those instances about which so much has been said today, the loans are not made to the foreign government. The government may have a 50-percent interest in the bank, and may pledge its credit to that extent for the repayment of the loan, but it enters the picture only because the bank offers the only financial institution available for carrying out the financial transactions connected with the sales. I wish to emphasize that in the case of every loan made payments are absolutely current. The Senator from Kentucky read from the Record that up to date a profit has been made. No loan has been made with respect to which the Export-Import Bank directors have any doubt as to repayment. Every loan made has either been repaid or is current.

A few minutes ago when I asked the Senator from Maryland [Mr. Tydings] to yield to me he declined to yield, but later weakened. The Senator said that in every instance the Export-Import Bank pledged its credit for the entire loan. As a matter of fact, there are any number of cases in which, when the firm is strong enough financially to do so, it participates in the loan. In other words, if the sale is for $1,000,000 worth of products to a particular customer, the concern itself will carry 50 percent of the credit and the bank will carry the other 50 percent. In about 50 percent of the loans made by the Export-Import Bank the loans are made with recourse to the exporter. So the bank has recourse both to the purchaser in the foreign country and to the applicant or the exporter in this country.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. La Follette in the chair).

Does the Senator from New York yield to the Senator from Maryland?

Mr. WAGNER. I yield.

Mr. TYDINGS. I was dealing with only that part of the loan which the Export-Import Bank handled, whether it was 10 percent, 50 percent, or 100 percent. To that extent, if the endorsers do not make the paper good, the bank's assets are liable for the repayment of the loan.

Mr. WAGNER. In many instances the loans are held with recourse to the applicant for the loan.

Mr. TYDINGS. I say, if the endorser does not make the loan good, if he does not repay the bank for the money advanced, and the bank cannot collect it, the bank stands a loss.

Mr. WAGNER. The Senator means if there is also a default by the purchaser in the foreign country.

Mr. TYDINGS. Yes.

Mr. WAGNER. Of course; but there is recourse to both. Experience has shown that there has been no loss, and that all payments are current.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time of the Senator from New York on the amendment has expired.

The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Ohio [Mr. TAFT].

Mr. JOHNSON of California. Mr. President, when I was a young man I occasionally visited certain individuals in the country of whom I was very fond. At certain times of the day the cook would come out from the cook house and beat a great gong, the sound of which would carry far, and yell at the top of his voice, "Come and get it!"

We have done just that thing in the matter of South American loans in the present instance. We have said to South America "Come and get it"; and every broken-down dictator in that territory is on the way to Washington in the hope that he may fill his coffers with good American dollars. Oh, it may be pretended that we do not lend the money to him. However, in one way or another he gets it; and when he gets it he keeps it; and we have seen the last of that sum of money. We have instances before us of loans which have been made to various countries to the south of us, and they are all of that kind. I will not except a single one of them. Brazil hopes to have more battleships built in our yards. It will be said that thereby employment would be given to many persons; but we would pay the bill. Ultimately all the people would be taxed for all these loans, because none of them would be repaid, and nobody expects that they would be repaid.

I have before me a report of the Commission which exists today for the purpose of dealing with South American loans. That report shows loans of approximately one and threequarter billion dollars due to our people. Our people paid the sums that were necessary in the days when those loans were made. They paid them out of their hard-earned cash. Today we are initiating the same thing in a round-about

Mr. President, I am not indicting Jesse Jones in the slightest degree, and I yield to no man in my regard for him. I recognize that if it were possible he would so administer the law as to comply with the technical letter as well as with the spirit of the law, and he would not make loans to foreign governments. However, the fact is that the loans which have thus far been made are loans to governments; a loan was made to a bank in Brazil, half of which is owned by the Government itself; all of that which was loaned in Nicaragua was loaned to the Government of Nicaragua, because that Government consists of one man alone. All that was loaned to Paraguay or Uruguay-I have forgotten which—was given to the one who is in charge of everything

I believe a loan is contemplated to Bolivia, where a distinguished gentleman named German Busch is at present administering every law upon the statute books of that country. He, in accordance with the time-honored custom of the governments of that particular region, declared in one fell swoop that no parliament should exist in the future. Then, not to be outdone, he decreed that there should be no political parties in the state. Then, to be on an equality, as he thought, with those who govern abroad, he said that he would permit no question of human rights to be determined otherwise than by himself.

Doubtless that government will be on its knees asking us for some particular loan, and perhaps will be accorded it. But whether accorded it or not, this method of lending the money of the people of the United States helter-skelter and pell-mell is one against which I protest, and protest as strongly as a man can protest.

Just think of it. Today we have so little thought of the Government of this country that $100,000,000 or $125,000,000 does not appeal to us. We think it is a matter upon which we should not waste a moment's time, and that the question should be determined forthwith, without regard to its merits. Dealing with a subject such as that, we let it go by; but some time in the future there comes a day of reckoning, when those who work for a living or those who have a little must pay every dollar that we fritter away in this mad fashion. We ought not to do it; and it ought not to be done at all by a free body like this, at this or at any other time.

I have no doubt Mr. Jones will do what is right in regard to these loans. But Mr. Jones is not the controlling spirit of our Government. Mr. Jones is not the one who determines our foreign policies. We have heard enough misrepresentation about our foreign policies in the past month. Mr. Jones is not the one who decides what ultimately shall be done; and when the decision is made Mr. Jones will stand aside and do as the particular controlling voice in the Government shall determine.

It is up to the Senate. I do not care a rap. I shall vote against the bill, so I do not care whether the Senate gives $25,000,000 or $100,000,000 to Mr. Jones to play with as he sees fit. I do not care, except so far as the morals of the situation are concerned, and so far as justice to the American people is concerned. The Senate may do as it wishes with this amount. It may do as it desires in putting further taxes upon the American people. It is true the sum involved is small; but when taken in the aggregate with all the sums presented, it is $1,900,000,000. It is up to the Senate. I shall be forced to acquiesce in what the Senate does, but I shall vote against the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment offered by the Senator from Ohio [Mr. TAFT].

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I move as a substitute for the amendment offered by the Senator from Ohio, to strike out "$125,000,000" and to insert in lieu thereof "$175,000,000". with a proviso at the end of the section.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment offered by the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BARKLEY] in the nature of a substitute for the amendment offered by the Senator from Ohio [Mr. TAFT] will be stated for the information of the Senate.

The Legislative Clerk. On page 18, line 15, it is proposed to strike out "$125,000,000" and insert "$175,000,000: Provided, That no loan shall be made under this section for any purpose other than facilitating trade by way of increasing exports from the United States to foreign markets: And provided further, That all funds made available under this section shall be expended in the United States."

Mr. GEORGE rose.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment in the nature of a substitute offered by the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BARKLEY] to the amendment of the Senator from Ohio [Mr. TAFT].

The Senator from Georgia is recognized.

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, I do not wish to be heard since the Senator from Kentucky has offered this amendment, but I had risen to say that it ought to be entirely clear that our cloth is being cut to fit a foreign pattern; that we are not making our foreign policies; that we are in this bill, without this amendment certainly, permitting corporations that have been created by the Congress to shape our foreign policy to meet the necessities or the wishes of other countries.

I realize, Mr. President, that I am making a very grave statement, but the truthfulness of the statement I am making will be borne out and verified by time. We have witnessed a complete change of policy by this Government on the question of tariffs. There were those of us who stood for a liberal trade policy with all the world, not with imaginary friends or imaginary foes. We stood for a policy that would break down quotas, embargoes, restrictions, and prohibitive tariffs. But all that has changed. The department of the Government that in December 1938 was vigorously opposed to subsidies upon exports of our raw materials is now vocal and pleading for subsidies upon such materials.

Why? Everybody knows that $100,000,000 is adequate as a capital for the Export-Import Bank to encourage any legitimate efforts to expand legitimate foreign trade. We have changed the whole program; we have changed the whole policy. Are we changing it for America? If so, all good and well; but let us stand up here and say so. Are we changing it to suit the necessities of somebody else, of some other nation? If so, let us say so. I have the profoundest respect for any man who says that he wants to change our policies, that he wants to go back on everything for which we have stood for the sake of aiding a particular nation, A or B, because he is against C and D; but let him stand up and say so.

What is the necessity for more than $100,000,000 or $125,-000,000 for the Export-Import Bank? Is there any necessity for an increase so far as we are concerned? Would it promote foreign trade and commerce? Can there be any promotion of foreign trade and commerce in the vacillating, changing, day-by-day program? Can there be any promotion of foreign commerce if the State Department today is against subsidies and is against barters and is for free and liberal programs of international commerce and trade, and tomorrow is in favor of barters and of subsidies and an illiberal program?

Mr. President, I have no sympathy whatever with any totalitarian state on the face of the earth, but I have an attachment and love for my country, and I raise the question now, Are we trying to shape our foreign policies to fit the needs and necessities and security of the American people or are we trying to serve the ends of others as we fancy them as being our ends and our interests? No nation ever made a greater mistake; no nation could make a more fatal blunder. Our duty and our responsibility are to our own people. We can never serve it unless we have an eye single to our own interests. I want foreign trade, I want foreign commerce, but I want it on a basis that will last. I do not want it on a basis of favoritism; I do not want it on a basis of subsidy.

Time after time Mr. Jones himself has committed himself to the proposition that $125,000,000 was adequate; but now we must make additional loans; we must have additional authority. This amendment is relatively insignificant, but what is profoundly significant is whether we are making our foreign policy or whether we are cutting the cloth to suit the pattern of some other nation.

I raise this question, and I raise it deliberately. Mark my words, Mr. President, in a comparatively short time it will appear that we are not making our foreign policy according to the demands, the necessities, and wishes and the interest of America, but we are looking elsewhere. I never made a more serious declaration in the Senate, and perhaps I never shall, but to me it is all too clear that what I am now saying is the truth. If we want to promote exports, all right; but why abandon our whole tariff policy? Why abandon our whole program under the reciprocal-tariff agreements if they were Why destroy the very objective of the whole pro-Whom do we want to favor? Whom do we imagine are our friends or whom do we fancy are our foes? It seems to me that President Washington was right when he said that a nation could be enslaved by an undue attachment to a foreign power as well as by undue animosity toward a foreign

Mr. President, gratitude is all too rare among men who daily pass each other upon terms of equality on the streets of the village or the city. In international matters it were better to make our own policy. This is not by any means a disconnected event. We changed our policies in the face of declarations that we were opposed to barters, but we have become a bartering nation. In face of a solemn declaration that we were opposed to subsidies we have become a subsidizing nation. In the face of our own statutes providing that we were against dumping we have become a dumping nation. That will not preserve our foreign trade, Mr. President. I want our actions to be on a basis that will enable us to hold foreign trade and foreign commerce on the merits of our products and on the policies that we adopt for the protection of our own people.

Mr. President, regardless of what may be said to the contrary, I know that there is no possible reason for more than $125,000,000 for the Export-Import Bank if it is the intention to use it merely to promote commerce between this country and foreign nations. If we want to make foreign loans, let us say so, and let each loan stand on its own merits.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. GEORGE. I yield.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. Jones testified before the committee that if he is to continue aiding our exporters to sell their products abroad, he would have to secure an increase because all of the money now authorized has been committed. He suggested $100,000,000. The moneys which he is authorized to use for loans have been committed. So if it is desired to continue the activity of helping to secure foreign markets, which the Senator favors, Mr. Jones would have to have an additional sum of money.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, may I inquire whether this is a private conversation or is it intended for the ears of Senators? I should be very happy if the distinguished Senator from New York would utter his words loud enough so that some of us who are intensely interested in the subject may hear them.

Mr. WAGNER. I beg the Senator's pardon; I thought I had spoken loud enough.

Mr. GEORGE. May I answer? Mr. WAGNER. Yes.

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, I do not understand that all of the funds appropriated for the capital of the Export-Import Bank have been used. Some $53,000,000 have been used. The fund is a revolving fund.

I am as strongly in favor of increasing our exports as is anyone else. I am willing to increase them by any legitimate means. I want to increase them, Mr. President; but I have a right to ask, and I will ask, why there is to be a change in our entire domestic program, if we are looking to our own country.

I have seen the program changed. I cannot understand it. I have only a limited knowledge and a limited capacity to understand, but I have seen our entire tariff program changed. I have seen the entire program changed so far as our exports and imports are concerned. I have seen the whole philosophy of it changed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time of the Senator from Georgia on the substitute amendment has expired.

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, I leave the question now. I had intended to raise it and have done so.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment in the nature of a substitute offered by the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BARKLEY] to the amendment of the Senator from Ohio [Mr. TAFT].

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, I wish to speak briefly on the substitute amendment submitted by the able majority leader. He is obviously making a good-faith effort to try to assure the expenditure of these funds upon American-made commodities. But that does not at all meet the issue that has been raised. Suppose every penny of the loan of May 17, 1939, to the Banco Nationale de Nicaragua-which is entirely and exclusively a governmental instrumentality-is spent for American products; what of it as respects the fundamental issue that is raised here? We must look to the maker of the note for our money.

The maker of the note is a foreign government or its instrumentality; and so long as the maker of the note is a foreign government or its instrumentality, it makes no difference whatever how we protect the expenditure to make sure that every nickle of it is spent in the United States. We have not avoided the fundamental challenge that we must not go into the business of making loans to foreign governments and foreign instrumentalities, because that way lies the root of trouble and difficulty; that way lies the root of default and repudiation; that way lies the experience we have had with loans to foreign governments and to their instrumentalities. Five billion dollars was loaned abroad in the 1920's-for what purpose? For the purpose of buying American commodities. Every penny of it might have been committed by the amendment submitted by the able Senator from Kentucky; every penny of it might have been committed by law to expenditure in the United States. What of it? That does not alter the fact that all the $5,000,000,000 is in substantial default. That does not alter the fact that our experience with loans to foreign governments and foreign instrumentalities is utterly bad.

Mr. President, I submit that the amendment in the nature of a substitute offered by the Senator from Kentucky, despite his earnest effort to meet a portion of the criticism that is leveled at this Export-Import Bank increase, does not remotely touch the point. The point is, as Mr. Jones said-and he should know better than any other man in Washington-that within the last 4 months $125,000,000, which is the sum provided by the amendment submitted by the Senator from Ohio, was all that he could use wisely and to advantage in the direct encouragement of export trade. The only thing that has happened in between to change the policy and purpose of our external loans is the letter of the President of the United States in which he said that he wanted to make loans to foreign governments. It is loans to foreign governments and to the instrumentalities of foreign governments that have chiefly been made since that letter was written.

Mr. President, I submit that the case stands precisely as it did before the Senator from Kentucky offered his proposed substitute. The substitute should be rejected, and the amendment of the Senator from Ohio should be adopted.

Mr. BARKLEY. I dislike very much to have to keep occupying the floor, but I cannot let the statements of the Senator from Michigan go without reply. I thank him for his concession that I am making an obvious effort.

Mr. VANDENBERG. That is an obvious concession.

Mr. BARKLEY. But no matter how earnest or honest my effort, obviously I cannot satisfy the Senator from Michigan. Mr. VANDENBERG. Not when it comes to making foreign loans.

Mr. BARKLEY. Let us concede that in writing the letter to the Senator from South Carolina the President had in his mind the making of foreign loans for the purpose of facilitating American trade. There is nothing in the bill that is based upon the President's letter, insofar as that part of it was concerned. There is nothing in the proposal which changes a particle the law now in existence with respect to the Export-Import Bank. In order to satisfy those who are suspicious or fearful that some loan might be made for some other purpose except to facilitate American trade, I have offered this proviso, that no loan shall be made under this section except for the purpose of facilitating American trade by way of increasing American exports, and that every dime of the money shall be expended in the United States. Under that proviso even the little 20 percent the Republic of Haiti would use in order to employ her own labor and not have to import it from the United States would be covered. That was a concession brought about by the peculiar relationships which have existed between the United States and Haiti, with which we are all familiar.

Under the substitute not a dime of this money can be advanced for any other purpose except to promote American trade. There is not a nickel of it that can be advanced which foreign governments could employ in their own countries to expand factories or do anything else with except buy American products. That is all, and that is all we are interested in.

I do not know whether the $175,000,000 which I have provided, which represents a $25,000,000 reduction, will be sufficient or not; but if it is not, I suppose we can get along until Congress meets again. But from the 1st of last April to the 1st day of August they have used up the $100,000,000 we gave them in March; that is, the amount has been committed; it has not all been used. There is now outstanding about $55,000,000 in loans, and the rest of it has been committed. If the rest of it has been committed, the Export-Import Bank can make no further loans and can provide for the facilitation of no further American exports until it is determined whether those commitments will actually be used or the entire amount, or a considerable portion of it, or enough of it, is repaid to enable the Export-Import Bank to engage in further export or import transactions. I think this is a fair effort to meet the situation, to allay any fears on the part of anyone, and I hope the substitute will be agreed to.

Reference has been made to the Johnson Act. Of course, that act applies to all foreign governments and the agencies of such governments which are in default to the United States Government. It does not apply to countries which are in default simply to private citizens of the United States. It applies to those governments which are in default to the Government of the United States as such, to which the United States has made loans; and if there is any such South American or Central American country, it would apply just as effectively as if it were a European country. I urge the adoption of the substitute.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, I want to understand the parliamentary situation. The Senator from Ohio, as I understand, has offered an amendment to cut the amount of $200,000,000 down to $125,000,000. That is all his amendment does. It seems we are talking about a substitute. I desire to know whether the amendment offered by the Senator from Kentucky can be in any way a substitute for the amendment of the Senator from Ohio?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair holds that the amendment is in the nature of a substitute, since it changes the amount of the appropriation, and adds a proviso.

Mr. NORRIS. I should like to have the substitute read.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment in the nature of a substitute will be reported again for the information of the Senate.

The Legislative Clerk. Mr. Barkley proposes an amendment in the nature of a substitute for the amendment offered by Mr. Taft, on page 1, line 2, of the amendment offered by Mr. Taft to strike out the numerals "$125,000,000" and insert "$175,000,000: Provided, That no loans shall be made under this section for any purpose other than facilitating trade by way of increasing exports from the United States to foreign markets: Provided further, That all funds made available under this section shall be expended in the United States."

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, I am glad to note from the substitute amendment of the Senator from Kentucky that the figure $200,000,000 at least is not a sacrosanct figure. He is willing to concede from that figure.

The significance of the $125,000,000 is that that is the figure Mr. Jones said was all that he would ever need in order to carry on the kind of activities the Export-Import Bank had been carrying on prior to that time.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. TAFT. For a moment.

Mr. BARKLEY. The Senator knows that Mr. Jones said that in March, and only a week or 10 days ago before our committee he urged the increase in the capital to the amount carried in the bill. So that Mr. Jones, who has had the experience of administering the law, in view of his success up to now, believes that the additional amount is necessary.

Mr. TAFT. Because since that time the Export-Import Bank has engaged in a policy of making loans to foreign governments. The only reason why he has used up this money is that he has done that. He has loaned $19,200,000 to the Bank of Brazil. It was done by agreement with the Bank of Brazil, a very considerable agreement, by the way, which was not presented to the Senate to ratify, but involved other matters beside the $19,000,000. He has since that time made a commitment of two and a half million to Nicaragua, two and a half million to Paraguay, five million to the Portuguese railways, four million to Uraguay. As long as he confined himself to the regular business, $125,000,000 was plenty, and he said so, but now they have branched out into loans which, it cannot be questioned, are foreign government loans.

Mr. BARKLEY. The loans so far as the Portuguese railways are concerned were made to the following American companies: American Locomotive Sales, International General Electric, E. G. Budd Manufacturing Co., Baldwin Locomotive Works.

Mr. TAFT. Those are the applicants.

Mr. BARKLEY. They are the people who got the money. Mr. TAFT. What the Government gets finally is a note of the Portuguese railways, which runs for 5 years, and is payable in semiannual installments.

Mr. BARKLEY. It gets the obligation of these American companies, which is backed up by those notes, but the loan is made to the American companies, with their obligation.

Mr. TAFT. I did not ask in every case whether the notes were taken without recourse or not. In many cases I know they were taken without recourse. Frankly, I do not know about that in the particular case to which the Senator has referred.

If we adopt the amendment after this debate, it amounts to saying, "We approve of the policy of lending money to foreign governments and foreign instrumentalities, providing they use the money to buy goods in the United States." That is the condition we put on the war loans, that is the condition, practically, we included in many cases, at least, on the loans made after the war. That is not the debate, that is not a concession in argument made in the debate before the Senate. I think it is perfectly proper to lend the money to encourage sales to foreign governments; I am quite willing to think that even without any provision of this kind Mr. Jones would never make another loan like the loan to Haiti, which was conditioned on the money coming 100 percent back to the United States. The very point of the argument is that we want to finance loans for the export of products, but not to finance any that are on an unsound basis, a basis which will not contribute to friendship, which will rather hurt our future international standing than help it, which will build up an export-import business which will collapse as soon as it becomes apparent, as it has always become apparent in the past, that the foreign governments do not pay their loans because they do not have to, and we do not make them. At that time we will find a collapse in these industries, which will have an adverse effect again on employment in this country.

So that it seems to me no concession is really made by the substitute, and I would request that the substitute be voted down, and the amendment itself be adopted.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, in my own time I should like to ask the Senator a question.

Mr. TAFT. Certainly.

Mr. KING. Does not the Senator believe that if we embark upon a program of lending to governments, we will of necessity have repercussions which will be unfavorable? If we lend to government A, government B will immediately assert that we are favoring government A, and it will perhaps arouse antagonism against America and American producers. Does not the Senator believe that if we are to embark upon the policy of lending to governments. Congress itself should be called upon to speak with respect to the government or governments which shall become obligated to us, and we become their beneficiaries?

Mr. TAFT. Yes. I think any loan to a government should be made by treaty, unless there is some great emergency, or we are in the midst of a great war.

Mr. KING. Of course, if we were in the midst of war. and one of our associates in the war, as in the time of the World War, wanted a loan, we would be perfectly justified. if it contributed to the ultimate success of the venture, in making very large loans, as we did during the World War, to aid in the cause. But I am opposed to the lending of money to any country except under such circumstances as those indicated, as in the case of war, where our associates might appeal for credit, and I might be in favor of extending credit. But I would be very much opposed to authorizing Mr. Jones-an able man, of course-to lend to any government he pleases.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, I really desire to ask the Senator from Kentucky, in my time, to give me a bit of information, though probably I should know the answer. The first matter is, I am interested in the mechanics of the financial operations of the Export-Import Bank. I find in the list of credit extensions that the applicant carries 331/3 or 50 percent of the loan. Take the American Locomotive Co., or the Fairbanks-Morse Co. Does the Export-Import Bank make a direct loan to these corporations of a certain amount of money, to be expended by them in their export business and in the preparation of materials for manufacture or for export?

Mr. BARKLEY. I probably can answer that by reading from the circular giving the general policy of the Export-Import Bank, which was issued in June of last year:

The bank is interested primarily in assisting nationals of this country in the development of sound foreign trade, and not in propositions involving the outright purchase of foreign securities or blocking balances having no relation to actual current commercial transactions.

(1) In cases where American exporters desire to bid on foreign business the bank will study such proposals with a view to making commitments in advance of the submission of such bid.

It says further on:

Any exporter or importer may make application for credit by writing directly to Export-Import Bank of Washington, Washington, D. C., or through a commercial bank.

The loans to which the Senator refers are made directly to the domestic corporation.

Mr. ADAMS. Is it a loan upon which the domestic corporation has a liability to the Export-Import Bank? For instance, I see the Fairbanks-Morse Co. listed. Does the Export-Import Bank lend them a certain sum which that company owes to the Export-Import Bank regardless of the outcome of the foreign venture?

Mr. BARKLEY. The Export-Import Bank really does a general banking business, as a matter of fact. Sometimes the local domestic corporation assumes 25, sometimes 50, sometimes 100 percent of the entire loan. In some cases I think the Export-Import Bank has permitted the domestic corporation to assume a portion of the loan, and to rely upon the security they take for the repayment of the loan.

Mr. ADAMS. But, assuming that the foreign purchaser does not pay an obligation, can the Export-Import Bank collect from the American exporter?

Mr. BARKLEY. Not in every case, because in some cases, where it extends credit, say, up to 50 or 75 percent to the American corporation, it may rely upon the assets or the security taken by the domestic corporation from the foreign corporation, which may be put up as a part of the security, and to that extent the domestic corporation may be released beyond the actual percentage of its direct obligation.

Mr. ADAMS. Then do I understand that the Export-Import Bank guarantees to the exporter one-third or one-half of all the collections?

Mr. BARKLEY. I suppose one might put that interpretation on it to the extent that it does not obligate the domestic corporation to pay the entire amount out of whatever assets it has.

Mr. ADAMS. I notice in the list great corporations, such as General Motors, Firestone Tire & Rubber Co., the Ford Co.-corporations which are amply able to finance themselves. I am merely trying to understand clearly the mechanics of the thing.

Mr. BARKLEY. As in the case of any bank which discounts paper, some of it is without recourse; and, of course, in such a case the Senator is familiar with what that amounts to in the way of a guaranty, or a transfer, or assignment, or endorsement. In some cases it may operate to release the American company of part of its obligation or the entire amount.

Mr. ADAMS. As I recollect, Mr. Jones said that the R. F. C. has an available lending capacity at this time of roughly $1,400,000,000.

Mr. BARKLEY. No; not at all. The Senator is confusing the general authority of the R. F. C. to make loans with the Export-Import Bank.

Mr. ADAMS. No; I am not confusing it. The R. F. C. has an aggregate unused lending capacity of $1,350,000,000.

Mr. BARKLEY. Yes; for all purposes,
Mr. ADAMS. For all purposes. Now my question is, If this authority of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation is not a power, for instance, to make a loan to Fairbanks, Morse & Co. to enable them to conduct export business?

Mr. BARKLEY. I presume, so far as agricultural commodities are concerned, the R. F. C. might make loans under a previous statute, but it did not have the authority to do it in the way in which it was desirable to do it. Otherwise, the Export-Import Bank would not have been necessary. It was found that it would be more businesslike to create this bank to do business as an ordinary bank in carrying out the purposes of facilitating foreign trade.

Mr. ADAMS. Let us say, for instance, that the capital or loaning capacity of the Export-Import Bank was fixed at $175,000,000 or $125,000,000, or $100,000,000, and an emergency arose, and that amount was not quite adequate for the immediate problem, the purpose of my inquiry was to find out whether or not the R. F. C. was in a position to step in and meet the emergency.

Mr. BARKLEY. It might in isolated cases, but it could not in a general way to the same degree as is authorized under the Export-Import Bank.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. ADAMS. Certainly.

Mr. VANDENBERG. I should like to go back to the Senator's original question, because I think it is important. I do not see how there can be any doubt about the mechanics. The Senator referred to the Portuguese loan of $5,000,000. Let us see what happens on the face of the record. The applicant is the American Locomotive Sales Corporation, of New York, the International General Electric Co., of New York, the E. G. Budd Manufacturing Co., of Philadelphia, and the Baldwin Locomotive Works, of Philadelphia. Without any doubt, these four American corporations are going to get the benefit of this loan, and that is the point covered by the pending substitute. But this equipment is to be furnished to the Portuguese Railways, which is exclusively an instrumentality to the Government of Portugal, and the applicants, being these four American corporations, carry 25 percent of the loan. Who possibly could carry the other 75 percent in final responsibility except the Portuguese Railways, which in turn is the Portuguese Government? So it is not a final 75-percent reliance upon the Portuguese Government, on the face of the record?

Mr. ADAMS. May I in a measure answer that by asking a question of the Senator from Kentucky? The Federal agency, the Export-Import Bank, in a sense guarantees the American Locomotive Co. on its sales of locomotives to some foreign corporations of some kind. As I understand, it means, if the locomotives are not paid for, and there is a 50-percent participation, that the Export-Import Bank stands 50 percent of the loss.

Mr. BARKLEY. It is a possibility; but that method is adopted by all banking institutions in the matter of foreign trade.

Mr. ADAMS. Oh, no.

Mr. BARKLEY. They do it in part by acceptances, by discounts, and by endorsements—

Mr. ADAMS. No, no. There is no bank in the world that ever, for ordinary interest rate, accepted the responsibility of taking half of the loss and none of the profit. That is not done. What we are trying to do is to stimulate foreign trade by the acceptance and the assumption, as I understand, of part of a loss that may come. My question is this: If we are protecting the American Locomotive Co., or the General Motors Co., as to one-third, or one-half, or some other fraction of their losses, is the United States as a whole furthering its commercial enterprises by imposing the loss upon the Federal Government rather than by allowing the individual corporation to carry it? That is, the net result, so far as national assets are concerned, is the same unless business is stimulated in such a way as to do the country some good.

Mr. BARKLEY. Of course, none of the money leaves the country. It is used for the general purpose of carrying out the contract, and it remains here until the obligation is discharged. Of course, it is possible, I suppose, to imagine some exceptional case where the Export-Import Bank would take a risk by limiting the obligation of the operating corporation in the United States to 50 or 75 percent. It may take a theoretical risk in depending upon the security of a foreign corporation to repay. But that is the sort of transaction which frequently occurs in international trade in all sorts of banks. Up to date there have been no losses due to such risk. On the contrary, as I have already stated, the Export-Import Bank has made a profit. It did make a profit in the fiscal year ending on the 1st of this last June of $1,700,000. So there may be a theoretical risk, but no actual risk.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator a question?

Mr. ADAMS. Certainly.

Mr. BORAH. The difference between these two amendments, so far as dollars is concerned, is $50,000,000. What is the difference between them so far as using that money for governmental purposes is concerned?

Mr. ADAMS. As I understood the Senator from Kentucky, it was in putting into words limitations which we all understood were actually in the incorporation of the organization. That is, none of us contemplated in the creation of the Export-Import Bank that it would make foreign loans. Now the Senator from Kentucky is putting into the measure a definite provision that the Export-Import Bank shall comply with our understanding when the bank was created. I was hopeful the Senator from Ohio would accept a proviso—

Mr. TAFT. There is nothing in the substitute whatever that even mentions foreign governments or in any way prohibits the sale to foreign governments. The Senator understands that. Of course, if the Senator would add an additional proviso that there should be no such loans to foreign governments, then it would be entirely acceptable to me. Incidentally, I would be quite willing, so far as my amendment is concerned, to add the Senator's proviso to the $125,000,000 proposed by my amendment.

Mr. ADAMS. I think the proviso offered by the Senator from Kentucky would constitute an improvement, if it were added to the amendment of the Senator from Ohio as it stands, and I have no doubt the Senator from Kentucky would be glad to have that done in order to make the provision clear.

Mr. TAFT. I would like to perfect my amendment by adding to it the proviso offered by the Senator from Kentucky. I do not think it means very much, but so far as it goes, it goes very much in the right direction.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. La Follette in the chair). The Senator has the right to modify his amendment until the time it is voted on.

Mr. BARKLEY. The question involved in the definition is one that undoubtedly causes difficulty. It might be provided that no loan shall be made for governmental purposes, but what is a governmental purpose depends entirely on the laws of the government of the country where the exports are to go. Of course all of this is always under the control of the Export-Import Bank. It can turn down all applications if it so wishes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time of the Senator from Colorado [Mr. ADAMS] on the amendment has expired.

The question is on the amendment in the nature of a substitute offered by the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. Barkley] for the amendment of the Senator from Ohio [Mr. Taff] as modified.

Mr. BARKLEY. I suggest the absence of a quorum. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll and the following Senators answered to their names:

King La Follette Lee Adams Davis Russell Downey Schwartz Schwellenbach Austin Bailey Bankhead Frazier George Lodge Sheppard Lucas Shipstead Gerry Gibson Gillette Barkley Lundeen McCarran Slattery Smathers Bilbo Bone Borah McKellar Smith Guffey Maloney Stewart Bridges Brown Gurney Mead Taft Miller Thomas, Okla. Thomas, Utah Hale Harrison Minton Bulow Murray Burke Hatch Townsend Truman Neely Norris Hayden Byrd Herring Tydings Nye O'Mahoney Vandenberg Capper Chavez Clark, Idaho Clark, Mo. Holman Van Nuvs Wagner Walsh Holt Pepper Pittman Hughes Connally Johnson, Calif. Johnson, Colo. Radcliffe Wheeler White

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Eighty-four Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BARKLEY] in the nature of a substitute for the amendment offered by the Senator from Ohio [Mr. TAFT], as modified.

Mr. BARKLEY and Mr. TAFT asked for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, may the amendment of the Senator from Kentucky be read, as well as my amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendments will be read for the third time for the information of the Senate.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. The amendment of the Senator from Ohio proposes, on page 18, line 15, to strike out $200,000,000" and insert: "$125,000,000: Provided, That no loan shall be made under this section for any purpose other than facilitating trade by way of increasing exports from the United States to foreign markets: Provided further, That all funds made available under this section shall be expended in the United States."

The amendment offered by the Senator from Kentucky in the nature of a substitute for the amendment offered by the Senator from Ohio, as modified, proposes, on page 18, line 15, to strike out "$125,000,000" and insert: "$175,000,-000: Provided, That no loan shall be made under this section for any purpose other than facilitating trade by way of increasing exports from the United States to foreign markets: Provided further, That all funds made available under this section shall be expended in the United States.'

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BARKLEY] in the nature of a substitute for the amendment offered by the Senator from Ohio [Mr. TAFT], as modified.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator from Kentucky whether or not in his contemplation the substitute amendment proposed by him would permit the use of Government credit-for it is essentially Government credit—for the exportation of arms, munitions, and implements of war?

Mr. BARKLEY. Subject to the law regulating the exportation of arms, munitions, and implements of war, and subject to the law governing the Export-Import Bank, if any such commodities could be squeezed in between those two provisions of law, it might be possible.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. President, I do not desire to detain the Senate. The yeas and nays have already been ordered. I merely desire to say that I do not intend to vote for any sort of appropriation or the extension of any sort of Government credit for the purpose of using the credit of the United States to finance and facilitate armament programs in foreign nations.

Mr. BARKLEY and Mr. NORRIS addressed the Chair. The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Missouri yield; and if so, to whom?

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. I yield to the Senator from Kentucky. I shall be glad to yield to the Senator from Nebraska in just a moment.

Mr. BARKLEY. I should like to answer the suggestion of the Senator from Missouri by saying that no such loan has been made by the Export-Import Bank, and no such loan is contemplated, even if it were possible.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Would the Senator be willing to include a provision to prohibit such loans?

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. I yield.

Mr. PITTMAN. Why not make the provision broader and say we shall not ship out of the United States arms, munitions, or implements of war to any country, any time, anywhere?

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. That would be agreeable to me.

Mr. PITTMAN. That question is now before us.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. The Senator does not intimidate me at all with that proposal.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I do not think there is any necessity to provide for any such contingency in this bill. We have had before us the question of the exportation of arms and munitions. We have passed laws on the subject. The proposal involves the whole question of neutrality; and I do not think that question ought to be injected into this legislation.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. I simply injected it, Mr. President, because it will determine how I shall individually cast my vote. I had hoped to be able to vote for the Senator's substitute.

Mr. BARKLEY. As between the amendment offered by the Senator from Ohio and my substitute there is no difference on that subject.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. I understand.

Mr. BARKLEY. There would be no advantage one way or the other.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. There would be an advantage of $50,000,000.

Mr. BARKLEY. If that would be an advantage. Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President—

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. I agreed to yield to the Senator from Nebraska.

Mr. NORRIS. I think the suggestion I wanted to make to the Senator from Missouri has already been covered by the Senator from Kentucky. Referring to the question the Senator from Missouri raised, there is absolutely no difference between the amendment of the Senator from Kentucky and the amendment offered by the Senator from Ohio.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. There is $50,000,000 difference. Mr. NORRIS. As I see it-and I do not believe there can be any dispute about it-there is only one difference between the two propositions now, and that is one provides for $175,000,000, the other provides for $125,000,000. Mr. CLARK of Missouri. I will say to the Senator from Nebraska that, if the question is presented, assuming that this money were to be used for armament purposes for other nations, the difference between whether we spent $125,000,000 to arm foreign nations or $175,000,000 would be a very material consideration.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, nobody in this entire discussion or in the hearings or in the activities of the Export-Import Bank, to which this portion of the bill is limited. and to which the amendment is limited, has ever thought of the exportation of arms and munitions. Nothing of that kind has ever been done, and I am satisfied that it will not be done. If the Senator were to insist that, under no circumstance, should the United States provide or assist in any way in the exportation of arms to any country, it might even involve the question of what assistance we would render to South and Central American nations under the Monroe Doctrine in the event it should become necessary for them to obtain such articles for their own protection and defense.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President-Mr. CLARK of Missouri. I yield.

Mr. TYDINGS. I think the Senator from Nebraska has just stated what is the fundamental difference between the two amendments, and I agree with what he said; and I should like to ask, in the time of the Senator from Missouri-

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. I yield the floor.

Mr. TYDINGS. I do not want the floor, as my time has expired. So I should like to ask the Senator from Missouri a question in his own time.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Very well.

Mr. TYDINGS. I ask whether or not the Senator from Kentucky would consent to voting upon his proposal as two different matters, one relating to the money appropriated, and the other the wording, because I am afraid we will become confused about having the wording of the proposal of the Senator from Kentucky without the money.

Mr. NORRIS. The wording is just the same in both amendments.

Mr. BARKLEY. I will say to the Senator that the substitute amendment which I had offered is the substitute which was read and the Senator from Ohio accepted the latter part of my substitute as the language of his amendment.

Mr. TYDINGS. I have accomplished my purpose, in suggesting that I wanted to prove, that the only real difference was the amount of money, so that Senators would not feel that they would lose the wording of the amendment of the Senator from Ohio.

SEVERAL SENATORS. Vote! Vote!

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment offered by the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BARKLEY] in the nature of a substitute for the amendment proposed by the Senator from Ohio [Mr. TAFT], as modified. On that question the yeas and nays have been ordered, and the clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DAVIS (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the junior Senator from Kentucky [Mr. Logan]. I do not know how he would vote; but I transfer that pair to the junior Senator from New Jersey [Mr. BARBOUR], and will vote. I vote "nay."

Mr. MINTON. I announce that the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. REYNOLDS] is detained from the Senate because of a death in his family.

The Senator from Arkansas [Mrs. Caraway] and the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. Green] are absent on important public business.

The Senator from North Carolina [Mr. BALLEY], the Senator from Ohio [Mr. Donahey], the Senator from Virginia [Mr. GLASS], the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. Logan], and the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. Overton] are unavoidably detained.

The Senator from Mississippi [Mr. Bilbo], the Senator from Washington [Mr. Bone], and the Senator from Nevada [Mr. McCarran] are detained in Government departments.

Mr. GUFFEY (when his name was called). I have a pair with the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. Tobey]. I transfer that pair to the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. Over-TON] and will vote. I vote "yea." I am not advised how either Senator would vote if present and voting.

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. HARRISON. I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Oregon [Mr. McNary] and therefore withhold my vote.

Mr. MINTON. I announce that the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. Bilbo] is paired with the Senator from Virginia [Mr. Glass]. If the Senator from Mississippi were present. and voting, he would vote "nay."

Mr. LUNDEEN. Mr. President, for some time I have advocated the taking over of strategic and important bases for the protection of the Panama Canal, both on the Atlantic and the Pacific coasts. I have no desire to make any extensive remarks at this time, due to the limitation of debate on the bill, but I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD certain resolutions and letters bearing upon these proposed bases both on the Atlantic and Pacific coasts.

I further ask to have an article dealing with the subject printed in the RECORD. It is entitled "Canal Authorities Apprehensive of Pacific Attack," written by Alice Rogers Hager, and published in the Washington (D. C.) Evening Star of July 31. The article is dated Panama City, C. Z., July 31, and indicates that the Canal authorities favor my resolutions.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The matters referred to are as follows:

VETERANS OF FOREIGN WARS OF THE UNITED STATES, Washington, D. C., July 31, 1939.

Hon. Ernest Lundeen,

Senate Office Building, Washington, D. C.

Dear Senator Lundeen: I note that you have proposed, in five joint resolutions introduced in the Senate, legislation authorizing the President to negotiate for the purchase of a number of islands and other territory which you feel should be under our defense control as a matter of national safety. I feel that this is one of the best and most constructive ideas yet advanced for our national defense scheme, and I sincerely believe that the Veterans of Foreign Wars will want to support you in this legislation.

Mr. Millard W. Rice, our national legislative representative, and I have discussed the question and plan to present resolutions supporting your proposals at the Fortieth Annual Encampment of the Veterans of Foreign Wars which will take place at Boston during the latter part of August. I shall appreciate it if you will send me copies of your resolutions for use in presenting the matter to our encampment. We now have no mandate on this particular angle of national defense. angle of national defense.

Thank you very much for your courtesy.

Very sincerely yours,

VICTOR E. DEVEREAUX, Director.

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION FOR THE CALLING OF A UNITED STATES CONSTITUTIONAL CONGRESS, New York, July 20, 1939.

Hon. ERNEST LUNDEEN.

United States Senator,

United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR SENATOR LUNDEEN: Please accept sincere compliments and respects, and permit request for two copies of the bill which the United Press recently indicated as having been introduced in the Senate by your worthy and esteemed self, apropos of the desirability of the transfer to the United States by foreign countries of their territories and other lands in the Western Hemis-

Your kindness will be cordially appreciated. Assurances of kind regards and good wishes are herewith transmitted.

Very respectfully,

R. MOULTON PETTEY.

DEAR SENATOR LUNDEEN: I have read with great enthusiasm an article in the Journal-American stating that you are proposing a resolution that the United States obtain all the islands in the Caribbean Sea either by direct purchase or obtain them in lieu of our war debts.

I am definitely in favor of such a proposal, and I know that many of my friends are also. We have talked about this same thing many times. It seems that quite a few people cannot realize the predicament we would be put to if the Panama Canal was sabotaged. I am in favor of two strong fleets, one for the Atlantic and one for the Pacific. I am also in favor of buying the was sabotaged. I am in favor of two strong fleets, one for the Atlantic and one for the Pacific. I am also in favor of buying the Galapagos and the Dutch property and to negotiate for the exchange of British and French property for the war debts.

I suppose many a Senator or Representative will fall for the usual wily British actions such as that talked about recently where they want a substantial reduction and then to amortize the balance. Later they will repudiate that balance and ask for another reduction. Only God knows how long that will continue. Recent events concerning British recognitions of various concessions including the recognition of Japanese belligerent rights in China show that Britain would double-cross us if the going would be too tough for them, and they would readily leave us holding the bag. The visit of the King and Queen was the highest of British propaganda, and I am sure that you and other Senators didn't fall for it.

I will gladly do anything to help these proposals go through and if you need any petitions I will gladly canvass my friends to get them. I am thinking as every American should, and I am neither a Communist, Fascist, or any other "ist" just because I believe we should have that land for safety sake. I believe we should also try to get the Bermudas even though they do not fall in the Caribbean.

I am not much of a letter writer, but I do believe in putting my antimate of the surface of the safety sake.

I am not much of a letter writer, but I do believe in putting my sentiments on paper for such a worthy cause, and while you are in the Senate I pray that you will not give up the fight to get these proposals to a head. I'll be rooting for you, and as stated above please do not hesitate to write if you need any petitions. And don't forget to vote two ships for the other's one.

E. LISY, 308 Harding Avenue, Clifton, N. J.

Los Angeles, Calif., June 18, 1939.

Hon. ERNEST LUNDEEN

Senator, United States Senate, Washington, D. C.
Honorable Sir: I was pleased indeed to read the Associated Press report of your interest in the purchase of Bermuda by the United States.

Several years ago I had a conversation with an officer of a foreign country, and his statements at that time led me to believe that sometime his country would seize Jamaica, Bermuda, and Nassau. I trust that you will introduce a bill in Congress at an early date for the purpose of creating a committee that start at once the negotiations for the purchase of the above islands. The island of Jamaica would make the best naval base as well as base for military planes that is possible to find. I took that matter or point up with Rear Admiral Hepburn. He agreed with me as to the military value of this island. He doubted that England would apply the debt or consider the debt in the purchase.

England is seeking the help of the United States, and there is no better time than now to get action. Every one of the above islands could be made to pay commercially, and for military purpose there is no question as to value.

Until the United States owns the above islands there will always be danger of them falling into the hands of some enemy of this country. To be brief, I trust that you get a bill before this Congress for their purchase. Every real American will stand up and cheer for you.

I will be pleased to give you any information that I can as to these islands as I have been on all of them. Will be glad to hear from you. Very truly,

A. LINCOLN CHASE.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., July 24, 1939.

Senator Lundeen,

United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

Dear Mr. Lundeen: I read in this evening's New York Journal American your proposal for the acquisition of all foreign-owned islands and other lands in the Atlantic and Pacific in South and Central America. I agree with you and I am sure that a hundred million other Americans do. I agree, too, that the acquisition should be speeded up so as to make way to add all this land to our chain of national defense of the United States as well as being closer to guard over the South and Central America governments. closer to guard over the South and Central America governments and the defense of the Panama.

With the present method of aggression which does not declare but just breaks in by carefully carried out secret plans as can be seen all over the world. Therefore we need plenty of outposts in our Western Hemisphere to prepare. It will be the places that are unguarded that will be attacked and least expected of attack. Not to say the commercial value of these islands for air service and

I say, act now. Sincerely yours,

JOHN J. McKEOGH.

P.S.—We will probably never be paid. These lands would be part payment. Let the French and English pay the Dutch for Dutch Guiana. It shouldn't cost us anything except our debt.

[From the Washington Evening Star of July 31, 1939] CANAL AUTHORITIES APPREHENSIVE OF PACIFIC ATTACK—GALAPAGOS, COCOS ISLANDS BELIEVED ESSENTIAL FOR DEFENSE

(By Alice Rogers Hager)

PANAMA CITY, C. Z., July 31.—Grave concern as to the safety of the Panama Canal, from the Pacific side, in the event of any general war in which the United States would be involved is being expressed here as a result of lack of support in Washington for the Lundeen bill to lease the Galapagos and Cocos Islands, off the Panamanian

The consensus here in the Canal Zone paints a graphic and startling picture of the sudden damage to the locks and canal power-control points that could be achieved in the event of a surprise attack from the west, with the consequent severing of this American lifeline.

"The dawn attack" has become an obsession down here. east Nature has provided the long chain of islands of the West Indian group and preparations are now being made to fortify enough bases there to make it virtually impossible for an enemy fleet or its planes to attack the Canal. But nothing stands between Asia and the Pacific end of the Canal and the entire west coast of North and South America except Hawaii, and Hawaii could be isolated or simply neglected by an enemy fleet steaming along the Equator.

COULD STRIKE SUDDENLY

In an ocean the size of the Pacific such a fleet could move secretly

In an ocean the size of the Pacific such a fleet could move secretly toward Panama, bring its aircraft carriers and supporting ships within the short distance of 500 miles under cover of darkness, and, at the proper moment, launch its planes with their deadly burdens so that they would be in striking position over the Canal at dawn before the American forces had any warning of their approach.

To offset this danger, bills have been introduced in Congress that would authorize the leasing of bases on the only land in the entire Pacific adjacent to the Canal, and also at appropriate points within a 1,000-mile range to the north and south in Central and South America. This would give a protecting range of 1,000 miles in all three directions, with intersecting patrol areas that would automatically prevent any surprise attacks. The ideal locations for such land bases would be along the coasts of the countries to the north and south of the Canal at the correct distances, and for seaplane bases and radio stations in the Galapagos and and for seaplane bases and radio stations in the Galapagos and Cocos groups.

With the present feeling of cordial cooperation between the Central and South American nations and the United States, ob-servers here say that the institution of such bases would be servers here say that the institution of such bases would be welcomed by the governments in question as an additional protection to themselves. It is felt by those in authority in the Canal Zone that outlying bases in the Pacific, similar to those in the Atlantic, are absolutely necessary to the Canal's safety.

Lack of support for the plan is thought here to be due to a misconception. In following out its good-neighbor policy, the administration is believed to feel that any move to attempt to fortify territory adjacent to the Canal, even on a purely lease basis, would be offensive to members of the Lima conference. The policy itself and the general moves to make it effective are applauded locally, but, in this instance, it is generally disagreed with.

As against this Washington view, there is cited here the recent close fraternization between the heads of countries close to the Canal and the United States Army officers stationed here. Gen. David Stone, commanding general of the Canal Department, in particular, is credited with having done an extraordinarily fine job in promoting better understanding. He has been repeatedly invited to come to Central American capitals as an honored guest by their presidents, and has in return entertained their high officers in Panama.

NO FEAR OF LAND ATTACKS

The announcement by Colombia a few days ago that she would prevent by force of arms, if necessary, any attack on the Canal through her territory, and the subsequent practical application of action in requiring Scadta, the German-owned airline, to reorganize, with Colombians at its head, are attributed to an interchange of visits between the two armies.

In comparison to the real worry that it was generally known the Army felt concerning the proximity of German flying so near the Canal, General Stone told this writer that now there is nothing to be feared from land attacks. "The neighboring countries," he said, "are as one in their friendliness and concern for the safety of what they realize to be their own lifeline as well as ours. They know how great their own danger would be if the Canal were to be seized by any enemy from either the east or the west. And they also realize that the aim of the United States is not war, but the protection of a peaceful artery of world trade.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives by Mr. Calloway, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House had passed a bill (H. R. 5138) to make unlawful attempts to interfere with the discipline of the Army, the Navy, and the Coast Guard; to require the deportation of certain classes of aliens; to require the fingerprinting of aliens seeking to enter the United States; and for other purposes, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED

The message also announced that the Speaker had affixed his signature to the following enrolled bills, and they were signed by the President pro tempore:

S. 188. An act to provide for the administration of the United States courts, and for other purposes; and

S. 1558. An act to provide for the acceptance of an easement with respect to certain lands in New Mexico, and for other purposes.

HOUSE BILL REFERRED

The bill (H. R. 5138) to make unlawful attempts to interfere with the discipline of the Army, the Navy, and the Coast Guard; to require the deportation of certain classes of aliens; to require the fingerprinting of aliens seeking to enter the United States; and for other purposes, was read twice by its title and referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

MESSAGES FROM THE PRESIDENT

Messages in writing from the President of the United States were communicated to the Senate by Mr. Latta, one of his secretaries.

AMENDMENT OF CIVIL SERVICE RETIREMENT ACT-CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. NEELY submitted the following report:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 281) to amend further the Civil Service Retirement Act approved May 29, 1930, as amended, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House of Representatives and agree to an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the House amendment insert: "That section 3 of the Act of May 29, 1930, as amended, is amended by striking out all of that portion thereof beginning with paragraph (g) and continuing to the end of the section and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

PROGRAM FOR FINANCING RECOVERABLE EXPENDITURES

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (S. 2864) to provide for the financing of a program of recoverable expenditures, and for other purposes.

Mr. BROWN. Mr. President, I have an amendment on the desk which I should like to have stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated by the clerk for the information of the Senate.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 17, line 25, before the period, it is proposed to insert a colon and the following:

Provided, That such loan shall be made on an amortization basis by means of fixed annual or semiannual installments, or, if such basis be deemed unsuited to the loan, on some other basis, which shall require payment of a substantial portion of the principal and the entire accrued interest each year during the life of the loan; except that the agency may, if it deems it advisable, waive the requirement for principal payment during the construction period of the protect. of the project.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I will say to the Senator from Michigan that I have no objection to that amendment. It carries out the real purpose by making provision for annual payments in an amount sufficient to amortize the loan during the period. I have no objection.

Mr. BROWN. Mr. President, if there is no objection to the amendment, I do not desire to be heard on it; but if there is any objection, I will be very glad to explain it.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Michigan [Mr. Brown].

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I have an amendment at the desk which I should like to have read.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 4, line 17, after the word "Act", it is proposed to insert a comma and the following: "and except that loans from such sum shall be made available to corporations and other organizations, organized and operated exclusively for charitable, scientific, educational, or hospital purposes, no part of the net earnings of which inures to the benefit of any private shareholder or individual, to the same extent and upon the same terms and conditions that such loans are made available to municipalities and other public bodies."

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I will state that the purpose of this amendment is to make it possible for educational institutions which are nonprofit corporations, which are dedicated entirely to educational purposes, and which provide no profit to any shareholder or interested individual or corporation, to make loans from the P. W. A.

fund that is provided by this bill.

I have in mind a specific case that makes me interested in it personally, that of the University of Miami, in Miami, Fla. That institution is supported to the extent of 15 percent of its revenue from public taxation, and the remainder of its revenue is derived from donations by interested persons and from the revenues that come into the school from its student body.

Heretofore that institution, however worthy its need or however sound its credit may have been, has not been eligible to get the benefit of P. W. A. loans, and for the obvious reason that 45 percent of the money was being given to the institution and naturally the Federal Government did not want to establish the precedent of making a donation to any applicant which was not a public borrower.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. PEPPER. May I finish the sentence, and then I shall be glad to yield.

Mr. President, under this bill there is no money being given away. This is entirely money that is loaned. I see no reason, therefore, why such an institution might not be eligible for a loan; yet, under the language of this P. W. A. amendment, it is provided that only those can make loans under this section who could have made loans under the P. W. A. Since there is a difference in the character of the old P. W. A. loans and these loans, I thought that the Congress would be willing to make a difference in eligibility.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President— Mr. PEPPER. I am glad to yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. The bill, as written, provides for the Public Works Administration "$350,000,000 for loans for projects of the character heretofore authorized to be financed by loan or grant, or both, by the Federal Emergency Admintration of Public Works under title II of the National Industrial Recovery Act."

Under title II of that act, provision is made for any projects of the character heretofore constructed or carried on either by public authority or public aid, to serve the interests of the general public. In subsection (a) of section 201 of the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act, as amended, in paragraph 3 it is provided that such subsection shall, for such purpose, be held to include loans for the construction or completion of hospitals, the construction of which is partly financed from public funds.

So it seems to me that the Senator's proposition is already covered in the pending act, by reference to the provisions in the National Industrial Recovery Act of 1933. If the Senator's amendment covers any other such projects, I doubt very seriously whether the pending act ought to be expanded to that extent.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I know that heretofore the institution to which I have referred has been forbidden to make any loans, on the ground that only a small part of its revenue was derived from public taxation.

Mr. BARKLEY. They were denied grants, but they were permitted to make loans. They probably did not accept the loan because they were denied, under the law, the right to obtain grants.

Mr. PEPPER. If that is the interpretation the majority leader places upon this, very well.

Mr. BARKLEY. The amendment would just be repeating what is already in the law.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, if you will allow me, I shall discuss two or three other subjects.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator withdraw the motion?

Mr. PEPPER. Yes; I withdraw it. Mr. President, may I send to the desk another amendment.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Very well.

The CHIEF CLERK. It is proposed to add at the proper place the following:

Sec. —. Section 5d of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation Act, as amended, is amended by inserting after the first sentence thereof the following new sentence: "The Corporation is further authorized and empowered, under such terms, conditions, and restrictions as the Corporation may determine, to make loans to port districts to aid in refunding or refinancing indebtedness heretofore or hereafter incurred in connection with the improvement or maintenance of a port or harbor."

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, that amendment is for the purpose of making it possible for loans to be made by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to port districts. I am satisfied that under existing law such authority does not now exist. I am sure Senators know there are in this country a good many port districts which have been established by local interests and that later, perhaps, the port development has been taken over by the Federal Government and has been maintained by the Federal Government; but, despite the fact that the Federal Government took over the port district and maintained it, a large obligation was left upon the local interests. In Fort Pierce, Fla., we have a very glaring example of such a situation. The people were anxious to establish a harbor to serve not only the East Coast but the whole central section of Florida. The port authority, consisting of only about 1,100 people, undertook the task of creating a port district, and spent two or three million dollars in the construction of a deep-water development. Subsequent to that time, the Federal Government took over the port, and the Federal Government has been maintaining it. The port authority has been in very serious need of some refinancing ability.

All this amendment would do would be to make it possible for the port district to apply to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and to submit its case, and, if it showed a good case, to make a loan or to be eligible to receive a loan.

I see no objection that anyone can have to including this applicant in the list of those eligible for Reconstruction Finance Corporation loans.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield.

Mr. BYRD. I think the Reconstruction Finance Corporation already has that authority.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, the Reconstruction Finance Corporation has the authority, and even the P. W. A. has the authority, to make loans to port districts for construction of any improvements they may wish to make, but they have no authority to make loans to refinance old debts that have not been paid.

With all due respect to my friend the Senator from Florida, I do not think that either the Reconstruction Finance Corporation or the P. W. A. should be given authority in this bill, which is designed to bring about the employment of unemployed in this country, to go down into the Treasury of the United States to refund existing local debts. We have never authorized any agency to do that, with respect to any city, county, or State. The whole theory of this legislation, P. W. A. or W. P. A., and of all these activities, has been to give employment to idle men during this emergency.

Mr. President, we do not give employment to idle men by paying off an old city debt or an old port debt or any old debt that has been incurred by a local subdivision or by a State. It seems to me that if we start along such lines we shall be going beyond the purposes of this bill and beyond sound finance.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I wish to say to the Senator from Kentucky that I propose to offer as an additional amendment the one involving the question whether or not the Reconstruction Finance Corporation shall have authority to refinance the outstanding indebtedness of political subdivisions. In a moment I shall discuss that subject in its larger view.

I was not altogether clear in my statement, or the Senator from Virginia [Mr. Byrd] would have understood that I referred to the refinancing of the outstanding indebtedness of port districts, and not new construction.

Mr. President, I should like to ask if the Senator from Virginia thinks the Reconstruction Finance Corporation would have that authority?

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, the Reconstruction Finance Corporation has authority to buy the obligations of any State, county, or city, on a self-liquidating basis; but that is under the authority of section 5 (b)—what is known as the Glass amendment; and that applies only to the construction of a project.

I read from a letter I received from the R. F. C .:

Answering your question No. 4:

The Reconstruction Finance Corporation's unusued authority to issue additional obligations can provide funds, when the condi-tions of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation Act are complied with, for non-Federal public works of a self-liquidating

Mr. PEPPER. But, Mr. President, I call the attention of the Senator from Kentucky to the following facts.

Mr. BYRD. It says they do not have to be new projects;

it may be any obligations.

Mr. PEPPER. For the benefit of the Senator from Kentucky, I call attention to the language to which the Senator from Virginia has referred. The Senator construes a letter which was written to him by the R. F. C., and which appears on page 10040 of the RECORD, in the following language:

Answering your question No. 4:

The Reconstruction Finance Corporation's unused authority to issue additional obligations can provide funds, when the conditions of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation Act are complied with, for non-Federal public works of a self-liquidating nature

Of course, as I think the Senator will agree, this is not a self-liquidating project, because it has already been constructed, and the Army has taken it over and is operating it. But the district still has the burden of the outstanding obligation, so it would be the obligation of the district that the taker of the securities would be getting.

Mr. BARKLEY. I am sure the paragraph referred to relates to section 5 (d) of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation Act, which provides:

SEC. 5d. For the purpose of maintaining and promoting the economic stability of the country or encouraging the employment of labor the Corporation is authorized and empowered, under such terms, conditions, and restrictions as the Corporation may determine, to make loans to, or contracts with, States, municipalities, and political subdivisions of States, with public agencies and instrumentalities of one or more States, municipalities, and political subdivisions of States, and with public corporations, boards, and commissions, to aid in financing projects authorized under Federal, State, or municipal law.

So that it is limited to loans to aid in the financing of projects; and I do not believe that the repayment of outstanding existing debts, either of a State, city, county, or other political subdivision, or of any other public body, was contemplated by Congress when it enacted the statute, because that would not be a project.

Mr. PEPPER. I arrived at the same decision at which the leader arrives, and I rather wish that he and I were wrong and the Senator from Virginia were correct; but I was not clear, and for that reason I wanted the Senate to give consideration to the amendment.

In answer to the statement made by the Senator from Kentucky, I call attention now to a political subdivision which has an outstanding indebtedness that is more than it can pay. There is just one of two things that district can do: It can either go into bankruptcy, which is possible, I think, under the existing Municipal Bankruptcy Act, or its taxpayers can continue to struggle under a burden of tax which they are not able to bear without impeding the development of the community.

Mr. BONE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield.

Mr. BONE. I assume this would be a refunding operation.

Mr. PEPPER. That is all.

Mr. BONE. In other words, the district would issue new bonds and, from the proceeds, take up the old?

Mr. PEPPER. Exactly. This is the way it works out in practice. Under the existing municipal bankruptcy law it is possible, in the case of a political subdivision—and I hope that when we pass an amendment now on the Senate Calendar it will be possible in the case of some additional political subdivisions, for example, a county-if it does have a burden of debt which it cannot reasonably pay, for 51 percent of its outstanding creditors to come into court and file a plan of composition. Then the Federal court will have jurisdiction of the application. The Federal court may then entertain a proposed plan of composition, which, of course, always contemplates a reduction of the outstanding indebtedness of the political subdivision. After full examination of that plan of composition, if 66% percent of the affected bondholders or creditors approve of the plan of composition, and the Federal court finds it is a fair plan of composition, the Federal court has authority to put the plan of composition into effect.

In that way it is possible for political subdivisions to discharge outstanding indebtedness that is more than they can reasonably and practically pay. Yet the whole matter is handled in a court of competent jurisdiction, and 51 percent of the creditors are required to make application before the court will have jurisdiction, and 66% percent are required to give their approval before the court can act.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The time of the Senator on the amendment has expired.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I hope it will be agreeable to allow these people to at least apply to the R. F. C.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Florida [Mr. PEPPER].

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I have another amendment to offer, which I send to the desk.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will state the amendment.

The CHIEF CLERK. It is proposed to add at the end of the bill the following new section:

SEC. -. The first sentence of section 5d of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation Act, as amended, is further amended by inserting after the words "to aid in financing projects authorized under Federal, State, or municipal law", a comma and the following: "or to aid in refunding or refinancing indebtedness heretofore or hereafter incurred.'

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, this amendment, if agreed to, would make possible the refinancing of the outstanding indebtedness of political subdivisions. The amendment is broad enough to include any kind of special tax, school or road district, also to include a county obligation or a municipal obligation.

A few minutes ago the Senator from Kentucky pointed out that the authority to make these loans under the R. F. C. would not aid in the construction of projects. I differ with the Senator from Kentucky, because I know from personal experience in my State that there are a great many municipalities in this country which have reached the limit of their capacity to put up their part of the payment for a W. P. A. project. I know that there are cities in my State which are already pledging their delinquent-tax certificates in order to get the money to put up their share of W. P. A. projects in that State. In one of the cities that is in that situation financially there are over 5,000 unemployed people within its limits trying to get jobs. I went with the mayor of that city to the R. F. C., and the mayor of the city begged, almost on bended knees, for the privilege of borrowing enough money on their delinquent-tax certificates to get some money with which to meet the cost of the W. P. A. projects.

If we can reduce the amount of the outstanding indebtedness of a municipality or of a county, if they get themselves in better condition financially than they otherwise would have been, they then would be in position to contribute to the construction of W. P. A. projects, and in that very direct way to aid in the construction of projects which would give jobs to unemployed in this country.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield.

Mr. KING. Does the amendment which the Senator offers bail out a number of persons who are not claiming the benefit of the bankruptcy measure which we have had before the committee and which is now on the calendar? Is not the Senator trying to take advantage of cities-

Mr. PEPPER. Not necessarily, Mr. President.

Mr. KING. And have the funds provided for in this bill utilized to pay the indebtedness of some of the bankrupt cities in the Senator's State?

Mr. PEPPER. No. Let me tell how this would work out. In my State the Everglades Drainage District embraces about 12 or 14 different counties. It has an outstanding indebtedness of something like twelve or fourteen million dollars. It cannot possibly pay that debt. No private lender is going to lend money to that district, no bank can afford to lend money to it. But the R. F. C. has said to the district, since they are eligible by specific provision of law to apply to the R. F. C., "We will lend you as much as 40 cents on the dollar of your outstanding indebtedness." That does not contemplate municipal bankruptcy, or anything else of the kind.

If the creditors of that district will be agreeable to take 40 cents on the dollar, then the creditors get their money, the district gets out from under a debt which it could not possibly pay otherwise, the taxpayers get out from under a burden that is more than they can bear, and the district progresses, making new improvements, spending money, giving jobs. That is an instance of the beneficent exercise of the power of the R. F. C., and I see no reason why a political subdivision cannot at least apply to the R. F. C. and have its case judged and the facts and circumstances all considered, just as drainage districts can apply. I know that the R. F. C. has saved my State from bankruptcy by making it possible for drainage districts to apply to the R. F. C. and get help from it.

Mr. KING. I am sure it has not saved it from bankruptcy. because representations were made before the Committee on the Judiciary a short time ago. There were very large sums of which the taxpayers were seeking to escape the payment. and we were considering a bill to enable them to take advantage of the Bankruptcy Act.

Mr. PEPPER. The plan of composition authorized under the Bankruptcy Act contemplates that the creditors will be paid off. If the court says that a plan of composition is fair, if 66% percent of the creditors of the political subdivision agree to it, in the presence of the court, and the district wants to apply to the R. F. C. to get the cash to pay off its outstanding obligations and put money into the hands of the creditors and get the district in a better financial condition, who is hurt?

Mr. KING. The Senator, then, desires to extend the power which the R. F. C. now has?

Mr. PEPPER. Yes.

Mr. KING. As I understood the Senator, application had been made to the R. F. C., and the R. F. C. was willing to extend credit to the extent of 40 percent.

Mr. PEPPER. I was using that as an analogy. Under the existing law drainage districts can apply to the R. F. C., and I was using it as an illustration of the beneficence of the law we passed 2 or 3 years ago. I am asking now that other political subdivisions may have the same privilege drainage districts have to file applications with the R. F. C.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, without desiring to take the Senator's time. I will say that I think the views expressed by our leader with respect to not extending the authority of these organizations should be adhered to, and I shall vote against the present suggestion or any other suggestion to expand and increase this authority. I shall follow our

Mr. PEPPER. I do not see how the amendment will do any harm. It seems to me it is one of the most beneficent things we can do, because, after all, we are trying to help the people of the country. If we can do something which will help the taxpayers of a given city or county, without the Government losing anything, why should any objection be made? So I hope the amendment will be adopted.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Florida [Mr.

PEPPER].

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. PEPPER. I offer another amendment which I ask to

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. At the end of the bill it is proposed to insert the following new section:

Sec. —. Section 5d of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation Act, as amended, is amended by inserting after the first sentence thereof the following new sentence: "The Corporation is further authorized and empowered, under such terms, conditions, and restrictions as the Corporation may determine, to make loans to public-school districts or other public bodies authorized to incur indebtedness for public-school purposes, to aid in refunding or refinancing indebtedness heretofore or hereafter incurred for public-school purposes."

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, Senator Robinson and I, before his lamentable death, were the joint authors of an amendment which proposed exactly what is proposed by this amendment, that is to say, to vest in the R. F. C. the power and authority to receive applications from public-school political subdivisions for the purpose of refinancing their outstanding indebtednesses or obligations. If Senators are not willing to extend these powers to all political subdivisions, it seems to me they would be willing to extend them to political subdivisions which are responsible for the publicschool systems of this country. I know there is not a Senator in this Chamber in whose State there is not some public-school district which is laboring under a burden of outstanding indebtedness issued for some worthy purpose in connection with education, which it cannot properly pay, and every one of those districts is looking for some method of relief so that it can reduce the obligation of the taxpayer, the burden of the taxpayer's debt, and at the same time put itself in such a fiscal condition as to render better school service to the people of the community and section.

So I cannot see why anyone should object to giving to school districts the same privileges that already have been given to drainage districts. Are school districts and public education less deserving of consideration than drainage districts or drainage objectives? These privileges were extended to drainage districts, 3 or 4 years ago, and all over the country drainage districts have obtained the benefit of the R. F. C. help and assistance. Now I propose that public-school political subdivisions shall have authority to come before the R. F. C. and explain their situation, and offer it good security in order that they may be able to borrow enough money so as to make it possible for them to refund or refinance their outstanding public obligations. So while the Senator may oppose extension of the R. F. C. authority in the other cases I have enumerated, I hope he will not oppose it in the case of the school districts, which, as we know, all over the country are laboring under burdens of debt which in many cases are more than they can properly bear.

I wish the Senator from Kentucky would give his attention to that matter.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, the Senator is now seeking to have the Federal Government bail out school districts which have gone into debt heretofore.

Mr. PEPPER. That is the purpose of the Senator from Florida, but is it not a worthy purpose?

Mr. BARKLEY. It may be a worthy purpose, but the theory of the pending legislation is to provide jobs and we do not give anyone a job by simply paying an old school debt which was entered into before the P. W. A., or the W. P. A., or C. C. C., or "I. P. Q." [laughter] were ever formed.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, if it would reduce the outstanding indebtedness of school districts and reduce the burdens of the taxpayers, I ask whether that would not provide substantial help?

Mr. BARKLEY. Oh, it would help the taxpayer, but it would not give a human being a job, which is the objective of the proposed legislation.

Mr. PEPPER. If my proposal makes for better financial conditions, would it not help the people in the school

Mr. BARKLEY. Yes; but the help is so indirect. help would be by way of payment of old debts which have been made 10 or 15 years ago. The purpose would not be to start a project or to relieve unemployment. The possibility that the payment of an old debt like that may indirectly give some men jobs is very remote.

Mr. PEPPER. Is the Senator aware of the fact that the R. F. C. has made loans to drainage districts to refinance their outstanding obligations?

Mr. BARKLEY. Yes. That was for the purpose of making them able to reclaim lands which they are not able to sell, so that farmers can continue to own and use the property in the interest of agriculture and the development of land. In those cases debts are owed by individual farmers to drainage districts. The Senator's proposal is entirely different. I would not vote for any amendment which would authorize the R. F. C. to loan money to a State, or county, or city, or political subdivision to pay old debts which were created prior to the establishment of the R. F. C.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Florida

IMr. PEPPER 1.

Mr. PEPPER. I ask for a yea-and-nay vote on the amendment.

The yeas and nays were not ordered.

The amendment was rejected.

INVESTIGATION OF NEGOTIATIONS BY AMERICAN CITIZENS WITH MEXICAN GOVERNMENT CONCERNING OIL SALES

Mr. NEELY. Mr. President, I present a resolution and request that it be read for the information of the Senate. The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The resolution will be

The Chief Clerk read the resolution (S. Res. 174), as follows:

Wheeras various editorials and news articles have been published in the daily press from time to time concerning the activities of certain American citizens with the Mexican Government in connection with the sale, barter, or exchange of Mexican ment in connection with the saie, barter, or exchange of Mexican oil; and

Whereas, due to the expropriation of certain American-owned oil properties by the Mexican Government, such activities of American citizens are of vital importance to the American public and to the Government of the United States; and
Whereas it has been intimated that such activities might be construed to be a violation of the Criminal Code: Therefore be it Resolved, That a special committee of three Senators, to be appointed by the President of the Senate, is authorized and directed to make a full and complete investigation of any and all negotiations carried on by citizens of the United States with the Mexican Government, or any official thereof, in connection with the sale, barter, or exchange of oil produced on American-owned property expropriated by the Mexican Government, with a view to determining whether such editorials, news articles, or other statements made in connection with such negotiations are true and whether any criminal statute has been violated. gress the results of its investigation, together with its recommendations, if any, for necessary legislation.

For the purposes of this resolution the committee, or any duly authorized subcommittee thereof, is authorized to hold hearings, to sit and act at such times and places during the sessions, recesses, and adjourned periods of the Seventy-sixth Congress, to employ clerical and other assistance, to require by subpena, or otherwise, the attendance of such witnesses and the production of such correspondence, books, papers, and documents; to make such investigations, to administer such oaths, to take such testimony, and to incur such expenditures as it deems advisable. Mr. NEELY. Mr. President, in behalf of prompt action I request that the resolution be referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate.

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, I did not understand to which committee the Senator requested the resolution to be

Mr. NEELY. To the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Let the Chair state the parliamentary situation. The resolution deals with a substantive matter, and should be first referred to a committee having charge of substantive matters of that nature. It should be referred to such a committee.

Mr. NEELY. Mr. President, in response to the observation of the Chair, I request that the resolution be appropriately referred.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It would ordinarily go to the Foreign Relations Committee first, and then to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate, and, without objection, it is so referred.

Mr. GUFFEY. Mr. President. I sincerely hope when the resolution submitted by the Senator from West Virginia comes to a vote it will be adopted. I assure my colleagues in the Senate that I have nothing to conceal, and I want the fullest and most complete investigation it is possible to make in connection with this matter.

THE SITUATION IN THE FAR EAST

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President, I ask the majority leader whether or not it is expected that the Senate will be in session on Wednesday?

Mr. BARKLEY. Yes; so far as I now know the Senate will be in session on Wednesday. A considerable amount of business has piled up on us during the consideration of the pending bill; and at this time I cannot foresee a recess over Wednesday

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. In view of the statement of the Senator from Kentucky, I wish to give notice at this time that when the Senate convenes on Wednesday, or as soon thereafter as I may be able to obtain the floor, I shall discuss the far-eastern situation, and will appreciate the opportunity of obtaining the floor at that time.

PROGRAM FOR FINANCING RECOVERABLE EXPENDITURES

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (S. 2864) to provide for the financing of a program of recoverable expenditures; and for other purposes.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I send to the desk an amendment which I ask to have stated.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment offered by the Senator from Kentucky will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. At the end of the bill it is proposed to add the following new section:

Sec. 21. The third proviso of the third sentence of the third paragraph of section 5 of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation Act, as amended, is hereby further amended by striking out "$350,-000,000" and inserting in lieu thereof "$500,000,000."

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I wish to explain the amendment. It has no relation to the pending bill. It amends the Reconstruction Finance Corporation Act, which provides a limitation of $350,000,000 for making loans to railroads for all purposes.

The Reconstruction Finance Corporation has left only $80,000,000 of the $350,000,000. The amendment is offered after conferring with Mr. Jones and others connected with the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, the lending agency of which he was the head until recently. I am advised that this extra authorization is needed. It does not increase the total authorization of loans made by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. It does not increase the borrowing power of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation in any respect. It merely authorizes it to use another $150,000,000 in addition to the $350,000,000 which it now has the authority to loan to railroads for general purposes.

I have consulted the Senator from Montana [Mr. Wheeler]. who offered the motion the other day to strike out the provision for railway loans on equipment; and he has no objection to the increase of this amount. I have also conferred with the chairman of the committee, with the Senator from Ohio [Mr. TAFT], and also with the Senator from Vermont [Mr. Austin], and others who I thought might be interested.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield.

Mr. BYRD. What is the present limit on the authority of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation in making loans to Mr. BARKLEY. Three hundred and fifty million dollars.

Mr. BYRD. I have before me a list which has just been received from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation showing that loans to the extent of $763,000,000 have been made to the railroads; and out of the $763,000,000, $215,000,000 has been repaid.

Mr. BARKLEY. I will say to the Senator that some of those loans were made before Congress inserted the limitation of $350,000,000 now carried in the law.

Mr. BYRD. What is the total? This report from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation is dated July 15, 1939. Mr. BARKLEY. I have not seen the report. I will say that out of the $350,000,000 limitation which Congress inserted in the law after loans had been made to the railroads under the general authority the Reconstruction Finance Corporation has loaned all except $80,000,000. It has a backlog of only $80,000,000 left for loans under this limitation.

Mr. BYRD. Am I to understand from the Senator that the amendment has no effect upon the action of the Senate in connection with the amendment offered by the Senator from Montana [Mr. WHEELER]?

Mr. BARKLEY. None whatever. The amendment only amends the original Reconstruction Finance Corporation Act by lifting the ceiling for railroad loans within its general authority and within its borrowing and lending power.

Mr. TRUMAN. Mr. President, the Senator from Kentucky is correct.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. La Follette in the chair). The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BARKLEY].

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, the proviso nows reads that the total amount of loans and commitments to railroads, receivers, and trustees, and for purchases and guaranties of obligations of railroads under this paragraph, as amended, shall not exceed at any one time $350,000,000, in addition to the loans and commitments made prior to the date of the enactment of the act. That is the provision which is to be raised to $500,000,000.

Mr. BARKLEY. That is correct.

Mr. TAFT. Under that provision the Reconstruction Finance Corporation may loan not only on equipment trust certificates but on the general bonds of railroads.

Mr. BARKLEY. It may make the same type of loans it is now making, and has made.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, it seems to me that apart from the question of method, not only does the amendment propose to increase the amount of loans which may be made to railroads on equipment trust certificates, the other method of approaching which was voted down, but also the Reconstruction Finance Corporation may make loans to railroads which are not even as good as equipment trust loans, in greater amount.

Mr. BARKLEY. The mere fact that the section authorizing new loans and leasing arrangements under the machinery proposed to be set up was stricken out had no effect whatever upon the authority of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to make the kind of loans it has been making. The argument was made in behalf of the elimination of that provision of the bill that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation could now make such loans; that it could borrow the money and make the loans just as it has been doing, and that the proposed section was unnecessary. All the amendment does it to raise the amount, within the total limitation which the Reconstruction Finance Corporation can use for the making of the same sort of loans hereafter.

Mr. TAFT. Raising the $350,000,000 does not in any way raise the total borrowing power of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation?

Mr. BARKLEY. It does not. It has no effect on it whatever.

Mr KING. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield.

Mr. KING. I ask the Senator from Kentucky whether or not the vote of the Senate the other day was an expression adverse to giving the Reconstruction Finance Corporation the right to extend further credit?

Mr. BARKLEY. No. I will say to the Senator from Utah that the main objection to the provision of the bill the other day, as urged by the Senator from Montana and other Senators, was that it might put the Reconstruction Finance Corporation into the equipment business. Those who objected to that section of the bill thought it might authorize the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to go out and buy old equipment, referred to as junk, and to make leases, which it does not have the power to do today; and the argument was made that under the present law the Reconstruction Finance Corporation has the authority to make all the loans necessary for equipment, provided the money is available.

This amendment merely gives the Reconstruction Finance Corporation an additional sum to make the same sort of loans it has been making; and there is nothing inconsistent between that principle and the position taken by the Senate in striking out the provision for leases, purchases, and so forth.

Mr. KING. One further question: Did the information which the Senator has received confirm the view that the Government is justified in making additional loans by reason of the precarious condition of the railroads, in view of the possibility that the Government might not be paid back the loans which were advanced?

Mr. BARKLEY. I will say to the Senator that so far as I am personally concerned the information I have received through the channels of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation convinces me that the additional authority would be properly exercised and would not involve the Government in any dangerous extension of its loans to railroads.

Mr. KING. I regret very much that it is felt necessary to increase the authority; and I shall vote against the amendment.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Kentucky.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I send to the desk another amendment, which I ask to have stated.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment offered by the Senator from Kentucky will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. At the end of the bill it is proposed to insert a new section, to read as follows:

SEC. —. (a) Section 5 (d) of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation Act, as amended, is hereby further amended by deleting the words "June 30, 1939," from the second paragraph thereof wherever they appear and substituting therefor the words "June 30, 1941."

(b) Section 3 of the act approved January 31, 1935 (49 Stat., ch. 2, pp. 1-2), is hereby amended by deleting from the first sentence thereof "January 31, 1945," and substituting therefor the words "January 31, 1935."

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, there are two amendments in one. When the Glass-Steagall Act was passed authorizing more liberal loans to small business there was some uncertainty, and there is now some uncertainty, as to whether it was possible to continue to make such loans beyond June 30, 1939. The Reconstruction Finance Corporation has assumed that it could do so, but in order to clear up the uncertainty the amendment merely provides for June 30, 1941, instead of June 30, 1939.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield.

Mr. BYRD. Is the Senator speaking of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation authority?

Mr. BARKLEY. I am speaking of the Reconstruction

Finance Corporation authority.

As to the other amendment, under the law as it now is maturities for loans of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation may not extend beyond June 30, 1945. In view of the existing situation it is felt that the time ought to be extended 10 years, to June 30, 1955, so that it may make loans with maturities up to that time.

Those two amendments are amendments of the existing Reconstruction Finance Corporation Act and do not in any way affect the bill or the amendments thereto.

Mr. BYRD. The Senator does not wish the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to expire on July 1, 1941?

Mr. BARKLEY. That is correct.

Mr. BYRD. The Senator proposes to extend-

Mr. BARKLEY. But that does not affect the length of the maturities. Even under the present law the Reconstruction Finance Corporation may make loans up to 1945. However, in view of the provisions in the bill providing for the furnishing of funds to R. E. A. and to the P. W. A., and the additional funds which may be available to railroads, it is felt that the maturity date ought to be extended so that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation will not have to engage altogether in short-term loans.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, in the light of the confused conditions economically as well as industrially and politically. it seems to me it is unwise to grant the extension called for by the amendment. If in the next 2 or 3 years, and before the termination of the life of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, the situation becomes so imperative as to call for an extension of the maturity period, application may be made to Congress, and I am sure Congress will take the necessary steps. As I said, it seems to me that in view of the confused economic and political situation today in our own country as well as throughout the world we ought not to make commitments so far in the future. I am very much opposed to the amendment.

Mr. BARKLEY. I will say to the Senator that under the present limitations, even if the Reconstruction Finance Corporation made loans to railroads for equipment and took equipment bonds and trusts, it could make such loans for only 6 years, whereas the whole discussion the other day with respect to this matter was to the effect that it ought to be permitted to make loans over the period which might comprehend the life of the equipment itself; so the Government would not lose anything. This other extension is necessary in order that the R. F. C. may provide for longer loans under the authority of the act under which it is now operating and under the authority which it will have under the pending

Mr. KING. I still adhere to the view which I have expressed. The arguments made a few days ago, when the railroad-equipment amendment was before the Senate, would not be applicable.

Mr. BARKLEY. If the Senator will yield, I will say that before the report was made on this bill the committee adopted these two amendments. The R. F. C. also had one or two others about which there was some confusion, and, in order to straighten out all of them, I withdrew the entire list of amendments; but these two amendments now pending were adopted unanimously by the committee while it had the bill under consideration.

Mr. KING. That merely indicates that the committee is not infallible. I think it made a mistake, and I think it would make a mistake if we reaffirmed the position which the committee then took.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, the amendments were not given very serious thought in the committee; they were presented at the very last moment on the last day. But I wish to ask the Senator from Kentucky, the author of the amendment, why the R. F. C. came to the Congress and had several provisions extended earlier in the session. I do not understand why they did not ask at that time to have this provision about loaning to municipalities extended that is now sought to be extended. Is there any reason why? Did they intend heretofore to give up that power and allow it to expire?

Mr. BARKLEY. That situation was somewhat analogous to the one in the first part of the amendment. They thought they were asking and obtaining the extensions referred to, but since the expiration of the fiscal year on June 30, 1939, there has arisen a doubt as to whether the act which Congress passed did actually extend the time.

This is simply to clear up that uncertainty and provide what they thought they were getting when these amendments were offered.

Mr. TAFT. I see no reason why they should not have applied for it before. They probably could have gotten it earlier in the session.

Mr. BARKLEY. That they did not do so is no reason why the amendment should be rejected now.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the amendment offered by the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BARKLEY 1.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BONE. Mr. President, I have tendered an amendment, which is on the clerk's desk, dealing with the matter of veterans' preferences. I should like to have it read from the desk.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be stated

The CHIEF CLERK. At the end of the bill it is proposed to insert the following new section:

SEC. . That section 16 (b) of Public Resolution No. 24, approved June 30, 1939, be amended by inserting after the words "excepting veterans," the following words: "the wives of unemployed veterans, and the widows of veterans."

Mr. BONE. Mr. President, this amendment has to do with the relief act passed heretofore during the session. It deals with the necessity for removing from employment on works projects various kinds and certain types of relief workers. There is an exception in the case of veterans. This amendment is intended to extend that exception to wives of unemployed veterans who may be unemployed and to the widows of veterans. It does not affect the act but is an attempt to extend to widows of veterans who may be in that category, or the wives of unemployed veterans, the preference we have given to veterans themselves. I think it is a logical amendment, because if a veteran himself is entitled to a preference and is sick, is flat on his back and not able to work and is otherwise qualified, there is no reason why his wife should not enjoy that preference which is intended to affect the veteran's family. If we give the veteran a preference, obviously if he is unemployed, broke, and hungry his wife, if she is able to work, might well enjoy that preference and be the beneficiary of the advantages that we have given to the war veteran.

I submitted this amendment to a number of Senators, including the senior Senator from Connecticut [Mr. Ma-LONEY], the junior Senator from Connecticut [Mr. DANAHER]. and the Senator from South Dakota, who expressed some interest in it. I think it can be adopted without doing violence to anything we have done before.

Mr. MALONEY rose.

Mr. BONE. Mr. President, I will say to the Senator from Connecticut I have offered and had read and am asking for a vote on an amendment dealing with the exemptions to veterans which I showed to the Senator 2 or 3 days ago.

Mr. MALONEY. Mr. President, will the Senator vield to me?

Mr. BONE. I have concluded.

Mr. MALONEY. Mr. President, I am very hopeful the Senate will adopt this amendment. I think it would be a great shame to permit an exemption to veterans and then deny the same exemption to the widows of veterans. There are not many of them, and the need is certainly much greater in the case of a widow. I hope there will be no objection to the amendment. It is a very worthy and important amendment.

Mr. BONE. I will say to the Senate that probably merely a handful of people, comparatively, are involved in this amendment, but it has seemed to me the part of justice. and I think the suggestion ought to meet the approval of the Senate.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Washington [Mr. Bone].

The amendment was agreed to. Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, I have an amendment, which I submit and ask the Chair to cause to be stated.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 4, line 17, it is proposed to insert the following proviso:

Provided, That no loan shall be made in excess of $10,000,000 for any such project.

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, this particular amendment applies to the P. W. A. situation. It would impose a limitation upon the amount of the taxpayers' contingent liability which could be allocated to a given project. Since there are a good many projects of the character heretofore authorized to be financed by loans or grants or both, as described in section 4, subsection 2, on page 4, it seems to me that there should be some limitation on the extent of the authorization which we are turning over to a bureau. Because of its desirability the amendment, which was discussed, by the way in the committee, with the assurance at that time that further thought and consideration would be given to the matter, I feel that this is the proper time to take it up. It is self-evident in its purpose and aims, and requires no further explanation. I hope the amendment will prevail, and I hope the Senator from Kentucky will give us assurance that it will be adopted.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I do not see any need for fixing a limitation on the amount that may be loaned for any project. I do not know whether there would be any projects involving $10,000,000, but assuming that the city of Chicago might want to borrow money to help construct a subway-a project which, I understand, they are considering—the adoption of the amendment might make it impossible for the city of Chicago to proceed in that way.

It might also be that the city of New York, for instance, in order to perfect its street and highway systems, might want to build a bridge across the Hudson River or the East River or somewhere else, and the adoption of the amendment might make it impossible for that kind of a transaction to be financed.

I do not know whether or not any $10,000,000 project will be approved, but certainly if a municipality is in a position to make such an improvement as I have described, and desires to make application for it on its merit, it seems to me it should have the right to do so, without being prevented by inserting such a limitation as now proposed.

I am not interested in any such project; my State is not interested, and will not be, and probably most of the other States of the Union are not interested; but there are communities that may be able to finance, in whole or in part, a project that might reach this limitation. If so, I do not see why the P. W. A. authorities should be handicapped in making loans of that character.

I am not speaking for any of these communities, but certainly the authority heretofore granted the P. W. A. has never been abused, and, under this smaller available expenditure for loans only, no grants being involved, certainly we cannot expect that it will be abused in the future.

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield. Mr. DANAHER. I concede the accuracy of the Senator's statement, for, so far as I know, there has never previously been any abuse by P. W. A., but we have a brand new Administrator and will not be operating on a 45-percent equity which the State or municipality itself puts up. Quite to the contrary, there will be a 100-percent loan, and the net result will be that someone in an office in Washington, if he chooses, may allocate the whole hundred million dollars, or the whole $350,000,000, to one project.

Mr. BARKLEY. Oh, no.

Mr. DANAHER. I know it is absurd; I know it is ridiculous to think of it.

Mr. BARKLEY. I was going to say that.

Mr. DANAHER. There is no reason in the world, though, why the Administrator could not allocate $50,000,000 of the people's money if there were no restriction on its use.

Mr. BARKLEY. Of course, the Senator knows, as he said. that that sort of payment would be ridiculous; he beat me to it in saying so, but, nevertheless, that does not justify us in assuming, now that we are only making loans and no grants, now that we have only $350,000,000 available for loans instead of $1,400,000,000, or $800,000,000, as has been carried in previous appropriations, the Administrator is going to run wild and make loans of ten or fifteen or twenty million dollars or of the entire $350,000,000. These will be the same type of loans that have been made up to now. If the city of Chicago or the city of New York or some other city desired to make a loan to enable it to improve its subway-transportation facilities. I do not see why it should not have the right to make application and let the Administrator determine whether it would be wise.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield.

Mr. WAGNER. As a matter of fact, there have been some very worth-while projects which cost more than $10,000,000 upon which applications for loans were granted. The Tri-Borough Bridge is one; the midtown tunnel is another; the bridge in California which has become such a notable improvement is another. There have been many very desirable projects which, in fact, have been so good that the R. F. C. no longer holds the loan, but it has been sold to

Mr. BARKLEY. It made the loan, took the obligations, the work was done, and the obligations were sold to the

Mr. WAGNER. The obligations were sold to the public, and in the meantime men were employed and material was purchased in different sections of the country which benefited business tremendously.

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WAGNER. I am not the one to yield, as I have not the floor.

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield.

Mr. DANAHER. The distinguished Senators who have been occupying the floor have been entertaining me with such a number of instances that I should like to ask if it is not true that there have been a 45-percent grant and a 55-percent equity held by the borrowing agencies in each of those instances.

Mr. WAGNER. I know that the California loan was a straight loan. If the Senator from Kentucky will permit me, I shall inform the Senator from Connecticut that loans have been made up to $400,000,000, as to many of which, such as the California project, which, I think, was a $60,000,-000 loan, the bonds have been sold to the public. The loans originally made by the Federal agency were so successful that only forty millions of bonds remained with the R. F. C. The remainder, $350,000,000 worth, have been sold to the public and gladly purchased, at a premium, too, to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

However, Mr. President, if I may conclude, I should like to state that under this amendment, several of those projects could not, without Government aid, have been started, and under this amendment Government aid could not have been

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, the situation previously obtaining under the law is not the situation here. Under this set-up we are going to authorize the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to transfer to this Corporation or to the P. W. A., upon the direction of the President, the amount of money to be allocated. There is the situation which confronts us. It seems to me the Congress should have something to say about the limitation of the amount of contingent liability that the Government is undertaking.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the amendment offered by the Senator from Connecticut [Mr.

DANAHER].

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I offer an amendment, which I send to the desk.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. At the proper place in the bill it is proposed to insert the following:

Subparagraph (a) of section 25 of the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1939 is hereby repealed.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, the purpose of this amendment is to remove one of the greatest injustices that I think was ever perpetrated by this body. That was the addition, in conference, of the provision prohibiting the Federal theater projects as part of the Works Progress Administration program. What this amendment proposes is to make the Federal theatrical projects as eligible for funds from the W. P. A. as any other projects. This amendment does not give the Federal theater projects a preferred place, and neither does it put them in a position of ineligibility for any W. P. A. funds. Before any W. P. A. funds could be used for the theaters they would have to be sponsored locally, and 25 percent of the State funds, of course, as the bill now provides, would have to be made available to the W. P. A. In other words, it would not be possible for the W. P. A. to sponsor its own theater projects or to proceed on its own initiative with the theater projects, as was possible before the present provision was enacted.

Mr. President, I realize that the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. Holf] and others had some criticism which they conscientiously urged, believing certain things to be unwholesome and not in the public interest, in connection with the theater projects of the W. P. A. I think I am prepared to say to the Senator from West Virginia and a few others interested in the subject that if the Federal theaters are permitted to operate in the future, as the music projects and the arts projects and the other projects of that character are permitted to operate, with local sponsorship, with the local people putting up the same proportion of the theater projects' costs as for the music projects' costs, and the like, there will be a different management of the theater projects in the future. In other words, I know that that splendid lady, Mrs. Flanagan, who has heretofore headed the theater projects, believes so conscientiously in the projects and in the merits of the program to be willing to sacrifice her personal desire to be associated with it, and even the personal remuneration that she has derived from it, and will completely detach herself from it, in order that the program, which has done so much good in this country, may have an opportunity to operate in the future.

Mr. President, I have here a statement made in 1937 by Lt. Eugene M. McGilicuddy, of the juvenile aid bureau of the crime prevention bureau of the New York City Police Department. He said:

I have found that crime prevention and art are very closely related. For proper guidance and education, we have sent many thousands of our children to see Works Progress Administration Federal Theater productions. We feel it has done a lot for them. Taking a child once to a real theater play did more good for him than taking him 100 times to the movies. Movies do not stimulate the child's imagination in the way your productions do. It is my opinion that 75 percent of the 15,000 children a week handled by us did not know that such a thing as the real theater existed.

* * Many delinquents or potential delinquents can be reached through athletics. But some children cannot be reached through these sports. It is the theater or the parks which have an appeal for that type of child. Thanks to the W. P. A. art program, the opportunity to indulge his creative instincts has been afforded this class of child. Without the aid of the W. P. A. and its arts program the Police Athletic League could not function. We haven't the funds.

In addition to that, I should like to read a list of the sponsoring organizations of the various theater projects over the country—263 social clubs and organizations, 264 welfare and civic organizations, 271 educational organizations, 95 religious organizations, 21 organizations from business and industry, 16 mass organizations, 66 trade-unions, 82 professional unions, 17 costumers' unions, 29 fraternal organizations, and 15 political organizations.

Mr. President, the Federal theater has not only produced the greatest number of religious plays ever presented by any producing group in the country, but it has also undertaken a wide variety of original research productions in the field of religious drama.

The productions have included such distinguished presentations as the American premiere of Eliot's Murder in the Cathedral, in New York; Sierra's Holy Night, in Chicago; Hauftman's Bethlehem, in Maine; Lavery's Monsignor's Hour, in New Orleans; Obey's Noah, in Los Angeles and Seattle; Bach's Within These Walls, in Chicago and New Orleans; O'Neill's Days Without End, in Denver; Lavery's First Legion, in San Francisco, as well as the annual cycles of Christmas miracle and morality plays which have been performed from coast to coast, on the steps of churches, libraries, public buildings, and even from the platforms of trucks, which have taken the Christmas story from one block to another in much the same fashion the strolling players of old went from place to place.

Particularly significant of the work of the Federal theater in religious drama is the unsolicited comment of the Catholic Herald of London, which declared in a recent review of the theater's record:

In such a plan as the American one seems to lie a real national theater serving both a living culture and a living people, representing no one group and no one class either artistically or politically—a people's theater in fact.

I should like to have permission to read into the RECORD a list of the authors whose plays have been performed, and while there were a few plays that were referred to by the able Senator from West Virginia, I will say that some of the plays which were criticized as objectionable were given before the program came under national supervision and control. But in the list of plays given will be found some of the best dramas available in the world of culture today. The question of whether they were given creditably or not by the performers is attested by the attendance that was enjoyed wherever the performances were given.

Do the Members of the Senate realize that the real story of the plays produced by Federal theater has not been told them? Do they realize that Federal theater has produced an extensive religious cycle of early nativity and miracle plays; that it has produced a great classical series, including plays by Euripides, Plautus, Marlowe, Shakespeare, Beaumont and Fletcher, Lope de Vega, Moliere, Sherica, Goldsmith, Schiller, Labiche, Ibsen, Wilde, Tolstoy, Chekov, Dion Boucicault, Shaw, and O'Neill?

Does the Senate realize that the majority of plays by Federal theater are those of accredited and successful dramatists? Since one of the Senators on this floor dragged up and ridiculed a dozen plays out of the entire 1,200—plays done on small projects, before there was national control of the projects—I insist on writing into the Record at least a partial list of American dramatists who have been proud to have their plays done by Federal theater.

This list includes George Abbot, George Ade, Zoe Akins, Maxwell Anderson, Anthony Armstrong, Frank Bacon, Fred Ballard, Philip Barry, Emjo Basshe, Lewis Beach, David Belasco, Michael Blankfort, Guy Bolton, Ann Preston Bridges, George H. Broadhurst, Porter Emerson Brown, Charlotte Chorpenning, George M. Cohan, Octavus Roy Cohen, E. P. Conkle, Marc Connelly, Barry Conners, Frank Craven, Rachel Crothers, Owen Davis, Paul Lawrence Dunbar, Philip Dunning, Frank B. Elser, John Emerson, Edna Ferber, Clyde Fitch, Martin Flavin, Rose Franken, Zona Gale, Virgil Geddes, William Gillette, Susan Glaspell, Montague Glass, James Gleason, Michael Gold, Paul Green, Harry Wagstaff Gribble, James Hagan, Theresa Helburn, Lillian Hellman, James A. Herne, Avery Hopwood, Sidney Howard, Hatcher Hughes, Talbot Jennings, Larry E. Johnson, George Kaufman, Patrick Kearney, George Kelly, Charles Rann Kennedy, Sidney Kingsley, Charles Klein, Alfred Kreymberg, Lawrence Langner, Ring Lardner, Emmet Lavery, John Howard Lawson, Sinclair Lewis, Anita Loos, Constance D'Arcy Mackaye, Elizabeth McFadden, Albert Maltz, Max Marcin, Don Marquis, Alan Landon Martin, Margaret Mayo, Edna St. Vincent Millay, John Moffet, James Montgomery, Christopher Morley, Kenyon Nicholson, J. C. Nugent, Clifford Odets, Eugene O'Neill, Paul Osborne, John Howard Payne, Paul Peters, Channing Pollock, Robert H. Powell, William W. Pratt, Samson Raphaelson, Daniel Reed, Mark Reed, Elmer Rice, Lynn Riggs, Mary Roberts Rinehart, George Scarborough, Edgar Selwyn, Irwin Shaw, Robert Sherwood, George Sklar, Winchell Smith, Samuel and Bella Spewack, Wilbur Daniel Steele, James A. Sterne, Donald Ogden Stewart, Austin Strong, Barry and Leona Stavis, Booth Tarkington, Sophia Treadwell, Bayard Veiller, Lula Vollmer, James Warwick, John Wesley, Percival Wilde, Thornton Wilder.

This list should be sufficient to indicate the wide diversity and high standards of subject matter of the plays produced.

In the New York theater project, which was referred to, there were four plays about to be given when the Federal theater project was forced to close down. These plays were chosen by the school boards of over 100 high schools in the United States and were booked continuously through next year. These plays consisted of the Taming of the Shrew, The Rivals, R. U. R., and Cyrano de Bergerac.

Mr. President, I might go on and give references to statements showing the recognition which has been given to the merit and the virtue of the Federal theater program. There is no possibility of longer being any Communists, if there ever were, in the Federal theater program, because we have an airtight provision in the law that every person who receives benefits from the W. P. A. must take an oath that he supports and adheres to and believes in the institutions which are characteristic of America. I submit that if the lady who has headed this program, Miss Flanagan, has been in the past an impediment to the preservation of that great work, she has already offered to get out voluntarily and completely dissociate herself from that program, and let it be reorganized and revised in such a way that it will be absolutely above question by the most critical and exacting Member of the Congress.

Why can we prefer orchestras and let them be sponsored locally and receive W. P. A. contributions, and yet not sponsor the theater? Why can we let people locally sponsor an arts program, and yet not let people locally sponsor a theater program? Does the American Congress propose to castigate, as the only unworthy class of American artists, the people who are dedicated to the theater?

I see sitting before me the able Senators from Alabama and South Carolina, who I happen to know have illustrious nieces who are pursuing careers on the stage. Are they to be punished because there might heretofore have been someone in the program who was not satisfactory according to someone's critical judgment? Are all the others of the 7,000 performers to be criticized as unworthy to the traditions of America, and is it to be said that they cannot under any local sponsorship or in any possible case enjoy with any aid whatsoever from the Federal Government work of the kind they have chosen as their life's vocation?

Let us not condemn a class wrongfully. If a barrel has some rotten apples in it, get the rotten apples out of the barrel. If there is a rotten apple on top of the barrel, get it I say that Miss Flanagan has done a wonderful job as supervisor of this theatrical program. I cannot agree with the very able Senator from West Virginia in his criticism; but I do not criticize him for making the criticism. He has a perfect right to have that view about the matter. Other Members of Congress have the same right. But because this lady might happen to be objectionable, are 7,000 who have no other work to do to be deprived of getting a W. P. A. job if the project is sponsored by local communities, the way the music and arts programs are sponsored? I say it is unworthy to catisgate as noble a class as there is in the country as unworthy of their Government's consideration, and I know that on reflection, and upon assurance that there will be given a new attitude and a new point of view, new scrutiny, if I may say so, to this program, the Senate will be fair enough to submit this amendment back to the conference and let the House say again, in view of these assurances, whether they would not be willing to let the communities of America sponsor theater projects the way they can sponsor other projects which may be made a part of the Works Projects Administration program.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I wish to make a statement with reference to the amendment. I appreciate the interest of the Senator from Florida in the theater situation. I admire his tenacity and ability in presenting it, or in presenting anything else he espouses. But this is the situation. If we are trying to put onto this bill a correction of everything someone thinks has been a mistake in legislation enacted heretofore, we not only will not recognize the bill when it is passed, but we will not get any legislation of any sort, even on the subject about which we are legislating.

The Senate adopted an amendment continuing the theater project, and I voted for it when it was before us in connection with the relief bill. It went to conference, the House would not accept it, and I know of no reason why it should be thought the House has changed its mind and would accept it on this bill, when it would not on the other. The conference report was presented, and the Senate agreed to the conference report with the amendment stricken out.

We had before us a few days ago the prevailing-wage provision, and because the Senate did not desire to incorporate it in the pending bill, because it would complicate the situation, and perhaps we would get neither the prevailing wage nor the measure now pending, that amendment was defeated.

The amendment the Senator has offered can be offered in connection with any other legislation, as well as in connection with the pending legislation, and I hope the Senator from Florida, with all his enthusiasm, and ability, and determination, and stick-to-it-iveness on any proposition, will not urge the amendment on this bill.

I sympathize with the situation which confronts the actors and artists of the country, and I voted for the provision when it was before us on a previous occasion, and I do not wish to foreclose myself as to how I would vote in the future; but I am sympathetic. I regret that it was eliminated; but it was eliminated by the action of the Congress, and I do not believe a measure like that now pending should be used as a kind of omnibus vehicle upon which to attach other things which have been rejected heretofore. For that reason I hope the amendment will not be agreed to.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield.

Mr. PEPPER. Under the rules would it be possible, or would the Senator think it inappropriate, if this amendment were withdrawn now, that it might be offered upon the deficiency bill when it comes along? It is directly related to providing jobs.

Mr. BARKLEY. It depends. It would probably be subject to a point of order, and the Senator of course could move that the rule be suspended, and if he could obtain a two-thirds vote to suspend the rule, if the point of order were made, he could make it in order on the bill. My recollection is that when the matter was up before it was adopted by an overwhelming vote.

Mr. PEPPER. Our leader has been very magnanimous about this matter, and while, of course, I do not want to bind the Senator, if I may deduce from his favorable attitude that he would not be one of the most belligerent opponents of the amendment if it is presented in connection with another measure, I will gladly acquiesce in his suggestion that the amendment be withdrawn.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Lee in the chair). The amendment is withdrawn.

Mr. BURKE. Mr. President, I offer an amendment which I send to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the amendment.

The Legislative Clerk. It is proposed to strike out lines 16 to 25, inclusive, on page 13, and to insert "shall become available for such purposes as and when appropriated by Congress"; and on page 18, at the end of line 9, to strike out the period and insert a comma and the words, "and the specific sums named in the act respectively for the various agencies administering the act, but no money shall be expended hereunder without appropriation by Congress."

Mr. BURKE. Mr. President, I shall explain in a very few words the purpose of the amendment.

When money is received in the United States Treasury, coming from whatever source or raised in whatever manner it may be, that money shall not find its way out of the United States Treasury until Congress has made the necessary appropriation to take it out.

We have before us a bill to provide, we are told, a sound method of financing. We are all familiar with the method that is proposed. The corporation specified in the bill is authorized to issue bonds, to sell them to the public, and to deposit all of the proceeds in the Treasury of the United States, just as any money raised by taxation or any other money finds its way into the Treasury.

This measure then provides a different method for getting the money out of the Treasury. Through all our history the appropriation bodies of the House and the Senate have had to act before a single dollar could be taken out of the Treasury, and action has had to be concurred in by a majority of both houses of Congress.

That has been the American way of getting money out of the Treasury. But we have here proposed a new method.

The Treasurer of the United States is hereby authorized and directed to receive such moneys and hold the same * * * and * * * upon the direction of the President, shall order to such special disbursing accounts with said Treasurer as the Secretary of the Treasury shall designate.

The purpose of the amendment, as I have explained, is to provide that when this money gets into the Treasury it can be taken out only in the normal American way, and that is accomplished by the two parts of the amendment offered. First, on page 13, section 11 now reads:

The departments, administrations, and agencies for which funds shall be provided by the Corporation pursuant to this act may use such funds for the purpose of carrying out their respective functions under this act and such funds shall remain available for such purposes until expended.

All the remainder of that section is eliminated, so that if the amendment shall be adopted, the section will read:

The departments, administrations, and agencies for which funds shall be provided by the Corporation pursuant to this act may use such funds for the purpose of carrying out their respective functions under this act, and such funds shall become available for such purposes as and when appropriated by Congress.

Then, proceeding to the other part of the amendment, on page 18, line 9, section 19 now reads:

There is hereby authorized to be appropriated from time to time such sums as may be necessary for administrative expenses in carrying out the provisions of this act.

I insert this provision:

And the specific sums named in the act respectively for the various agencies administering the act, but no money shall be expended hereunder without appropriation by Congress.

I do not wish to enlarge upon this point, but, with the provision covered by the two parts of the amendment inserted in the bill, I believe it would be possible for many who must otherwise oppose the measure to give their support to it. I earnestly urge the serious consideration of the amendment.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I have no doubt that any Member of the Senate who is opposed to the bill could with great consistency support it if the amendment of the Senator from Nebraska should be adopted, because we might as well strike out all after the enacting clause as to adopt the Senator's amendment.

What does the amendment provide? In the bill as it was first presented to the committee there was a provision for the use of a revolving fund. It was proposed that when loans made by various organizations, such as the Rural Electrification Administration, the Farm Security Administration, the Public Works Administration, were repaid, they shall be placed in a revolving fund. The committee refused to include that provision. So an amendment was adopted which stated:

The departments, administrations, and agencies for which funds shall be provided by the Corporation pursuant to this act may use such funds for the purpose—

And so onuntil expended.

In other words, there is $350,000,000 available for P. W. A. They may use that until it is absorbed, but after it is repaid they cannot use another dollar of it to make new loans. It goes back into the Treasury. The Rural Electrification Administration was authorized to lend $500,000,000 to farm cooperatives to establish rural-electrification facilities, and it is available until expended. That is not money which is going out of the Treasury. It is money that has been obtained by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation through the sale of bonds to the public. The same thing is true with respect to the Farm Security Administration, the R. E. A., and the P. W. A.

Let us suppose that projects are approved under the Public Works Program amounting to $200,000,000. The Reconstruction Finance Corporation sells bonds to obtain that $200,000,000 to turn over to the P. W. A. to make these loans. Under the amendment offered by the Senator from Nebraska not a project could be begun until Congress next year some time, after we come back in January, appropriates the money for that specific purpose. The Senator from Nebraska is an intelligent and able man, and he understands all the implications of his amendment.

If the Farm Security Administration desired to lend $100,000,000, or $50,000,000, or any part of the $600,000,000 for farm tenancy or for rural rehabilitation, it could go to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, with the approval of the President, and say, "We have applications for loans amounting to $100,000,000. We may have some more later, but we have applications for $100,000,000 now." The R. F. C. could sell its bonds to enable these new loans to be made, if the amendment of the Senator from Nebraska were not adopted. But under the amendment of the Senator from Nebraska they could not lend a dime. The entire R. E. A. program would be stopped until Congress came back here and made an appropriation, not out of money put into the Treasury by taxes, but out of money obtained by the R. F. C. through sale of bonds to the public. Not a single cooperative in the United States could get a dollar until then.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BARKLEY. I have only 5 minutes. I hope the Senator will not ask me to yield. If I have any time when I get through, I shall be glad to yield.

The same situation applies to the Public Works Administration. They may have enough projects already approved to absorb all the $350,000,000. The R. F. C. may sell bonds in order to obtain the money for the benefit of the Public Works Administration. Under the Senator's amendment, however, not a project could go forward until Congress should meet again and appropriate money for each individual project. If Senators want to destroy the effect of the bill, let them vote for the amendment of the Senator from Nebraska. If Senators are opposed to the bill, let them vote against it on the roll call when it is put on its final passage, but do not kill it in an indirect way by adopting this amendment, because that is what they would do.

On page 18 of the bill we provide that the administrative expenses, as is the case now as to all these agencies, shall under the authorization be appropriated by Congress. But in order that the Senator from Nebraska might make sure that his amendment would destroy the effect of the bill, he has gone over to the last page, where we provide for the appropriation of administration expenses, and added language which would make it impossible not only for the administrative expenses to be paid under the language of the bill, but for any of these agencies to spend a dollar on any specific project unless that project were brought here on the floor, threshed out in Congress, approved, and the appropriation made, not out of funds raised by taxation and put into the Treasury, but through the sale of bonds made under the jurisdiction of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

Mr. President, the amendment should not be adopted, and I hope it will be defeated.

Mr. GERRY. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.
The Chief Clerk called the roll, and the following Senators

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Eighty-four Senators having answered to their names, a quorum is present.

The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. Burke].

Mr. TAFT obtained the floor.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. TAFT. I yield. Mr. BYRD. In a colloquy several days ago in respect to the amendment offered by the Senator from-

Mr. TAFT. I thought the Senator wished to ask a ques-I yield for a question.

Mr. BYRD. I just want to insert a matter into the RECORD, if the Senator will yield for a moment.

Mr. TAFT. I do not want to yield the floor, and I can speak only once on this matter. I regret I cannot yield to the Senator without yielding the floor.

Mr. BYRD. Very well.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, it seems to me the interpretation put on the amendment by the Senator from Kentucky is hardly justified. As I would read the amendment of the Senator from Nebraska-and if I am mistaken I wish he would correct me-it simply means that there must be an appropriation act to cover the appropriations for the year 1940. The R. E. A., for instance, always has had $40,000,000 appropriated per year, and the amendment provides that we must appropriate again each year for the R. E. A. the sum which the Appropriations Committee finds to be necessary for that particular year. It does not have to cover each separate project, does it?

Mr. BURKE. No. The provision follows the customary practice followed since the Nation was established, that before money can be taken out of the Treasury and spent there must be an appropriation. Never has it been required that an act of Congress shall go into minute detail, but merely that the department, or the corporation, in this case, must represent to Congress what funds it wants out of the money raised by the new method of issuing bonds guaranteed by the Government. It must represent to Congress what money it wants for R. E. A., for the Farm Security Administration, or anything else; and the appropriations committees consider the matter and act upon it.

There is nothing new in the amendment. It merely restores what has always been the accepted financial policy of the Government.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. TAFT. I yield. Mr. BARKLEY. In other words, before any money can be taken out of the Treasury there must be an appropriation. Mr. BURKE. Yes.

Mr. TAFT. I assume such an appropriation could be put in the urgent deficiency bill before this bill passes.

Mr. BARKLEY. It would have to be pretty urgent to get in the one that is expected to pass before we adjourn.

Mr. TAFT. As I understand, it is urgent. The bill has been pushed as hard as it could be pushed.

Mr. President, it seems to me the amendment meets the really fundamental objection to the bill. It proceeds to prevent the bypassing of the Appropriations Committee. After all it seems to me that the main purpose of what is left in the bill—the R. E. A. and the Farm Security Administration-is to avoid coming back to Congress for 3 or 4 or 5 or 6 years, because according to the estimates the $500,000,000 appropriated to the R. E. A. will require from 8 to 10 years to spend; and during that time the agency is entirely relieved from the compelling force of coming to Congress every year and showing what money it needs for the next year. It seems to me the amendment fully meets the requirements.

Incidentally, I suggested in my opening speech the other night that I doubt very much whether the procedure proposed is at all constitutional. Certainly it is not in accord with the spirit of the Constitution.

The Constitution says that:

No money shall be drawn from the Treasury but in consequence of appropriations made by law; and a regular statement and account of the receipts and expenditures of all public money shall be published from time to time.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. TAFT. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. This money is not drawn from the Treasury.

Mr. TAFT. The other day the Senator made the same statement; and he cited the case of United States v. Johnston (124 U.S. 236), which I have read with interest, and which seems to me to prove nothing of the kind. It was a case relating back to the Civil War, when, in the midst of a war emergency, some man went out and bought cotton for the Government, or took over confiscated cotton. Anyone who reads the case will find a distinction about a special disbursing account; but so far as any discussion of the constitutional question is concerned, he will not find it.

Incidentally, there is a more recent case, the case of Haskins Brothers v. Morgenthau (85 Fed., 2d), pertaining to the processing taxes on oil, under the act providing that certain taxes on coconut oil shall be placed in a separate fund, earmarked as such by section 6021/2 of the Revenue Act of 1934, for the benefit of, and to be paid over to, the Philippine Islands. The petition asked that that section be declared unconstitutional and that the fund on hand for payment to the Philippines be held in trust for the claimant and others similarly situated. Regarding this alleged special fund in the Treasury for the Philippine Islands, the court said:

We hold these general principles to be axiomatic: (3) First, that an act of Congress was necessary for the withdrawal of money from the Public Treasury.

(5) Third, that the Secretary of the Treasury and the Treasurer are officers of the United States holding offices established by law; that their duties are to receive and preserve the public money and not to disburse it except conformably to law; that as officers of the United States they have no right or estate in the public money or any other money in the Treasury, whether earmarked as a special fund or as part of the general fund of the United States; that they are in effect mandatories of a limited and defined

The brief of Mr. Justice Reed, who was then Solicitor General, said:

It is true that the Treasury has credited these taxes to the account of a special fund, by reason of the congressional appropriation to the Philippines, but a large part of the money in the Treasury is similarly allocated. It has never been supposed that the money for that reason ceased to be that of the United States or that the United States no longer had an interest in its disposition.

It seems to me that case certainly supersedes the case cited by the Senator from Kentucky.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. TAFT. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. Does not the Senator recognize that the courts have drawn a distinct difference between a deposit of money with the Treasurer of the United States and a deposit in the Treasury of the United States?

Mr. TAFT. I think the case I have just read absolutely destroys that difference. It goes back to the point that, after all, in substance these are public moneys.

Mr. BARKLEY. They are not public moneys.

Mr. TAFT. They are borrowed on the credit of the United States.

Mr. BARKLEY. They do not belong to the United States. Mr. TAFT. Not a cent could be obtained without obligating the United States.

Mr. BARKLEY. The moneys do not belong to the United States. Not a dollar of them is available for the expenses of the Government. They are moneys raised from the public by the sale of bonds, and merely deposited in order that they may be used for the purpose for which the bonds are issued.

Mr. TAFT. The Senator certainly is drawing a fine distinction. These are public moneys. They are being used for public purposes. Take for instance the R. E. A. We have been appropriating for the R. E. A. for a number of years.

Mr. BARKLEY. Yes.

Mr. TAFT. We recognize its public purpose.

Mr. BARKLEY. That money came out of the Treasury. This money is not to come out of the Treasury. We have even covered back into the Treasury $40,000,000 which we appropriated for next year for the R. E. A.

Mr. TAFT. This money will be in the Treasury down on Pennsylvania Avenue, just where any other public money is. Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, a point of order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. CONNALLY. The Senators are not deporting themselves according to the rules of the Senate, which require that a Senator obtain consent to interrupt another Senator.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, the Senator yielded to me. Mr. CONNALLY. But the Senator from Kentucky did not yield to him when the Senator from Ohio was coming at him. Mr. BARKLEY. I did not have the floor when he was coming at me.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President. I am not inclined to take

Mr. BARKLEY. I hope I shall never be forced to yield when the Senator from Ohio comes at me.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, I invoke the rule. In addition to the dignity of the Senate being involved, the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. La Follette] and myself occupy positions of danger. [Laughter.]

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, the Senator yielded to me. Mr. TAFT. I did not object to the Senator speaking.

Mr. BARKLEY. I did not think I was compelled to ask the Senator to yield every time I asked him a question, so long as he was yielding. So far as any danger to the Senator from Texas and the Senator from Wisconsin is concerned because of the fact that the Senator from Ohio was coming at me, I think that danger can be excluded.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, may I ask a question of the Senator from Kentucky?

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, I am about to resume in my own time. I do not have very much.

Mr. REED. I merely wanted to ask the Senator from Kentucky, whether or not he thinks, if there were any real danger the Senator from Texas would stay where he is.

Mr. BARKLEY. I do not know how the Senator from Texas would demean himself, but I am sure under the same circumstances the Senator from Kansas would not remain.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, who has the floor?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Ohio [Mr. TAFT] has the floor.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, the appropriation system is a fundamental feature of the American constitutional system and of our whole financial system. I wish to read from Story on the Constitution:

In arbitrary governments the prince levies what money he pleases from his subjects, disposes of it as he thinks proper, and is beyond responsibility or reproof. It is wise to interpose in a republic every restraint by which the public treasures, the common fund of all, should be applied with unshrinking honesty to such objects as legitimately belong to the common defense and the general welfare. Congress is made the guardian of this treasure and to make their responsibility complete and perfect, a regular account of the receipts and expenditures is required to be published, that the people may know what money is expended, for what purposes, and by what authority.

It seems to me that in this case we are simply abandoning our constitutional duty to sit down each year and consider how much money a particular department needs and how much money it can use in the next 12 months, which money ought to be included in the expenditures of the Government. The effect of the bill would be to take the R. E. A. expenditures and the Farm Security expenditures out of the regular Budget of the Government and present a pretended reduction of governmental expenses.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. TAFT. I yield. Mr. BYRD. I should like to have the Senator refer to section 12 and give me his opinion as to whether or not any losses which may be sustained by the corporations will be required to be paid to the corporations by the Secretary of the Treasury without coming to the Appropriations Committee. The point is that not only will the original expenditures be controlled by the corporation or commission, but any losses which occur will be automatically paid by the Secretary of the Treasury.

Mr. TAFT. My interpretation of section 12 is that it is only an authorization for appropriation. I do not know whether or not the author of the bill agrees with me. but that was rather the conclusion of the committee.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I do agree; and to confirm the statement, I will say that we authorize in the bill an appropriation sufficient to pay any losses up to 1941. Beyond that the bill operates as an authorization under which Congress may from year to year after that, if necessary, appropriate money to take care of such losses. The losses would not be automatically paid out of the Treasury. but under an appropriation.

Mr. BYRD. Referring to line 19 on page 14, the provision with respect to losses is that the Secretary of the Treasury, on behalf of the United States, shall pay to the Corporation a sum equal to such losses. Then the authorization is made

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, I am not thoroughly familiar with appropriation practice, but I was advised by someone who seemed to know that that provision is only an authorization. Of course, on page 17, the administrative expenses of the departments, administrations, and agencies of the Government for the year 1940 entirely bypass the Appropriations Committee. All the administrative expenses are to be paid out of borrowed money the first year. After that we are to be permitted to appropriate and decide what such expenses shall be. The bill attempts to say that money may be borrowed in New York by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and paid over to the agencies to be used by them for administrative expenses without any further appropriation by Congress, because, while section 12 may or may not be an authorization for appropriation, certainly section 16 provides that no appropriation shall be required.

Mr. President, I believe very strongly that the essential fault of the whole lending program is that it is a fraudulent program, a concealing of expenditures, and the beginning of the creation of a double budget; and that if we wish to adhere to established practice we should return to the method of appropriating funds and adopt the amendment of the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. BURKE].

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Lee in the chair). The time of the Senator from Ohio on the amendment has expired. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. Burke].

Mr. BURKE. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered and the Clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DAVIS (when his name was called). I am paired with the junior Senator from Kentucky [Mr. Logan]. I transfer that pair to the junior Senator from New Jersey [Mr. Barbour] and vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. GUFFEY (when his name was called). On this vote I have a pair with the junior Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. Tobey]. I transfer that pair to the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. Overton] and vote. I vote "nay." I am not advised how either Senator would vote if present and voting.

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. MINTON. I announce that the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. REYNOLDS] is detained from the Senate because of a death in his family.

The Senator from Arizona [Mr. ASHURST] is absent because of illness in his family.

The Senator from Arkansas [Mrs. Caraway] and the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. GREEN] are absent on important public business.

The Senator from Ohio [Mr. Donahey], the Senator from Virginia [Mr. GLASS], the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. Logan], and the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. Overton] are unavoidably detained.

The Senator from Iowa [Mr. GILLETTE], the Senator from Nevada [Mr. McCarran], the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. O'MAHONEY], and the Senator from Indiana [Mr. VAN NUYS] are detained in various Government departments.

Mr. HARRISON. Making the same announcement as before, I withhold my vote.

Mr. AUSTIN. I desire to announce the following general

The Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. WILEY] with the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. GREEN].

The Senator from Oregon [Mr. McNary] is necessarily absent. His general pair with the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. HARRISON] has been stated by that Senator.

The Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. Tobey] would vote "yea" if present.

The result was announced—yeas 31, nays 47, as follows: YEAS-31

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment proposed by the Senator from New York will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. It is proposed to insert as a new section at the end of the bill the following:

DIRECT LOANS BY FEDERAL RESERVE BANKS TO BUSINESS ENTERPRISES That section 13b of the Federal Reserve Act, as amended, is amended to read as follows:

"Sec. 13b. (a) In exceptional circumstances, when it appears to the satisfaction of a Federal Reserve bank that a business enterprise located in its district is unable to obtain requisite financial assistance on a reasonable basis from the usual sources, the Federal Reserve bank, pursuant to authority granted by the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, may make loans to, purchase obligations of, such business, or may make commitments with respect thereto, on a reasonable and sound basis.

"(b) Each Federal Reserve bank shall also have power to discount for, or purchase from, any bank, trust company, mortgage company, credit corporation for industry, or other financing institution operating in its district, obligations of any business prise; to make loans or advances direct to any such financing institution on the security of such obligations; and to make commitments with regard to such discount or purchase of obligations mitments with regard to such discount or purchase of obligations or with respect to such loans or advances on the security thereof, including commitments made in advance of the actual undertaking of such obligations. Each such financing institution shall obligate itself to the satisfaction of the Federal Reserve bank for at least 10 percent of any loss which may be sustained by such bank upon any of the obligations acquired from such financing institution, the existence and amount of any such loss to be determined in accordance with regulations of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System: Provided, That in lieu of such obligation against loss any such financing institution may advance at least 10 percent of such advance of credit without obligating at least 10 percent of such advance of credit without obligating itself to the Federal Reserve bank against loss on the amount advanced by the Federal Reserve bank: Provided, however, That such advances by the financing institution and the Federal Reserve bank shall be considered as one advance, and repayment shall be made pro rata under such regulations as the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System may prescribe.

"(c) The aggregate amount of loans, advances, and commitments of the Federal Reserve banks outstanding under this section at any one time, plus the amount of purchases and discounts under this section held at the same time, shall not exceed the amounts paid to the Federal Reserve banks by the Secretary of the Treasury under subsection (d) of this section, except that when the amounts so paid by the Secretary of the Treasury are, in the judgment of the Board of Governors of the Treasury are, in the judgment of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, inadequate for operations under this section, the Federal Reserve banks, with the approval of the said Board, may continue operations under this section through the utilization of their other funds until the amount of such other funds so utilized equals the amounts received by them from the Secretary of the Treasury. All operations of the Federal Reserve banks under this section shall be subject to such regulations as the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System may prescribe may prescribe.

"(d) In order to enable the Federal Reserve banks to make the loans, discounts, advances, purchases, and commitments provided for in this section, the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to pay to each Federal Reserve bank not to exceed such portion of the sum of $139,299,557 as may be represented by the amount paid by each Federal Reserve bank for stock of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, and not already paid to a Federal Reserve bank under the provisions of this section, upon request by each Federal Reserve bank and upon execution of its agreement (to be endorsed on the certificate of such stock) to hold such stock unencumbered and to pay to the United States all dividends, all payments on liquidation, and all other proceeds of such stock, for which dividends, payments, and proceeds the United States hall be secured by such stock itself, up to the total amount paid to each Federal Reserve bank by the Secretary of the Treasury under this section. Payments heretofore made by the Secretary of the Treasury to any Federal Reserve bank under the provisions of this section shall be subject only to the terms of the section as now amended. The Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System shall have authority to reallocate among the Federal Reserve banks the funds received from the Secretary of the Treasury as said Board may find necessary in order to meet existing needs. Whenever the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System shall be said to the secretary of the Treasury as said Board may find necessary in order to meet existing needs. serve banks the funds received from the Secretary of the Treasury as said Board may find necessary in order to meet existing needs. Whenever the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System shall conclude, either as a result of a decrease in the volume of operations or otherwise, that the amounts paid to the Federal Reserve banks by the Secretary of the Treasury under this section are no longer needed for operations under this section, the total amount received from the Secretary of the Treasury under this section, after making adequate provisions for losses incurred in the use of such amount and after adding any net income derived from the use of such amount, shall be paid to and neutred in the use of such amount and after adding any net income derived from the use of such amount, shall be paid to and become the property of the United States, such payments to be made as orderly liquidation of assets acquired through the use of such amount, in the judgment of the said Board, will permit. All amounts required to be expended by the Secretary of the Treasury in order to carry out the provisions of this section shall be paid out of the miscellaneous receipts of the Treasury created by the increment, resulting from the reduction of the weight of by the increment resulting from the reduction of the weight of the gold dollar under the President's proclamation of January 31, 1934; and there is hereby appropriated, out of such receipts, such sum as shall be required for such purpose."

Mr. MEAD. Mr. President, in 1934, when the question of the capital and credit needs of industry was being emphasized in the Congress, the Chairman of the Federal Reserve Board at that time, Chairman Black, recommended that there be set up intermediate credit corporations in order to take care of this growing need. At that time, and when the matter came before the Committee on Banking and Currency for consideration, the senior Senator from Virginia [Mr. Glass] presented an amendment which is virtually the amendment which I have sent to the desk, with a number of changes which I suggested today, in order that loans might be extended particularly to small enterprises.

The original amendment presented by the Senator from Virginia is changed in the main by striking from that amendment the following language—and this language is the heart and center of the amendment I have sent to the desk. This is the language that is stricken from existing law:

For the purpose of providing it-

Meaning industry-

with working capital, but no obligation shall be acquired or com-mitment made hereunder with a maturity exceeding 5 years.

Mr. President, the amendment which I have offered, of course, contains other new verbiage; but the language which I have just quoted is, as I have said, language containing the major features of the amendment. It strikes out language which restricted and limited the Federal Reserve Board in granting loans to industry so that those loans could be only for working-capital purposes. It limited the life of those loans to a period of 5 years.

My amendment is the result of the hearing now being conducted in connection with the bill which I have introduced, to provide a new system of loans for small enterprise. This amendment has the approval of the Chairman of the Federal Reserve Board and of a number of Board members; but it must not be construed as the so-called Mead bill, which the Banking and Currency Committee is still considering. The hearings on that bill have not been concluded, and I should not care to ask the Senate to consider an amendment which would embrace the philosophy of the bill, until such time as the hearings shall have been concluded.

However, Mr. President, in view of the fact that the Chairman of the Federal Reserve Board and other members of the Board appeared before the committee and explained to the committee their opinion as to the necessity for loans of this character, and, in view of the fact that this amendment is but a slight modification of the amendment presented and written into the law in 1934 by the senior Senator from Virginia, I believe that it is proper and appropriate and germane at this time and for that reason I have sent it to the desk for consideration.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. MEAD. I shall be glad to yield for a question.

Mr. VANDENBERG. There seems to be some relationship between the Senator's amendment and the stabilization fund, in the final paragraph. Will the Senator explain that?

Mr. MEAD. I shall be glad to do so. In that connection there is no difference between existing law and my amendment, insofar as finding a source for the funds is concerned.

In initiating the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, the Federal Reserve banks were called upon to make a contribution toward its capital structure. That amount approximated $139,000,000. The Treasury of the United States was authorized to pay that amount back to the Federal Reserve banks from the profits resulting from devaluation of the gold dollar. That is existing law. I am making no changes in that. I am merely allowing the Federal Reserve System to utilize that $139,000,000 owing to them and now allotted to them by the Treasury of the United States.

Mr. VANDENBERG. What would it be used for otherwise?

Mr. MEAD. I presume it would be used for the ordinary conduct of the Federal Reserve System or returned to the member banks that made the original contribution to the initiation of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Does the Senator say that the Federal Reserve Board approves of this arrangement?

Mr. MEAD. I have here the statement of the Chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, and I shall be glad to put it in the Record.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Does his statement cover the particular subject about which I am inquiring?

Mr. MEAD. I am quite sure he does cover that, but I will be sure to cover it before I conclude.

In explanation of this amendment, Mr. President, let me say that it amends section 13 (b) of the Federal Reserve Act, which now authorizes Federal Reserve banks to make loans direct to established commercial and industrial enterprises, for working-capital purposes only, and for periods up to 5 years. It also authorizes the Federal Reserve banks to grant commitments to or participate with financing institutions with respect to any such loans. The limitations now contained in the act, with respect to supplying working capital to established businesses and with respect to maturities, with the limitation to 5 years, make it impossible for the Federal Reserve banks to grant credit to many worthy enterprises, particularly where additional funds are needed for the expansion or the improvement of enterprise.

My proposed amendment would eliminate these limiting provisions and would permit the Federal Reserve banks to extend credit to any business enterprise without restriction as to purpose and without restriction as to the period of time.

Under the present law the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to pay to the Federal Reserve banks up to $139,-000,000 out of the increment resulting from the reduction of the weight of the gold dollar, for the purpose of enabling the Federal Reserve banks to make industrial loans. This is the amount paid by the Federal Reserve banks for stock in the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

I would merely permit them to use their own money. The Secretary of the Treasury has already paid to the Federal Reserve banks approximately $27,000,000 of this sum. The law requires the Federal Reserve banks to pay the Government 2 percent, if earned, on the amount received from the Secretary of the Treasury for this purpose. My proposed amendment would direct the Secretary of the Treasury to pay to the Federal Reserve banks, upon request, such portion of the sum of $139,000,000 as has not already been paid to the Federal Reserve banks; and my amendment would also eliminate the provision for the payment by the Federal Reserve banks of the 2 percent, and it would authorize the Board of Governors to make such reallocation among the Federal Reserve banks of funds received from the Secretary as it finds necessary to meet existing needs in granting these loans to enterprise.

My amendment also provides that whenever the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System shall conclude that the amounts paid to the Federal Reserve banks by the Secretary of the Treasury are no longer needed for operations under section 13 (b), then the amount received from the Secretary of the Treasury, plus income and less such expenses and losses, will be paid back to and become once again the property of the United States.

Mr. President, this amendment merely broadens existing law. It does not appropriate an additional dollar. The amendment would give opportunity to Congress to study the needs of small enterprise and to become acquainted with the volume of capital needed in this country by small enterprise. We have nothing to lose; we have everything to gain. The record of the operation since 1934 of the so-called Glass amendment is one that recommends itself to the broadening influences of the amendment which I have offered.

From June 19, 1934, the date when the Federal Reserve banks were authorized to make working-capital loans to business enterprise, up to May 1939, the Federal Reserve banks passed on 9,291 applications, and took commitments to make advances amounting in all to $395,000,000.

Of the total number of applications over a thousand, amounting to $195,000,000, had to be rejected because the funds were not to be used for working-capital purposes. They will be taken care of under the amendment which I have sent to the desk. Between 350 and 400 applications amounting to $15,000,000 had to be rejected because the applicants were not established in industrial or commercial enterprises.

In the case of the establishment of an enterprise in the vicinity of the anthracite mining field, where, up until the present, it has been necessary for them to secure their equipment in Germany, and where we know an enterprise will have every reason to be successful, loans could be made for the initiation of this needed new enterprise.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The time of the Senator on the amendment has expired.

Mr. MEAD. Mr. President, I desire to speak on the bill. Other rejections numbered about 5,100, and amounted to approximately $155,000,000. The reasons for these rejections were unsatisfactory management, unsatisfactory financial condition, and unsatisfactory business prospects. Under my amendment they will be rejected in the future. Under my amendment only sound loans will be made, and under my amendment only good, solid, substantial industries will be encouraged.

Mr. President, what about the earnings under the operation of this amendment? What possibilities of profit or loss are there under the operation of the amendment I have at the desk insofar as the administration of the new measure is concerned? From the record we learn that to the end of 1938 the net earnings on industrial advances, before making provision for losses, amounted to $2,800,000. Determined losses charged off aggregate but $160,000, and reserves set aside to take care of estimated losses amount to $1,865,000. This leaves net earnings of about $770,000 for the period from June 19, 1934, to December 31, 1938.

At the present time the Federal Reserve banks hold, in addition to the $2,500,000 of advances which are past due 3 months or more, $1,300,000 of miscellaneous assets they have acquired in connection with the liquidation of defaulted obligations.

From the earning record, therefore, from the profits at hand, the liberalization of existing law without the authorization of an additional appropriation will, in my judgment, meet a very real need, and it will enable the subcommittee recently authorized by the Committee on Banking and Currency, and given an appropriation to make a study of capital needs, an opportunity to say just what these needs are, and to observe in application, in the processes of administration, the authorization contained in this amendment. It will, in my judgment, serve a useful and a fruitful purpose. It will help the Senate of the United States to determine whether or not permanent law on the subject should be enacted, and just what the provisions of that permanent policy should be.

Mr. President, of the total amount of advances and commitments made by the Federal Reserve banks, only $38,-000,0000 were advanced by the Federal Reserve banks direct to borrowers. Seventy-one million dollars represents advances made through local banks or commitments to local banks. That shows a cooperative attitude on the part of the local banks in making loans to business enterprises covered by Federal Reserve banks' commitments. Also the fact that the servicing of loans was rendered to a large extent by local banks accounts for the small amount of losses suffered by the Federal Reserve banks to date.

The amendments to section 13 of the Federal Reserve Act which I suggest propose only a slight broadening of the Federal Reserve bank authority, so that the Reserve banks will not be limited, if my amendment shall be adopted, by the restrictions imposed under existing law. These restrictions, I repeat, are that loans be only for working-capital purposes, that only established industrial businesses shall be considered eligible borrowers, and that the maximum maturities cannot exceed 5 years.

Mr. President, I should like now to read the observations made by the Chairman of the Federal Reserve System in recommending this legislation. Appearing before the Banking and Currency Committee only recently, he made the following statement:

As I see it there is a definite gap in our financial mechanism in respect to facilities it offers for meeting two classes of need, one the short and intermediate credit needs of small business, whose paper in present circumstances is at the borderline of bankable assets, and second, long-term credit and capital needs of small and medium-sized existing or prospective enterprises.

Mr. Eccles then proceeded to say in the same testimony, in citing the experience of Federal Reserve banks, under section 13 (b):

I believe that the authority which has been given to the Federal Reserve banks in this respect has not been sufficiently comprehensive. Many loans which might otherwise have been made have had to be declined because of restrictions in the law, such as the requirement that industrial loans be made only for working-capital purposes and to only established businesses, and for periods of not more than 5 years. The Federal Reserve banks have been crippled in the loans they might have wished to approve because of the restricted authority now granted under section 13 (b).

Mr. Eccles in the same testimony declared:

Abolish the present lending powers if you do not expand those powers.

He continued:

If, after consideration, Congress should feel that it does not desire to enact a proposal of this kind—

He was speaking then about my bill, and his proposal to set up a new corporation:

If, after consideration, Congress should feel that it does not desire to enact a proposal of this kind, then it would be my recommendation that section 13 (b) of the Federal Reserve Act be repealed, because it does not operate satisfactorily in meeting the situation.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, if the Senator will yield there, is that the statement of the Governor of the Federal Reserve System upon which the Senator relies when he says that Mr. Eccles recommends this specific amendment?

Mr. MEAD. I go beyond that, and say that I had the collaboration of the chairman and other executives of the Federal Reserve System in drafting the proposal.

Mr. President, as a result of this chaotic condition we find all over the world, we find it necessary in the United States to organize and create new industries. All over the land new industries, with very full measure of success, are looking for working capital. These new industries grow out of the turmoil of political conditions abroad. Yet we are unable to finance those industries.

I believe that America would be successful, that we would write a new pioneering chapter in American history, if we could make loans to enterprise or to industry not yet created which we have every reason to believe will be successful.

I have here a letter I received only recently from the comptroller of my State pointing out the great need of character loans to industry. He proceeds to say:

It was a character loan to the Vanderbilts that created the Staten Island Ferry and eventually the New York Central Railroad. It was a character loan of $28,000 to Mr. Ford that created jobs for nearly 100,000 men. It was a character loan to Mr. Singer that created that great industry, with its 1,700 agencies.

He proceeds to say that not only the development of our financial industry, not only the development of our commercial industry, but the necessary development of our governmental machine has impeded the progress of negotiating loans to enterprise, has in some instances actually stopped loans from going to enterprise. As a result of the situation in the financial world and the situation in the commercial world, with monopoly growing as the result of the very necessary situation here in the governmental world, with all of its various organizations having direct connection with our banks, it seems to me we have left small enterprise out in the cold, and that we should do something to remedy that deplorable situation.

Mr. President, little industries, small businesses in America cannot today negotiate intermediate or long-term loans. They are working on their reserve capital. They are neglecting their equipment. Their plants are in decay, all because they are pouring their every dollar into what might be called current needs. They have gone so far, Mr. President, that they are being financed by materialmen, by the wholesalers, by those with whom they must of necessity do business. That limits and restricts their scope, and that indicates that unless something is done to provide a remedy in this deplorable situation which has existed since 1920—unless something is done, the end of small business in America is not far off. The menace of growing monopoly, the menace of the chain store, the menace of big business dominating every section of the United States impedes the progress of small industry in its desire to secure adequate capital in order that it might carry on and compete.

So, Mr. President, this minor amendment which I offer, limited and restricted in its scope as it is, authorizing no new appropriation, will, I trust, be included in the lending bill.

I hope that in the next session of Congress we shall not only consider matters of minor importance, such as those dealt with in my amendment, but that we shall give consideration to the establishment of a sound, comprehensive policy of government which will encourage small enterprise and write a new chapter in the building up and development of industrial America again.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, the Senator from New York had before the Banking and Currency Committee a bill which we referred to as the Mead bill, which is not this measure. It was a bill authorizing the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to make loans. His amendment is quite a different measure. It seems to me that this matter should not be crowded upon the present session. It should not be made a part of the bill without hearing and without study. It goes into the fundamentals of the Federal Reserve System. The Federal Reserve System was established for the purpose of stabilizing the banking system of the United States, for making the resources of the banks available to industry, and to commerce, and to agriculture. The bill is limited in a measure, yes; but it is limited not to the use of Government funds. It proposes to make use of the funds not of the Federal Reserve Board but of the Federal Reserve banks. The Senator from New York says it is approved by the Chairman of the Federal Reserve Board. It is not, so far as I know. And the Senator is very careful not to say that it has the approval of the Federal Reserve Board.

Every dollar that the Federal Reserve banks have, every dollar that is to be loaned under the provisions of this bill, is private money. Not one dollar of public money does the bill provide to be loaned. It provides that the loans shall be made from the funds of the Federal Reserve banks, of the 12 Federal Reserve banks, whose capital was contributed by the member banks, National and State.

Congress exercised one simple act of liberality when it took $139,000,000 of the surplus of the Federal Reserve banks as a portion of the fund created to guarantee deposits, but as the banks, which were the owners of the Federal Reserve System, were benefited by it, there was good reason for that action. However, there was some criticism because of the fact that banks which were not members of the Federal Reserve System received some benefit from it. But this $139,000,000 belonged to the Federal Reserve banks, which, in turn, belonged to their member banks. It is now to be used to make loans direct to industry.

Mr. MEAD. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. ADAMS. I yield.

Mr. MEAD. In existing law Senators will find that the Federal Reserve banks have the use of $139,299,000, which represents the amount paid by the Federal Reserve banks to buy stock in the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation. They use that money now under the amendment written into the law by the senior Senator from Virginia.

Mr. ADAMS. I think I know what the senior Senator from Virginia thinks about it, too.

Mr. MEAD. I do not know anything about that. But I am not providing any use for the funds. The Federal Reserve banks have that money right now. I am simply broadening the purpose-

Mr. ADAMS. Yes; the Senator is broadening the purpose.

Mr. MEAD. But not providing any new money. Mr. ADAMS. That is not all. The Senator provides that at any time loans are liquidated, the money, instead of going back to the Federal Reserve banks, where it belongs, shall go to the Treasury of the United States and become Government property. It is a confiscatory proposition, in that $139,000,000 which belongs to the Federal Reserve banks, and which in turn belongs to the member banks, as well as every dollar of the Federal Reserve banks' capital. was contributed by private banks. The Government has taken over their surplus earnings. No one complains of that. Now it is proposed to take over the money which the Federal Reserve banks turned in to the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation fund in the event the loans are repaid. And it means to go on and make unduly liberalized

Mr. President, regardless of the merits of the Senator's proposal, I believe that a measure which deals with the essential functions of the Federal Reserve banks established as they are to stabilize the banking system of the United States, should not, without consideration by the Senate Committee on Banking and Currency, and without full consideration by this body, be attached to the lending

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, when the senior Senator from Delaware [Mr. Townsend] offered an amendment to the bill to prohibit the purchase of foreign silver, some question arose on the floor of the Senate as to the exact attitude of my colleague, the senior Senator from Virginia [Mr. Glass], who is chairman of the subcommittee considering that matter. I ask that the clerk read in their order three telegrams which I have received from the senior Senator from Virginia on this subject.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the clerk will read as requested.

The Chief Clerk read the telegrams, as follows:

LYNCHBURG, VA., July 29, 1939.

Senator HARRY F. BYRD. Senate Office Building:

I assume you know that I am utterly opposed to the purchase of foreign silver and so stated in the Banking and Currency Committee repeatedly. Should there be a vote on the question I would like you to have me a live pair.

LYNCHBURG, VA., July 29, 1939.

Hon. HARRY F. BYRD,

Senate Office Building:

Touching the foreign silver purchase proposition, I may state that Secretary Hull, the day before I was compelled to leave Washington, telephoned me to disregard his request for delay CARTER GLASS.

LYNCHBURG, VA., July 30, 1939.

Hon. HARRY F. BYRD, Senate Office Building, Washington, D. C .:

Please add this to my other telegrams should occasion offer. Please have it understood that I always have been and am now opposed to the purchase of foreign silver and desire to be recorded in favor of the immediate repeal of the law authorizing such

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, I desire to express the hope that amendments of this importance should not be attached to the bill when the Senate has had no opportunity to give to them the careful consideration they deserve. The Federal Reserve banks are authorized to make loans. loaned, as I recall, about $60,000,000. Some of those loans are in default. Certainly the Committee on Banking and Currency has not had an opportunity to determine whether the money of the Federal Reserve banks should ever be loaned under the terms set forth in the bill.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from South Carolina yield to the Senator from Michigan?

Mr. BYRNES. I yield.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, since this subject arose I have been trying to get in touch with Mr. Eccles on the telephone to discuss the matter with him. I have not been able to do so. It certainly is not fair to ask me to vote a thing of this sort into the bill when I cannot exchange a word with the governmental authorities who deal with the subject.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, I distinctly regret that the Senator from New York [Mr. MEAD] feels that he should offer the amendment at this time. It may be that upon investigation opportunity would be given the committee to have hearings, and some plan might be worked out. But certainly in the absence of any information as to the effect of the amendment it would be extremely unwise to adopt the amendment after consideration under circumstances necessarily incident to the closing of the session.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. BYRNES. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. I entirely concur in the views expressed by the Senator from South Carolina and the Senator from Colorado. The proposed amendment makes a fundamental change in the operation of the Federal Reserve banks and the Federal Reserve System. Certainly no such change ought to be made without committee consideration. We do not know whether or not it ought to be made at all, but no committee has given any consideration to this subject.

Mr. President, we all appreciate the sincerity and earnestness with which the Senator from New York [Mr. MEAD] is seeking to make a little easier credit for small business. However, the proposed amendment makes a fundamental change in the Federal Reserve System. It has not had consideration by the Committee on Banking and Currency. We do not know what might develop in the way of information as to its operation. In view of the importance of it, I wonder whether my good friend from New York will not withdraw his amendment so that the committee at some early date-probably early in the next session-may give consideration to the matter and determine whether or not it will take action upon it.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, I join in the request of the Senator from Kentucky. I desire to know the view of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation. Insurance of deposits has given confidence to the depositors of the Nation. I do not know what effect the amendment would have. I think we ought to have an opportunity to invite Mr. Crowley to appear before the committee. It may be that after he has had an opportunity to study the bill he will not be opposed to it. I think the Senator from New York should give the committee an opportunity to consider a measure of such great importance.

Mr. MEAD. Mr. President, I recognize the propriety of offering amendments germane to the underlying purposes for which the bill is drafted. I agree with the contention that my amendment has not yet received committee consideration. Of course, the Senator knows that for 2 or 3 years I have been pressing for the enactment of legislation which would make loans more readily available to small enterprises.

Mr. BYRNES. I know that.

Mr. MEAD. However, I appreciate the fact that my amendment might retard the progress of the pending legislation. I know that the Committee on Banking and Currency, of which the senior Senator from my State [Mr. Wagner] is the chairman, intends to pursue an intensive study of this subject after the adjournment of Congress.

With that in mind, and because it seems to be the sense of Senators on both sides of the aisle, I am perfectly willing to withdraw the amendment and have it referred as a separate subject to the Committee on Banking and Currency for study during the period when Congress will not be in session.

I wish to say to the Senator from Colorado that my amendment makes no change in the use of the money, because Federal Reserve banks are now using the money for the same purpose, and they are forced to pay the Treasury 2 percent on the use of their own money. That fact occurred to me to be inconsistent; so my amendment would repeal that clause requiring the Federal Reserve banks to pay the Treasury 2 percent on money which, as the Senator stated, is their own money.

So, Mr. President, I withdraw the amendment at this time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment is withdrawn.

Mr. MEAD. Mr. President, I have another amendment, which I send to the desk and ask to have stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment offered by the Senator from New York will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. It is proposed that section 5 (d) of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation Act, approved January 22, 1932, as amended, be amended to read as follows:

Sec. 5d. For the purpose of maintaining and promoting the economic stability of the country or encouraging the employment of labor, the Corporation is authorized and empowered, under such terms, conditions, and restrictions as the Corporation may determine, to make loans to, or contracts with, States, municipalities, and political subdivisions of States, municipalities, and political subdivisions of States, and with public corporations, boards, and commissions, to aid in financing projects authorized under Federal. State, or municipal law, such loans or contracts to be made through the purchase of their securities, or otherwise, and for such purpose the Corporation is authorized to bid for such securities. The Corporation is further authorized and empowered to purchase the securities and obligations of and to make, or to guarantee or insure, loans to any business enterprise when capital or credit, at reasonable rates for the character of loan applied for, is not otherwise readily available: Provided, That all such purchases of securities and obligations and all such extensions of loans and credits whether made, guaranteed, or insured, shall be under conditions which afford good and reasonable of their retirement or repayment; may be made or effected either directly or in cooperation with banks or other lending institutions directly or in cooperation with banks or other lending institutions through agreements to participate or to guarantee or insure, or by the purchase of participations or otherwise, shall be made only when the business enterprise, upon the completion of such financing, is solvent and reasonably likely to continue as a going concern: Provided further. That in carrying out the provisions of this section the Corporation may purchase securities and obligations and may make loans, with such maturities as the Corporation may determine polytimeterming and their provisions of law. determine, notwithstanding any other provision of law.

"The powers granted to the Corporation by this section shall terminate on June 30, 1941, or on such earlier date as the President shall determine; but no provision of law terminating any of the functions of the Corporation shall be construed (1) to prohibit disbursement of funds on purchases of securities and obliga-tions, on loans, or on commitments or agreements to make such purchases or loans, made under this section prior to the close of business on June 30, 1941, or such earlier date, or (2) to affect the validity or performance of any agreement to participate in any purchase or loan authorized by this section.

"Nothing in this section shall be construed to authorize the Corporation (1) to purchase, or to make any commitment or agreement to purchase, any securities or obligations of any railroad engaged in interstate commerce, the obligations of which may be purchased or guaranteed by the Corporation under section 5 of this act only with the approval of the Interstate Commerce Commission, or (2) to make any loan, or any commitment or agreement to make a loan, to any such railroad or to any receiver or trustee thereof."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from New York. Mr. MEAD. Mr. President, I shall ask the Senate to determine by vote whether or not this amendment is to be approved. I make that statement because this is a subject which has been considered by the Banking and Currency Committee.

We are all familiar with the observations which have been made by the Chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation Board; and the amendment, in the estimation of some of its critics, makes no change so far as existing law is concerned but merely writes in bolder detail the fact that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation shall have authority to guarantee or insure loans through banks, lending agencies, and so forth.

Mr. President, the amendment amends the Reconstruction Finance Corporation Act purposely to establish the principle of guaranteeing and insuring loans. That principle has been contained in the legislation which I have fostered for the past two or three sessions of Congress. That principle is contained in bills presented by other Members of this body, including the Senator from Florida [Mr. Pepper] and the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. Logan], as well as by Members of the House of Representatives. The principle for which they have been striving-the principle of which I seek ultimate approval by the Congress-would make readily available to small enterprises all the credit and capital needs in the proper operation of their business. Of course, all the funds would be guaranteed. All the applications would be sound before they received approval.

Mr. President, much has been said about the attitude of the Chairman of the Federal Reserve Board with regard to this amendment. The amendment is not the so-called Mead bill. It is a minor amendment to existing law. As I have just stated, and now repeat, it is an amendment which would make it possible for the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to establish a system of insured loans; and if the critics of the amendment believe that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation now has the authority to do just that, I hope I shall have their approval. My amendment would be only supplementary. It might be superfluous. Nevertheless, it would be a mandate from Congress to set up a system of insured loans. It might lead to the ultimate adoption of a comprehensive plan which would serve small industry as the F. H. A. serves the construction industry today.

Mr. President, what has been said by the former Chairman of the Federal Reserve Board with regard to this legislation?

I have here a statement by the Honorable Jesse Jones, Federal Works Administrator, after a White House conference held July 19, 1939, which is as follows:

The President today discussed with Senator Wagner, Senator Mead, Jesse Jones, Federal Loan Administrator, and Emil Schram, R. F. C. Chairman, the need and desirability for long-term credit.

All agreed that no effort should be spared to meet legitimate need of small business for working capital and for credit for modernization of plant and equipment.

The President expressed the hope that the R. F. C., under existing law, would continue its efforts to put into effect substantially the substance of the Mead bill, which has for its purpose the insuring of bank loans to small business.

of bank loans to small business.

It was agreed that the R. F. C.'s program of lending, in cooperation with banks—where the R. F. C. usually guarantees the banks against loss on the major part of the loan—is equivalent to the insuring that part of the loan; but that direct authority to insure loans through a new act of Congress would stimulate applications and probably encourage banks to make a greater effort at lending, particularly for modernization and plant improvement, and for longer terms than has heretofore been the practice.

The President suggested that it was important that an educational campaign be conducted to bring home to banks, insurance companies, finance companies, and other lending institutions what the R. F. C. will do in the way of insuring and guaranteeing current and long-term loans to business and to bring home to businessmen, regardless of the size of their business, what their local banks and lending institutions can do to meet their credit needs.

lending institutions can do to meet their credit needs.

That is what Mr. Jones said at the White House conference; that was what was contained in his news release.

Mr. President, the present chief executive officer of the R. F. C. is Mr. Schram, and at that conference he made a statement, which was given to the press and published widely throughout the country. The released account of the White House conference is as follows:

CONFERENCE REGARDING THE MEAD BILL FOR THE INSURANCE OF BANK LOANS TO SMALL BUSINESS

The President discussed with Senator Wagner, Senator Mead, and Mr. Emil Schram, of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, and Mr. Emil Schram, of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, the need and desirability of insuring intermediate and long-term bank loans to small business along the lines suggested in Senator Mean's bill, upon which hearings have been held before the Senate Banking and Currency Committee.

Those present agreed that no effort should be spared to meet the legitimate needs of small business for working capital and for the modernization of plant and equipment.

The President expressed the hope that the R. F. C. under existing law might take steps to put into effect the substance of the Mead scheme for the insurance of bank loans to small business. Mr. Schram agreed that this should be possible with the aid of a few clarifying amendments to section 5d of the R. F. C. Act, which both Senator Wagner and Senator Mean thought could be enacted at this session without much controversy. be enacted at this session without much controversy.

That is what is contained in the amendment which I have sent to the desk.

The President suggested that it was important that an aggressive campaign be conducted not only to bring home to banks, insurance companies, finance companies, and other lending institutions what the R. F. C. will do in the way of insuring intermediate and long-term loans to small business, but to bring home to small-business men what their local banks and lending institutions can do to meet their intermediate and long-term-capital requirements.

The President also expressed the hope that the Senate Banking and Currency Committee, or a subcommittee thereof, during the recess might study the adequacy of the intermediate and long-term-credit facilities available to small business and the need of any further legislation to accomplish the purposes of the Mead bill.

Mr. Schram was widely publicized in connection with that conference and in relation to the statement. I have here from the Buffalo Evening News, which carries the picture of Mr. Schram, a long article in connection with the interview at the White House, and some information with regard to his ideas concerning the operation of the R. F. C .:

Discussing R. F. C. lending activities, of which he has had charge for the past year, Mr. Schram said he thought that the amendments of Senator James M. Mead (Democrat), of Buffalo, to the lending bill, providing for R. F. C. insurance of small-business loans "will he helpful."

MERIT IN MEAD BILL

"We will continue," he said, "to make loans on as liberal a basis as possible. There is merit to the Mead legislation. I do not want people to think there isn't, and take it lightly. Psychologically, it will have an extremely beneficial effect, in my opinion."

In 1935, I believe it was, or perhaps it was in 1937, when the President issued restrictions preventing the R. F. C.

from making loans of this character or any character, there was a lull in the expansion of our economy and shortly thereafter the President issued an Executive order authorizing the R. F. C. again to make loans to business enterprise. During the interim there was introduced what became known as the Glass-Steagall bill, which was an amendment to the then existing R. F. C. Act. The Chairman of the Federal Reserve System made the statement that they already had the authority which was contained in that new proposal, but, nevertheless, even though he repeated the statement that he had the authority, the Congress enacted the Glass-Steagall amendment authorizing the R. F. C. to initiate loans to enterprise, and, under the impetus resulting from the enactment of that bill, the R. F. C. made a mighty contribution to the expansion and enhancement of the Nation's developing economy.

So I believe, Mr. President, along with Mr. Schram and along with Mr. Jones, that the adoption of the amendment which I have offered will do much good, will improve the credit situation for small business, and I hope, in view of the fact that hearings have been held on this subject and that the statement of the head of the R. F. C. and the former head of the R. F. C. are known to all the Members of this body, that the amendment will be adopted.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment offered by the Senator from New York [Mr. MEAD1.

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, the senior Senator from Montana on Saturday offered an amendment which was adopted striking out section 7 of the bill, the section dealing with loans for the purpose of purchasing railroad equipment. The legislative drafting service has called his attention—he is absent and so I am offering the amendment-to several amendments which are necessary to avoid any conflict by reason of the adoption of that amendment. I now offer the amendments

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendments will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 2, line 4, after the comma, insert "and"; and in line 5 strike out "and the Corporation."

On page 4, strike out lines 18 to 23, both inclusive.

On page 11, at the end of line 7, insert "and"; and in lines and 9 strike out "and the Corporation."

On page 15, at the end of line 8, insert "and"; and in lines 9 and 10 strike out "and the Corporation."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection the amendments are agreed to.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator make an explanation of the amendments?

Mr. BARKLEY. The amendments are made necessary because the Senate struck out the section relating to loans for railroad equipment.

Mr. KING. The amendments, then, affect the provision relating to loans for railroad equipment?

Mr. ADAMS. Yes. The amendment of the Senator from Montana struck out section 7 of the bill. There were certain other textual matters in the bill which referred to the section which was stricken out and the amendments are to that part of the text which refers to section 7, which is no longer in the bill.

Mr. KING. The amendments do not cover any other provisions of the bill?

Mr. ADAMS. No.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendments have been agreed to.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I ask the clerk to report an amendment which I offer, and which is on the desk, with respect to making the bonds issued under this bill taxable.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated for the information of the Senate.

The Legislative Clerk. On page 2, between lines 22 and 23, it is proposed to insert the following:

(c) Such notes, debentures, bonds, or other obligations issued to carry out the provisions of this act shall be subject both as to principal and interest to all taxation now or hereafter imposed by the United States, by any Territory, dependency, or possession thereof, or by any State, county, municipality, or local taxing authority, to the same extent as any notes, debentures, bonds, or other obligations which are not tax-exempt are subject to such

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, it is not my purpose at this late hour to indulge in a lengthy discussion of this most important amendment. Under the provisions of this bill these bonds, if and when issued, will be exempt from normal Federal taxation and exempt from local and State taxation.

The purpose of this amendment is to do the very thing the President of the United States said should be done with respect to securities that have heretofore been issued and are tax-exempt.

I call the attention of the Senate to the fact that under the memorandum submitted by the Committee on Banking and Currency it is estimated that the interest rates on the loans which are to be made will be as follows: On a 40-year loan approximately 21/4 percent; on a 30-year loan approximately 21/8 percent; on a 20-year loan 13/4 percent; on a 10-year loan approximately 1 percent.

It is proposed under this legislation that the loaning capacity of the Federal Government, using the tax-free power of the Federal Government to issue these obligations, shall be passed on to those to whom the money will be loaned.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BYRD. I yield.

Mr. CONNALLY. Without expressing any individual opinion, I think it would be a very useful experiment if the Congress would adopt the amendment of the Senator from Virginia so that we could see the market result as between bonds that carry a tax and those that are tax free.

Mr. BYRD. I appreciate the Senator's statement, and I hope that he will vote for the amendment.

Mr. CONNALLY. That would be the only ground on which I would ever vote for it, namely, purely as an ex-

Mr. BYRD. I am glad to get the vote of the Senator from Texas on any ground whatever, just so he votes for the amendment.

The Senator from Michigan [Mr. Brown], the Senator from Virginia, and other Senators have been members of the special committee investigating the question of taxing securities that are now tax-free. It was shown by this investigation that making these securities taxable would only increase the interest rate from 10 to 20 percent. That was the evidence before the committee; so that if this amendment should be adopted, the increase in the interest rate would not be consequential. Let us not forget that these loans are in a different category from other loans that are made for the expenses of the Federal Government, because it is proposed, as I have said, to use the taxing power and the value of the property of the people of the United States to borrow this money and pass it on to those who will make the

On June 24, 1939, Mr. Turner Catledge, one of the most trustworthy correspondents here in Washington, reported in the New York Times regarding the President's press conference with reference to the loan program in this language:

The President discussed the proposal in some detail at his press conference this morning. He expressed the hope then that the securities floated by the various Federal agencies to make up the loan fund would not bear tax-exempt features. He reiterated his previous recommendation that income from all future issues of public bonds bear their share of taxes.

Then, Mr. President, to corroborate that statement contained in the New York Times, I find in an article written by Mr. Felix Cotten, in the Washington Post, the following

The President said at a morning press conference that he hoped securities issued by lending agencies to finance the new program would not be tax-exempt.

Mr. President, some question was raised by the distinguished Senator from Kentucky whether the President was correctly quoted. I have in my hand a verbatim transcript of what the President said at that conference. At his press conference on June 23, 1939, the President was asked if the securities to be issued by the Government under the proposed spending-lending program would be tax-exempt, and to this question he replied:

Oh, I hope not. I don't know what the law on it is. we will get the Congress to make it clear that there will not be any more anywhere.

So, Mr. President, I think the time has come to stop issuing tax-exempt securities. We have the recommendation of the President. Legislation is now pending before the Congress of the United States providing for the taxation of all future issues of bonds attempted to be made tax exempt, and let us not forget that the bonds issued under the terms of the legislation now proposed may extend for 30 years, and will be tax exempt throughout their life.

Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays on the amendment.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, it is very gratifying to me to find that the Senator from Virginia is able to quote the President of the United States, when the Senator can construe in support of his position some statement the President has made.

Mr. BYRD. Does the Senator from Kentucky deny that the President of the United States made that statement?

Mr. BARKLEY. I said the other day that I was not present at the conference and I did not know whether or not he was correctly quoted, but that even if he were correctly quoted, I did not change my position with respect to the particular bonds.

Mr. BYRD. That is not the question I asked the Senator. I asked whether he denied that the President of the United States made the statement that these securities should not be tax-exempt.

Mr. BARKLEY. I neither deny nor affirm. I do not know whether he said it or not.

Mr. BURKE. Will the Senator yield, Mr. President?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield.

Mr. BURKE. Assuming that the President did make the statement, is the Senator from Kentucky able to construe it in any other way than as the Senator from Virginia has construed it?

Mr. BARKLEY. I am not so certain that when the President made that statement-if he made it exactly in the language quoted-he meant to have it apply to all future bond issues, and that all should be dealt with on the same basis.

Mr. President, I think we ought not to deal piecemeal with bond issues, insofar as their taxability is concerned. In other words, I think that when we deal with that subject we should deal with all bonds on the same basis. I realize that there is very keen interest in the question of removing the tax-exempt privilege from bonds issued by the United States. Of course the income from these bonds and all other Government bonds is now taxable so far as surtaxes are concerned. The bonds to be issued will be in the same class with all other Government bonds.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I think the Senator should make himself clear that these bonds will be exempt from all normal Federal taxes and all State and local taxes.

Mr. BARKLEY. When I said they were subject to surtaxes, of course that statement carried with it the assumption that the bonds would be exempt from the normal tax. We all understand that to be true.

Mr. President, as I was about to say, the question of taxexempt securities is one concerning which there is very keen debate throughout the country and in Congress. There is a division of opinion as to whether, without a constitutional amendment, Congress has the power to tax securities, outside of those of the Federal Government. I believe the distinguished Senator from Idaho thinks that while by statute we may tax our own Federal obligations, without a constitutional amendment, on the other hand we cannot tax obligations of States, counties, and municipalities without a constitutional amendment. If my understanding is incorrect, he may correct it.

Mr. President, this discussion brings up the subject of what we should do and what we can do with respect to the taxation of our own obligations. I am of the opinion that, if we ever make the obligations of the Federal Government taxable by States or localities, we should not do so until their obligations are mutually taxable by the Federal Government. We can tax all our own if we wish; but when we deal with Government bonds and undertake to lift from them the exemption which they now enjoy, I think we should deal with the subject comprehensively and should treat all bonds alike and put them on the same basis.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, will the Senator yield once more?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield.

Mr. BYRD. Up to this time such bonds as those proposed have been regarded as an indirect debt of the Corporation, as obligations of the Corporation, and not of the Government.

Mr. BARKLEY. They are still enjoying the same taxexempt privilege that is enjoyed by Government obligations—Liberty bonds and other bonds.

There has been an investigation under the chairmanship of the distinguished Senator from Michigan [Mr. Brown], who has done a very comprehensive, thorough, and capable job up to now, in the investigation and in the partial report which he has made to the Committee on Banking and Currency. All the R. F. C. obligations now outstanding enjoy this tax-exempt privilege, whether or not they were made for the purpose of obtaining money to loan railroads; and a few days ago an argument was made against the section of the bill pertaining to loans to railroads, and it was stated that the bonds issued to obtain money to lend to the railroads would be tax-exempt. Such bonds are already tax-exempt, so far as that is concerned. However, the section providing for loans to railroads has been stricken from the bill.

Obligations which were sold by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation for the purpose of obtaining money to lend to municipalities and States prior to the establishment of the Public Works Administration carry the same sort of tax-exempt privilege, except as to surtaxes. Obligations issued by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to obtain money to lend to business and industry in this country carry the same sort of tax-exempt privilege, except as to surtaxes.

Mr. President, here is a bill for the purpose of providing money by the same process—the issuance of bonds by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation-for States, counties, and municipalities, to enable them to carry out projects heretofore carried out under the P. W. A. In the same way this bill is intended to provide money for rural electrification, and in the same way it is intended to provide money for farm security. The only bonds now provided for under this bill are those to provide funds to take care of farm tenants and farmers who desire to rehabilitate themselves, and farmers who desire to put in electrical apparatus and appliances in order that they may enjoy the modern blessings of electricity. There is also provided $350,000,000 to be advanced to the P. W. A. for the purpose of carrying on projects similar to those which have heretofore been under consideration.

Mr. President, it seems to me that it would be a strange thing for the Senate of the United States to say that the bonds which are to be issued in order to provide funds to enable the farmers to electrify their farms or to enable tenants to buy farms and become landowners or to enable those who are now landowners to protect their homes and themselves, are to be issued under a restriction depriving them of the privileges which other Government bonds enjoy. I may be inclined, and I think I am inclined, to favor the elimination of the tax-exempt privilege from all Federal obligations. I should certainly be in favor of such a procedure if it were mutual, so that we might tax obligations of all other subdivisions of our Government.

However, Mr. President, I am not willing to put into this bill a provision requiring the taxation of these bonds—bonds which are to be for the benefit of American agriculture, in the way of rural electrification and in the way of farm tenancy and rehabilitation—when all other bonds issued for all other purposes, including those issued for the benefit of business, industry, banks, and railroads, still enjoy the taxexempt privilege.

For that reason, and because the whole matter is under discussion and consideration by the Committee on Finance, concerning which a final determination has not yet been reached, I hope that we will not now undertake to deal in this measure with the question of tax exemption, so as to put the bonds to be issued under the proposed law on a more disadvantageous basis than those already issued by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and other governmental agencies, and by the Government itself.

Mr. BURKE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield.

Mr. BURKE. I think there is a great deal of merit in the position of the Senator from Kentucky; these matters should be considered together. But is there not also necessity for giving consideration to the fact that there is a determined drive which may result in early adoption of the general proposal suggested by the Senator from Kentucky, and would it not now be unfortunate, on the eve of the possibility of such a happening, to issue a very large amount of bonds, such as would be issued under the pending measure, even after the paring that has been done in the Senate, and have something like a billion and a half dollars of bonds issued tomorrow, or the next day, or very soon, totally taxexempt, except for surtaxes, since in the very near future Congress might get around to adopting a general provision. and there would be no means at that time of reaching out and taxing this very large issue of bonds at all? It seems to me that is something which should be given consideration.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I do not think the Senator's fears are justified. Of course, no one can tell when Congress will deal with this problem. It may deal with it at the next session. It has been under discussion for years, but we have not yet reached the point where we can deal with it scientifically, to the last ditch, so to speak, because the committee which has been considering the matter has not yet made its final report.

What I am contending for is that when we deal with these Government obligations we ought to deal with them all alike, and not make flesh of one and fowl of another. Certainly we should not put at a disadvantage the facilities we are providing now, largely for agriculture. The Senator from New York facetiously remarked to me the other day that this is largely a farm bill.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield.

Mr. WALSH. Has any estimate been made as to about what increase in the interest rates would be occasioned by classifying bonds of this kind, heretofore tax-exempt, as taxable?

Mr. BARKLEY. The Senator from Michigan has some figures on that, and I will ask him to respond to the question

Mr. BROWN. Mr. President, the testimony of the Treasury experts, and of the experts produced by the Association of States Attorneys General, boiled down to about this statement, that an increase in the interest rate of somewhere between 10 and 20 percent would be occasioned by subjecting these bonds to all Federal and State taxation.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, will the Senator from Kentucky yield?

Mr. BARKLEY. In just a moment. I wish to say, in addition to that, in the same connection, that the bill eliminates all grants. We are eliminating the question of grants altogether. We are not proposing to give anything to anyone. We are proposing to lend. But as a substitute for grants we are proposing a low rate of interest, which will be sufficiently attractive as to enable the corporation to take advantage of these provisions and borrow the money.

If we are to wipe out that advantage by subjecting the bonds to taxes of all kinds, we might as well have continued to make grants, instead of providing this rather Austin Bailey cheaper way of enabling them to borrow money for the same purposes. I yield to the Senator from Ohio.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, in the first place, the bill authorizes bonds of a longer term, I think, than any existing Federal legislation, so that if the bonds are made taxexempt, will they not be out for a longer time?

Mr. BARKLEY. These are indirect obligations, and I suppose the Senator is not treating them differently from the direct obligations of the Federal Government, some of which are long-term, certainly for longer terms, when first issued, than the bonds to be issued.

Mr. TAFT. It seems to me 30 years is the longest term in any outstanding Federal bonds, and this authorizes bonds maturing in 40 years.

Mr. BARKLEY. The R. F. C. is issuing bonds for only 30 years. The obligation of those who borrow under the Rural Electrification Administration, the individual organizations among farmers, are for 40 years, but the R. F. C. is authorized to issue its bonds for 30 years for all these purposes. That means they would have to refund and reissue the bonds at the end of 30 years in order to carry out the remaining 10-year program under which the Farm Security and Rural Electrification Administrations have been able to borrow money for 40 years. So that, so far as the R. F. C. is concerned, the limit is 30 years, and that is not as long as was provided in some of the direct obligations of the Government at the time they were issued. Of course, a good deal of time has elapsed, and it may be that a good many of them may not have a maturity beyond 30 years. But I do not think that affects the real principle involved in the amendment.

Mr. TAFT. Does not the Senator believe that bonds of this sort would usually be held by the banks; and that to a bank in many cases the taxability makes no difference whatever? To most banks of the United States today the taxability of a bond makes no difference.

Mr. BARKLEY. That raises the question whether the taxability of the bonds affects or does not affect the rate of interest. I think it is fairly well settled that it does.

Mr. TAFT. If they are sold to individuals it does. If they are sold to banks, it affects the rate of interest very little, because most banks are not making any income any way. They have so many Government bonds which are nontaxable, and they will not pay a tax on a small additional income of this kind. Their holdings of these bonds would be very small compared with their total holdings.

Mr. BARKLEY. If the amendment is agreed to I am sure that every farmer who borrows any money under the bill, whether for farm tenancy, for rehabilitation, or for rural electrification, will pay more interest than he would if the amendment were not in the measure.

Mr. TAFT. I do not think he would have to, but if he did, I do not think it would be over one-tenth of 1 percent, and I think the value of the protection afforded for many years to come would more than balance that one-tenth of 1 percent on this particular issue of bonds.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment offered by the Senator from Virginia [Mr. Byrd]. The yeas and nays have been ordered, and the clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DAVIS (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the junior Senator from Kentucky [Mr. Logan]. I transfer that pair to the junior Senator from New Jersey [Mr. Barbour] and vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. GUFFEY (when his name was called). I have a pair with the junior Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. Tobey]. I transfer that pair to the senior Senator from Louisiana [Mr. Overton] and vote. I vote "nay." I am not advised how either of these Senators would vote if present and voting.

Mr. HARRISON (when his name was called). Making the same announcement as before with regard to my general pair with the Senator from Oregon [Mr. McNary], I withhold my vote.

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. AUSTIN. I announce the general pair of the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. Wiley] with the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. Green].

The Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. Tobey] would vote "yea" if present.

Mr. MINTON. I announce that the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. REYNOLDS] is detained from the Senate because of a death in his family.

The Senator from Arizona [Mr. ASHURST] is absent because of illness in his family.

The Senator from Arkansas [Mrs. Caraway] and the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. Green] are absent on important public business.

The Senator from Ohio [Mr. Donahey], the Senator from Virginia [Mr. Glass], the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. Logan], and the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. Overton] are unavoidably detained.

The Senator from Arkansas [Mrs. Caraway] has a pair with the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. La Follette]. I am advised that if present and voting, the Senator from Wisconsin would vote "yea." I am not advised how the Senator from Arkansas would vote.

So Mr. Byrd's amendment was agreed to.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Mr. President, I was prepared to send to the desk a new amendment to the bill under discussion. The amendment related to foreign silver. However, I am informed that several of my friends feel that an agreement has been made not to vote again on the subject of my amendment during the discussion of the pending bill. Therefore I am not offering the amendment.

Mr. President, over the week end important and previously undisclosed information has come to my attention relating to the position of the State Department. The junior Senator from Virginia [Mr. Byrd] has inserted in the Record three telegrams from the chairman of the subcommittee [Mr. Glass] whose hearings on my bill, S. 785, were discussed on the Senate floor last Friday. These telegrams not only disclose the attitude of the senior Senator from Virginia, but also disclose that Secretary of State Hull no longer requests delay on consideration of my proposal involving discontinuance of the purchase of foreign silver by the Government. These are most important developments affecting the silver policy.

This disclosure is so significant because, as I stated in the Senate Friday, it was only the belief that the Secretary of State opposed discontinuance of foreign-silver buying which prevented the subcommittee from making the favorable report on my bill which, on July 7, it had convened fully prepared to do. Although the chairman of the subcommittee is not able to be present today, other members of the subcommittee are here to correct me if I misstate the matter when I demonstrate in a moment that a large majority of the subcommittee favored ending the purchase of foreign silver.

Ten Senators, or one-tenth of the Senate, comprise the subcommittee referred to. Of these 10, only 3 last Friday voted against my amendment to end the purchase of foreign silver. Six favored my amendment. That shows how the committee stood. Thus, the committee was 2 to 1 in favor of my amendment. And this was not a partisan position. Only 2 of the 10 members are Republicans.

Not one of the three members of the subcommittee who voted against my amendment last Friday had attended a single one of the hearings on silver, as the record of attendance printed in the hearings proves. I do not criticize those three Senators. But if those three Senators had attended the silver hearings, I have no doubt at all that the entire subcommittee would have been unanimous in condemning the foreign-silver program. I therefore deeply regret that the full subcommittee could not have attended all of the hearings on silver. But on the record which I send to the desk the subcommittee approval of my position is overwhelming.

I ask consent that there be printed in the RECORD at this point a table relating to the vote of the subcommittee's members on my amendment.

There being no objection, the table was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Mr. TOWNSEND. Mr. President, on January 17, 1939, I introduced Senate bill 785, calling for an end to all silver buying, domestic as well as foreign; calling for an embargo on silver imports and for the sale of surplus Government silver, and so forth. That bill was referred to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

My amendment, however, was quite a different proposal. It did not touch domestic silver at all. It did not provide for an embargo on imports. It called for no Government sales of silver. It was very simple. Its sole effect was to withdraw the availability of Government resources for the acquisition of any more of the foreign metal, for compelling reasons thoroughly expounded by witnesses during the hearings on my bill, Senate bill 785. Those hearings, incidentally, were immediately available to any member of the Banking and Currency Committee or of the Senate who wished to consult them. In printed form they were sent to each member of the full committee in the middle of June. Altogether, a thousand copies were printed. I have had a copy placed on each Senator's desk today. I defy any intelligent person to study these hearings and not be convinced that the further purchase of foreign silver is utterly indefensible.

The argument that buying foreign silver makes jobs for Americans has no validity. The war debts made jobs for Americans! The loans of the reckless twenties made jobs for Americans! So what? If buying foreign silver at 35 cents an ounce makes jobs for Americans, buying demonetized and useless foreign silver at $3.50 an ounce would make jobs for 10 times as many Americans! Mr. Marriner S. Eccles stated to the Silver Subcommittee in his excellent testimony against the buying of any more foreign silver—and note that Mr.

Eccles was analyzing this very argument that buying foreign silver makes jobs for Americans (hearings on S. 785, p. 83):

We could take anything that a foreigner might give us that we did not need, for instance, and give him our goods. Now, whether it is silver or some other metal or some other product, we could take it as well as we could take silver, and as a result we would find a foreign market for our goods. Then we could issue money against what we took, whether it happened to be copper or sea shells or what not.

If the purchase of foreign silver is so important in order to furnish jobs for Americans, why has the National Foreign Trade Council in three successive conventions formally passed resolutions opposing it?

The able Senator from North Carolina [Mr. Balley] on June 26 made an able statement on silver and our export trade, and my esteemed colleague from Arizona [Mr. Ashurst] presented an equally effective discussion on the subject the same day.

Some Senators have supposed that because silver had a value abroad in ancient times, it always will have. How much do foreigners esteem silver? Let me read the exact words of Mr. Eccles on this point (hearings on S. 785, p. 81):

Silver is almost useless as an international reserve. * * * Foreign governments and central banks do not want it. * * * the Government [would] suffer heavy losses [if it sold its silver]. * * *

Other experts confirmed Mr. Eccles' testimony on this point (hearings on S. 785, pp. 149 and 8-11).

Mr. Eccles also told your committee:

Silver, of course, is not acceptable by the countries of the world in settlement of international balances (hearings on S. 785, p. 72).

He testified that important silver inflates bank reserves (hearings on S. 785, pp. 72-73, 78). Again I quote:

The tendency is very inflationary.

He added:

To the extent certainly that we buy foreign silver it seems to me to be wholly and totally unnecessary.

Mr. Eccles further testified (hearings on S. 785, p. 82):

We would be no worse off with a foreign loan that does not have to be repaid than by the acquisition of a supply of silver that we cannot sell.

Do not assume that our foreign silver buying is confined to Latin America. Only one-fifth of all the foreign silver we have bought since 1934 has come from Latin America. Most of the imports have come from Asia. Only last week I was reliably informed that 6,000,000 ounces of discarded foreign silver coin were being purchased by the Treasury from a distant nation now at war.

The Commerce Department reports imports of silver during June 1939 from the following non-Latin American sources: Belgium, France, Netherlands, Norway, United Kingdom, Canada, British Malaya, Japan, Philippine Islands, Australia, Yugoslavia, British India, Turkey, Union of South Africa, British South Africa, and others—Commerce Department Release No. 2402 of July 12, 1939.

The silver program has compelled the Treasury, directly or through the open market, to buy silver from foreign belligerents—Chinese silver from Japan, Ethiopian silver from Italy, Spanish silver from Russia, and cast-off bullion and coin from scores of foreign places. As long as the law stands, this compulsion stands. If Germany seizes silver from the church or from minorities tomorrow, the present silver law is there to help the Nazi government.

I say to the Senate that nowhere abroad does the silver standard survive. No Latin American country has the silver standard, and most Latin American countries are not dependent on silver mining. In no country in the world does a government buy silver as we do. We are unique in this request. We are out of step.

We do not need to continue this program in order to trade abroad. We had a very flourishing foreign trade for decades before the purchase of foreign silver was enacted. We traded with Latin America before the silver program ever was dreamt of; and we will trade with Latin America long after the program has become history. Trade is an exchange of useful goods for useful goods. Selling without buying, however, cannot go on indefinitely.

Foreign silver buying, as Mr. Eccles so well put it, is definitely "a one-way street." What I want us to do is to turn around and get clear out of it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time of the Senator from Delaware on the amendment has expired.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I have no desire to discuss the matter which has been the subject of the Senator's address. I have a textual amendment growing out of a conversation between the Senator from Georgia [Mr. George] and myself with respect to certain provisions on page 14 of the bill. I send the amendment to the desk and ask to have it stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated for the information of the Senate.

The CHIEF CLERK. In section 12, page 14, line 19, after the word "thereon" and the comma, it is proposed to strike out down to and including the word "payment" in line 2 on page 15, and to insert in lieu thereof the following:

An appropriation sufficient to cover such difference is hereby authorized to be made annually commencing with the fiscal year 1941, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated; and when any such annual appropriation shall have been made the Secretary of the Treasury shall pay to the Corporation the amount so appropriated.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, in section 12, page 14, the bill provides:

The Secretary of the Treasury and the Federal Loan Administrator shall cause an examination to be made annually of the status of the program of recoverable expenditures for the financing of which notes, debentures, bonds, or other obligations of the Corporation shall have been issued under this Act. Each such examination shall be made as of the last day of December in each year, beginning with December 31, 1940. The Secretary of the Treasury and the Federal Loan Administrator shall submit a report of each such examination to the President and to the Congress. If any such examination discloses that the probable recovery of the cost of all works, projects, or undertakings carried out under this act, and of all loans made to aid in the financing of the same, together with the cash on hand in the special account or accounts of the Corporation provided for by section 4 of this Act, is less than the principal amount of all notes, debentures, bonds, or other obligations issued pursuant to this act, and interest thereon, the Secretary of the Treasury on behalf of the United States shall pay to the Corporation a sum equal to the amount of such difference.

In the following sentence it authorizes such an appropriation; but the draftsman of the bill evidently got the cart before the horse. The amendment which I have offered provides no change in the annual examinations by the Secretary of the Treasury and the Loan Administrator, but provides that when there is a difference between the value of the assets and the amount loaned, an appropriation shall first be authorized by Congress before the Secretary of the Treasury may pay the Corporation the difference. In that connection, of course, the committees and the Congress itself will have an opportunity to investigate the causes of the difference and the whole situation with respect to it. After Congress has gone into the matter and made an appropriation, only then is the Secretary of the Treasury authorized to pay the difference to the Corporation.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield.

Mr. BYRD. As I understand the language, "the Secretary of the Treasury, on behalf of the United States, shall pay to the corporation a sum equal to the amount of such difference" is eliminated.

Mr. BARKLEY. It is eliminated; and the language is changed so as to authorize Congress to make an appropriation; and in the event Congress makes the appropriation the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to make payment.

Mr. BYRD. I am very glad the Senator from Kentucky discovered that error, because I have been calling it to his attention for 3 or 4 days.

Mr. BARKLEY. I appreciate that; and I think the amendment eliminates any difficulty about it. Under the new language the Secretary of the Treasury may make no payment to the corporation involving any such difference until Congress has authorized it.

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. BARKLEY. I yield to the Senator from Georgia.

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, I had notified the Senator from Kentucky that I proposed to offer an amendment striking out the language in this section beginning in line 11. The amendment now offered by the Senator from Kentucky satisfactorily meets the suggestion I had in mind.

Mr. BARKLEY. I thank the Senator.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President-

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield to the Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. BYRNES. The language in the bill was an authorization and not an appropriation. The Senator agrees to that, does he not?

Mr. BARKLEY. Yes; except that the language was confusing in this respect, that the Secretary of the Treasury was authorized to make payment—

Mr. BYRNES. I suggest to the Senator from Kentucky that that language was taken from the language used in the Commodity Credit Corporation Act.

Mr. BARKLEY. Yes.

Mr. BYRNES. It has been construed to be an authorization and not an appropriation.

Mr. BARKLEY. I think the amendment meets that situation, so that it will be an authorization; and based upon that authorization Congress would have to make the appropriation before the Secretary of the Treasury could make payment.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I am very sorry that the purpose which the Senator from Georgia originally had in desiring to strike out all after the word "Congress," in line 11, on page 14, down to and including the word "section" on the next page, has been abandoned, and that he has consented to accept the suggestion which has just been made by the Senator from Kentucky.

The position of the Senator from Kentucky obviously conveys the idea that we are to expect losses and that there is to be a moral obligation upon the part of Congress to meet those losses by making appropriations from the Treasury.

Mr. BARKLEY. I will say to the Senator that there is no difference between the effect of this provision and that which has been carried in all similar laws. Of course, we are all hoping that there may not be a loss, but we all realize that there might be a loss. If the Corporation—by which I mean the Reconstruction Finance Corporation—in providing funds for these activities finds at the end of any year that there has been a loss, it shall report it to the President and to Congress. Congress is then authorized to make an appropriation. It does not have to do so. It can go into all the details of the transaction to determine whether or not there ought to be any payment.

Mr. KING. The Senator is correct in stating that the authorization has been found in some of the acts which have heretofore been enacted. I have recently discovered that the Commodity Credit Corporation invaded the Treasury upon two occasions. The first time, it obtained $100,000,000 to make up the losses which had been sustained; and since then, as I understand, the losses aggregate a very large sum, larger than the former sum. They will have to be paid out of the Treasury of the United States.

So we are following a precedent which, in my opinion, is a bad one, committing the Government of the United States to the payment of losses in the corporations which we are setting up, and which obviously will incur, as corporations in the past have incurred, very large liabilities. I think we ought to have stricken out the entire provision.

Mr. BARKLEY. I will say to the Senator that the matter to which he refers is one which is now pending before the Appropriations Committee. If it does not provide the appropriation it will never be made.

Mr. KING. There is a moral obligation when we authorize such expenditures and say that Congress is authorized to make appropriations. When that authorization is given and expenditures are incurred and losses are sustained, we feel that there is a moral if not a legal obligation on the part of the Congress to make the appropriation.

SEVERAL SENATORS. Vote!

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BARKLEY].

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. DAVIS. Mr. President, I have heretofore voted for all reasonable and necessary congressional appropriations to relieve unemployment. I have done so in good faith and with the hope that some measure of protection might be found in this way for the unemployed. It is now evident that the Government spending program of the past 6 years has left unsolved our major problems of agriculture, industry, transportation, and trade. The spending program has been nothing better than a series of temporary expedients, giving brief periods of aid from year to year. While the Government has been spending private enterprise has grown increasingly weak and dependent. The very life of private and business enterprise is being crushed out in this way. Further attempts to restore confidence by governmental spending of additional billions will defeat their desired purpose. They will destroy rather than create confidence. For these reasons I shall vote against the lending and spending bill

Mr. CAPPER. Mr. President, in spite of the fact that the pending lending-spending bill has been considerably modified, and modified in the right direction, by amendments approved by the Senate, I still find myself constrained to vote against the measure.

This lending-spending bill is wrong in principle, unsound in practice, and deceptive in the governmental bookkeeping policy it proposes to put into effect.

In some respects it still is one of the most dangerous measures Congress has been asked to enact into law.

There is no use trying to gloss the situation over by specious arguments. This bill proposes to continue and, to whatever extent the final act authorizes loans, to enlarge the spending program which has been so largely responsible for these 9 years of Federal Government deficits.

The Government is to lend hundreds of millions, reaching into the billions, to governmental agencies, which will relend to corporations and to individuals at home and abroad for the purpose of spending. By providing loans instead of appropriations, an attempt is made to show that these additional billions of dollars will not be added to the public debt.

This feature of the measure, this double-dealing system of entering the amounts on the books, appeals to me as coming close to dishonest bookkeeping, although I believe it will not fool anyone.

Another dangerous feature of the measure, as it came to us originally, was the inclusion of so many possible beneficiaries, evidently with the intention of compelling Members of Congress to support the measure so that each Member's constituents would be assured of getting his share.

I think the Senate is to be congratulated upon the amendments already adopted. The bill to that extent is not so dangerous as it was when introduced. But the measure still is dangerous, unsound, and, I think, misdirected, even for the objectives sought to be attained. I shall vote against it, and I hope that enough other Senators will do so to end this kind of specious spending-lending legislation for good and all.

At this point, Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD a letter just received from S. R. Cellars, of Chetopa, Kans., who runs a harness and hardware business in Chetopa, in which he protests vigorously against the proposal upon which we are about to vote.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

CHETOPA, KANS., July 28, 1939.

Senator ARTHUR CAPPER, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: When this Congress convened, the papers held out the idea that it was to be an economy Congress: that expenditures were to be curtailed. Instead of that they have gone on spending money like drunken sailors, except that drunken sailors probably do not spend money they haven't got.

There is no more emergency now than there will be 10 years from now, and no more reason for expenditures to exceed revenues now than there will be at any other time. If this generation cannot pay their own way in the world, what does this administration expect the next generation to do? There is ample money in the banks to finance any enterprise under sound business conditions, and I can see no reason for the Government to continue to operate a loan business. No doubt the administration intends to put this money out where it will do the most good-in the 1940 campaign.

The past 6 years has demonstrated that it is just as foolish for a government to try to spend itself into prosperity as it is for an individual. There is little likelihood of any material improvement in business as long as our enormous indebtedness continues to increase.

Over 60 percent of this town is on relief of some kind. Over 60 percent of this town is on relief of some kind. It is almost impossible to hire a man or woman to do a day's work in this town. They do not need to work; the Government is keeping them. They will not grow gardens or can fruits or vegetables. They do not need to; the Government gives them their groceries. All they have to do is to vote right when an election comes around. We hope that some of the men at Washington may forget their political jobs for a little while and give some consideration to the welfare of the country before all the taxpayers have to go on relief. Sincerely.

S. R. CELLARS.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, and was read the third time.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question now is, Shall the bill pass?

Mr. AUSTIN. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Chief Clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DAVIS (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the junior Senator from Kentucky [Mr. Logan]. If that Senator were present, he would vote "yea." I transfer that pair to the junior Senator from New Jersey [Mr. BAR-BOUR], who would vote "nay," and I am entitled to vote. I vote "nav."

Mr. GUFFEY (when his name was called). I have a pair with the junior Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. Tobey], which I transfer to the senior Senator from Arkansas [Mrs. CARAWAY], and will vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. HARRISON (when his name was called). Making the same announcement as before as to my pair with the senior Senator from Oregon [Mr. McNary], I withhold my vote.

Mr. KING (when his name was called). I have a pair with the junior Senator from North Carolina [Mr. REYNolds]. Not knowing how he would vote if present, I withhold my vote.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD (when his name was called). I have a pair with the senior Senator from Virginia [Mr. GLASS]. I am informed that if present he would vote "nay." I have been unable to obtain a transfer, so I withhold my vote. If permitted to vote, I would vote "yea."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. HAYDEN. My colleague the senior Senator from Arizona [Mr. Ashurst] is detained from the Senate on account of illness in his family. If present, he would vote "yea."

Mr. MINTON. I announce that the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. REYNOLDS] is detained from the Senate because of a death in his family.

The Senator from Arkansas [Mrs. Caraway] and the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. GREEN] are absent on important public business.

The Senator from North Carolina [Mr. BAILEY] and the Senator from Ohio [Mr. Donahey] are unavoidably detained. I am advised that, if present and voting, these Senators would vote "nay."

Adama

The Senator from Virginia [Mr. Glass], the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. Logan], and the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. Overton] are unavoidably detained.

The Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. Green] is paired with the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. Wiley], who is unavoidably detained. I am advised that, if present and voting, the Senator from Rhode Island and the Senator from Arkansas would vote "yea." I am not advised how the Senator from Wisconsin would vote.

Mr. AUSTIN. I desire to announce that the Senator from Oregon [Mr. McNary] and the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. Tobey] would, if present, yote "nay."

The result was announced—yeas 52 nays 28, as follows:

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed.

Mr. BYRNES. I move to lay that motion on the table. The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

NOTICE OF CALL OF THE CALENDAR

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, for the benefit of Senators I wish to say that tomorrow we will have a call of the calendar for the consideration of unobjected-to bills.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, does not the Senator wish to consider the possibility of limiting the call to bills which have passed the House of Representatives, with a view to expediting the consideration of some 300 such bills? It would be well, in my opinion, if we should dispose of the House bills on the calendar, and not waste time in calling the Senate bills. I merely suggest that for the consideration of the Senator.

Mr. BARKLEY. I may say to the Senator from Vermont that it may be desirable a little later, before the adjournment, to set aside a call of the calendar for the consideration exclusively of bills which have passed the House, but at this juncture I doubt very much whether it would be advisable to do that. I appreciate the situation to which the Senator has called attention. I think we can attend to that without difficulty.

REGIONAL PLANNING, NORTHERN LAKE STATES (H. DOC. NO. 458)

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the following message from the President of the United States, which was read, and, with the accompanying report, referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry:

To the Congress of the United States:

Exploitation of our resources has created many problems, but none more pressing than in those areas of the United States where a basic resource has been mismanaged and the principal industry has moved or waned, leaving the working population stranded.

The cut-over region in the northern part of the States of Michigan, Minnesota, and Wisconsin was once the scene of a flourishing lumber industry. Today a large section of the population in that area depends for its very existence on public aids, work relief, and security payments. The large expenditures for these purposes in the area have enabled these people to survive, but could not provide a satisfactory permanent solution to their problem.

Members of Congress representing the region appealed some time ago for aid in developing a program to assist the people in the area to find a way of life that would provide opportunity and reasonable security. The problem is now to make the best use of the natural and human resources of the area.

Over a year ago the National Resources Committee began a study of the region, establishing large local committees in order to insure accurate representation and true understanding of the local point of view. Individual reports were prepared by groups representing the cut-over areas in the three States. From these individual reports a summarized version of what is thought to be a feasible program has been developed. This summary constitutes the most recent in the series of regional reports by the National Resources Committee and is entitled "Regional Planning, Part VIII—the Report of the Northern Lakes States Regional Committee."

I am asking that the National Resources Planning Board keep in touch with the regional committee, which sponsored this report, to assist the regional committee in promoting correlation of activities of Federal, State, and local agencies concerned with bringing about the accomplishments desired. I commend the report to your careful study for whatever action may be appropriate.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

THE WHITE HOUSE, July 31, 1939.

EXECUTIVE SESSION

Mr. BARKLEY. I move that the Senate proceed to consider executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business.

EXECUTIVE MESSAGES REFERRED

The President pro tempore laid before the Senate messages from the President of the United States submitting sundry nominations, which were referred to the appropriate committees.

(For nominations this day received, see the end of Senate proceedings.)

EXECUTIVE REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

Mr. McCARRAN, from the Committee on the Judiciary, reported favorably the following nominations:

Harold Maurice Kennedy, of New York, to be United States attorney for the eastern district of New York, vice Michael F. Walsh, resigned; and Campbell E. Beaumont, of California, to be United States district judge for the southern district of California, to fill a position created by the act of Congress of May 31, 1938.

Mr. PITTMAN, from the Committee on the Judiciary, reported favorably the nomination of Harry E. Pratt, of Alaska, to be United States district judge, division No. 4, District of Alaska.

Mr. BURKE, from the Committee on the Judiciary, reported favorably the nomination of Henry L. Dillingham, of Missouri, to be United States marshal for the western district of Missouri.

Mr. HUGHES, from the Committee on the Judiciary, reported favorably the nomination of Charles Stewart Lynch, of Delaware, to be United States attorney for the district of Delaware.

Mr. KING, from the Committee on the Judiciary, reported favorably the nomination of Herman E. Moore, of Illinois, to be judge of the District Court of the Virgin Islands of the United States, vice William H. Hastie, resigned.

Mr. WHEELER, from the Committee on Interstate Commerce, reported favorably the following nominations:

James Lawrence Fly, of Tennessee, to be a member of the Federal Communications Commission for the unexpired portion of the term of 7 years from July 1, 1935, vice Frank R. McNinch, resigned; and Lee M. Eddy, of Missouri, to be a member of the Railroad Retirement Board for a term of 5 years from August 29, 1939 (reappointment).

Mr. McKELLAR, from the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads, reported favorably the nominations of sundry postmasters postmasters.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The reports will be placed on the Executive Calendar.

If there be no further reports of committees, the clerk will state the nominations on the calendar.

WORK PROJECTS ADMINISTRATION

The legislative clerk read the nomination of Denis W. Delaney, of Massachusetts, to be work-project administrator for Massachusetts.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

POSTMASTERS

The legislative clerk proceeded to read sundry nominations of postmasters.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I ask that the nomination of Edward E. Dewey to be postmaster at Decatur, Ark., go over. With that exception, I ask that the remaining nominations of postmasters on the calendar be confirmed en bloc.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, with the exception of the nomination noted, the nominations of the postmasters are confirmed en bloc.

That completes the calendar.

ADJOURNMENT

Mr. BARKLEY. As in legislative session, I move that the Senate adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 6 o'clock and 18 minutes p. m.), the Senate adjourned until tomorrow, Tuesday, August 1, 1939, at 12 o'clock meridian.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

MONDAY, JULY 31, 1939

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Reverend Bernard Braskamp, D. D., pastor of the Gunton-Temple Presbyterian Church, Washington, D. C., offered the following prayer:

Almighty God, our Father, whose guiding intelligence is the supreme need of our minds for the solution of life's problems, we pray that Thou wilt be present and favorable unto Thy servants as they seek Thy will in facing the duties and responsibilities of another day.

Enrich our hearts with those virtues whereby Thou and Thy will art known and may we have within us the testimony that we are numbered among those who do justly, love mercy, and walk humbly with God.

May men and nations be drawn together in one high and holy aspiration to know and to do Thy will more perfectly, for Thy ways are ways of pleasantness and Thy paths are paths of peace.

Hasten that blessed day when we shall be one in spirit with Him, who said, "Thy will be done." To Thy name, through Christ our Lord, shall be all the glory. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of Saturday, July 29, 1939, was read and approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Frazier, its legislative Clerk, announced that the Senate agrees to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the House to the bill (S. 1558) entitled "An act to provide for the acceptance of an easement with respect to certain lands in New Mexico, and for other purposes."

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi?

There was no objection.

EXTENSION OF THE CIVIL SERVICE

Mr. REES of Kansas. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kansas?

There was no objection.

Mr. REES of Kansas. Mr. Speaker, I have asked unanimous consent to address the House for the purpose of directing your attention to H. R. 960, a so-called civil-service bill, which has been recommended for passage.

This bill gives the President power to place approximately 300,000 politically appointed Federal employees under civil service. The only requirement is that they take noncompetitive examinations. If they make grades of 70 or more, they are then entitled to all the rights and privileges granted to civil-service employees who passed a competitive examination. Mind you, if they do not pass the examination with at least a grade of 70, they are not discharged from their jobs but permitted to retain them, except that they do not attain civil-service status. Stenographers, clerks, and other employees who have been working 6 months and receive a grade of 70 in a noncompetitive examination can hold their jobs, even though there are eligible registers for such positions, with thousands of names of persons who made a higher grade in a competitive examination.

It is my contention that the policy is unsound, and this procedure is unfair and unwarranted. I do not contend that all of these 300,000 employees are not qualified for the jobs they are holding. The fact remains that they secured the positions, whether qualified or not, principally because of their political affiliations. Under this measure, you are giving them the same rights, the same privileges, and the same status as those persons who secured their jobs under a competitive civil-service merit system.

The big question involved is whether or not you believe this Government should maintain and improve a competitive civil-service merit system, or whether you think these thousands of employees, who knew when they received their appointments that they were more or less temporary, should, by one stroke of the pen, be given permanent status and position, together with all the advantages provided under our civil-service merit system.

These employees, of course, would be entitled to the benefits of the retirement system. Not only that, but, by making contribution to the Federal Government, they are entitled to these benefits accrued since they were employed.

The sponsors of this bill will tell you that other administrations have blanketed-in employees without competitive civil-service examinations. But let me suggest right here and now that this blanketing-in of 300,000 positions, principally typists, stenographers, clerks, and similar jobs, is unprecedented. It is unwarranted.

I have directed your attention to the unfairness of this bill as it applies to the employee who secured his job under a competitive examination. When you pass this measure you not only blanket-in the present encumbent in his job, and you not only place him on the same status as the fellow who has held his job through the years by reason of a competitive examination, but you give this new man or woman the right to be transferred to some other civil-service position. In the event the employees coming under this bill should lose their jobs because their positions are later eliminated, they would have the same right to seek appointments under the civil-service law as any person who had qualified under a competitive civil-service examination.

Let us review the situation. In March 1933 there were 563,000 Federal employees, outside of the Army, Navy, and Diplomatic Service. Eighty-three percent of them were under civil service. In the last 6 years that number has increased to approximately 900,000. Three hundred thousand, or practically one-third of them, are not under civil service. Almost all of the 300,000 employees secured their jobs by political patronage. After we have built up a big patronage system, we are making the positions permanent under the guise of civil service.

Congress deliberately exempted these jobs from civil-service regulations when it created the many new bureaus and commissions which have come into being during the past 6 years. Today Congress is asked to right about face. After having appointed all these people to these jobs, we say to them that after all, they should have been, and are now, entitled to civil-service status. Then we go further, and exempt them from competitive examinations.

Do you think, as you sit here this afternoon, that because Congress made the mistake of excluding these 300,000 employees from competitive civil-service requirements, and gave them their jobs under political preference, that you should write into law an authorization giving these political appointees a preference against the thousands on the outside who are entitled to compete for the positions? Do you think it is fair to those persons who have earned their jobs by competitive civil-service examinations that these people should be placed on the same basis and receive the same benefits?

Last week this Congress determined that people holding patronage appointments should not take an active part in the election of persons to political office. Congress banned these 300,000 employees from political activity, and now we give them the blessing of civil-service status for the remainder of their lives. This is manifestly unfair to those now holding jobs under a civil-service merit system. It certainly is unfair to the thousands of persons throughout our country who have a right to compete for Government positions.

In other words, if you believe in a fair competitive system, and if you believe in securing the most competent employee to fill a position, you certainly are not in favor of this bill. If you believe that a man or woman who has fitted himself or herself for any one of these positions is entitled to an even break, you cannot support this measure.

You will be told that competitive examinations would disrupt the service; that the task is too complicated, too much time would be needed, if competitive examinations are required; and that such examinations would be expensive.

There can be no occasion for disruption of the service when positions are filled by persons who have shown themselves, under a competitive test, to be better qualified than those who are holding the positions at this time. The person now employed would compete with those on the outside, and certainly if somebody from the outside shows herself or himself to be more competent, their employment would not interfere with efficient service.

On the contrary, it would promote efficiency. Furthermore, the person now holding the job has the distinct advantage of experience. If he does not prove himself to be better qualified, in view of his experience, than the outsider competing against him—he certainly is not entitled to the job. The man or woman now holding such a job should be willing to take a competitive examination along with the person on the outside. If he or she receives a higher grade, good and well. If not, then his right to that position should be relinquished to the person who shows himself more competent and qualified to fill it.

It has been said that it would be unfortunate for these patronage employees to be turned out of their jobs. That would not be as discouraging as to have thousands of competent persons—who might be better qualified for the places and who are only asking for an even break—to be barred from even having a chance to compete for them.

Certainly it would take some time to put into effect a competitive civil-service system involving so many jobs—but the sponsors of this bill state that it will take 1 to 2 years under the noncompetitive plan. There could be no possible impairment in the Government service, even if an extra year were required to establish a competitive system, provided the personnel is improved and the efficiency of the services increased. There is no reason, in my opinion, why sufficient time should not be taken to conduct competitive examinations. Our first consideration should be given to securing the best type of service. The competitive merit system is the one way to secure it.

What has come over Congress—with this great wave of reformation—especially in the closing days of the session? Why the hurry all at once, after these people have held these jobs from 2 to 4 years?

The proponents of this measure would have you believe that to conduct such competitive examinations would be extremely complicated. The fact remains that most of the employees covered under this bill are stenographers, typists, and people holding various kinds of clerical positions similar to those now held by persons who secured their jobs under a competitive system. As a matter of fact, nearly all the examinations required to fill these positions would be similar to other civil-service examinations which are now being given and for which eligible registers have been established.

A great deal has been said about the expense of giving competitive examinations. They should not be extremely expensive. Civil-service examinations which are expensive are those to fill highly technical positions. There are only a comparatively few of such jobs involved under this measure, as nearly as I can learn. I have tried to obtain accurate information from some of the departments of Government as to the classification of these positions, but they continue to tell me that this information is not available. If it is necessary, in the interests of efficiency of Government, I know that this Congress would be reasonable in its appropriation of additional funds to the Civil Service Commission. If given a little extra time, it should not require a great deal more than is being appropriated at this time.

I realize that a competitive-examination plan would cost a little more money. I do not know how much, but do not believe the additional cost would be great if properly handled. You and I know that the Civil Service Commission is conducting examinations right along for the same kinds of jobs as are involved and included under this bill. Then why is it not possible for the Commission to take these jobs into consideration and go ahead and hold competitive examinations for them? If the Civil Service Commission feels that the incumbent is entitled to some credit for experience in the position, good and well, he can be given a certain credit. But let us give the hundreds of thousands of people who have qualified themselves to hold such positions a chance to compete with the fellow who got his place principally because of his party pull. I just cannot see any objections to that sort of policy.

I just do not believe this House realizes what it is doing if it approves this legislation. It is an important matter. You are going to put it across—largely on political grounds. You have given 300,000 people jobs by political patronage, and you are going to approve a measure which provides that they are now entitled to hold their positions in the same manner as if they had earned them in the first place, and that others shall not have a chance to apply for these positions even though they may be better qualified, more capable, and deserving.

Remember this, too, that this group that you are freezing into civil service will be given a distinct advantage over those who have taken competitive examinations and whose names are now on the eligible lists.

The purpose of this bill is diametrically opposed to the basic principles that are essential to a real merit system. The purpose of the Civil Service Act is to provide open competition for all applicants for Government employment, and provides that they earn a right to these positions by securing grades higher than their competitors. Competitive examinations are democratic in principle and give all qualified applicants a fair chance for Government employment. Furthermore, those who are not qualified can and should be eliminated under a competitive merit system.

This bill is not in the best interests of the principles of a competitive civil-service merit system. It does not promote efficiency in the affairs of Government. It certainly is undemocratic and ought to be defeated. I believe that competitive examinations are efficient and economical in selecting qualified personnel for carrying on the business of our Government. I believe that under our democratic system of government, if we are going to maintain a civil-service merit system, the public is entitled, to the very fullest extent, to the opportunity of competing for Government positions.

We have done so many things in the name of emergency during the past few years. This is one more step under that excuse. I am in favor of a competitive civil-service merit system. I think you are. This measure is lip service—nothing more. [Applause.]

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, briefly answering the gentleman who has just preceded me, when he states that the bill, H. R. 960, is undemocratic, I want to call the gentleman's attention to the fact that when the Republican Party was in power it was their policy to pass legislation of this kind, and if it is undemocratic, the precedent was established by the Republican Party. I feel that the Republican Party established a very good precedent for the House to follow. Certainly there is nothing undemocratic about it. So far as I am concerned, I think it is a mighty good bill, and I hope it is taken up at this session and passed. [Applause.]

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mrs. NORTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the Record and to include therein a speech delivered by myself over the National Broadcasting System.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from New Jersey?

There was no objection.

Mr. GOSSETT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the Record and to include therein an address on Americanism and International Law by Dr. C. D. Judd, head of the department of government, Texas State College for Women, Denton, Tex.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

Mr. ELSTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the Record and to include therein two radio addresses by the junior Senator from Ohio, Hon. ROBERT A. TAFT.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

Mr. SPRINGER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD and to include therein two editorials appearing in the Cincinnati Enquirer of July 27, 1939.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. SHAFER of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the Record and to include an address made Saturday at Sunbury, Pa.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. SHAFER of Michigan. Also, Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the Record and to include therein a short editorial from the Detroit Free Press.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. ANGELL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the Record and to include a short editorial from the Portland Oregonian.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. ANGELL. Also, Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the Record and to include an article appearing in the Washington Post of yesterday on Britain and Japan.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

PUBLIC UTILITIES

Mr. RICH rose.

The SPEAKER. For what purpose does the gentleman from Pennsylvania rise?

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, we heard a few moments ago the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. Rankin] tell about the great good we would receive if we had a copy of a certain book published with reference to public utilities. If the gentleman from Mississippi is so anxious that we have that knowledge, it seems to me that he ought to provide each Member of Congress with one of those books. However, I call attention to the fact that if we continue to put the Government in business, as the gentleman from Mississippi evidently desires, we better consider the fact that we have already gone in the red over $40,000,000,000, twentyone billions of which debt were incurred during this administration because this administration has put the Government in business in every form; and if we continue to put the Government in business, where are we going to get the money to run the Government? It will be ruination to our Nation and ruination to individual people in the country at large, for they will not be able to continue in business under this socialistic form of government. I say get the Government out of business. Mr. Roosevelt recognized Russia and now he is trying to pattern after them. Will it ever stop? Let us hope so.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Pennsylvania has expired.

JOHN L. LEWIS

Mr. HOFFMAN rose.

The SPEAKER. For what purpose does the gentleman from Michigan rise?

Mr. HOFFMAN. The usual request, to proceed for 1 minute, and to extend and revise my remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

RADICAL AND OFTEN-ARRESTED ORGANIZER SENT BY JOHN L. LEWIS TO AID IN STRIKES AGAINST PACKING INDUSTRY

Mr. HOFFMAN. Mr. Speaker, the July 26, 1939, Daily Times of Chicago carries this item:

The C. I. O.'s chief trouble shooter, Powers Hapgood, arrived in Chicago today as John L. Lewis' personal emissary to the C. I. O.'s packing-house union in their threatened strike against Armour & Co.

Hapgood is the man who appeared on the scene shortly before the big strikes in the shoe, automobile, and steel industries. It might be well to know something about this personal representative of Lewis. Let us have Lewis' words for it. At the Indianapolis convention in 1930, of Powers Hapgood and two others, Lewis said that they were—

Fakirs, repudiated leaders, traitors to the unions, opportunists and purveyors of every falsehood, slander, and deception.

Lewis' United Mine Workers Journal of May 1, 1928, made the statement that the leadership of Brophy, Patrick Toohey, and Hapgood and a few others had been—Doing its dirtiest to capture the United Mine Workers and to transform this splendid union into a Communist organization.

Yet Lewis is sending to represent him in his effort to get a closed shop in the packing industry a man whose activities so often in the past have been followed by violence and bloodshed, a man he not long ago described as a purveyor of every falsehood, slander, and deception.

That is the kind of a man, so described by Lewis himself, that he sent as his personal representative to represent him in the dispute with the packing industry in Chicago.

The local morning papers carry the information that the C. I. O. is trying to enforce a closed shop in the cafeterias maintained in Federal buildings. If Lewis can enforce his demands that to work in a Federal building one must join his union and pay his fee, he is getting too close to Congressmen and Senators for comfort. If patriotism will not move us to curb his activities, perhaps self-preservation will stir us to action. Shall we sit here until he establishes the closed-shop rule over Senators and Congressmen, requires us not only to sign on the dotted line but to kick in whatever fee he may name for the privilege of being elected in our respective districts? Think it over, Members of the House.

EDUCATION

Mr. WHELCHEL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. WHELCHEL. Mr. Speaker, it has never been my purpose to unnecessarily bring worries to this Congress that could be solved otherwise, but the condition of the schools in my own State, Georgia, is such a deplorable one, because of the neglect of those in power to provide the necessary funds, that it brings to my mind the real necessity for legislation by this Congress, and before it adjourns, that will equalize educational opportunities for the Nation as a whole. My information is that in some States there is not sufficient money that can be made available for adequate school facilities; however, in my State, as I have previously said, it is due to the neglect of those who are in power to provide funds, but in either event, it convinces me that the educational problem of our Nation is a most important one and should be given immediate consideration.

From the most authentic information obtainable, there will be dropped from the accredited list 157 Georgia high schools this year due to the fact that they have not operated the required number of days, all of which is brought about by failure to provide funds. There is now due an amount of $3,911,000 to the teachers of Georgia, which is most shameful, and I repeat that when a State, either by the neglect of those in power, or its own helplessness, fails to provide the necessary funds for operating its schools the full school year, it then becomes a Federal problem, and should be dealt with accordingly. The bill to which I refer is H. R. 3517. There is a companion bill in the Senate on which hearings were held, and it was reported favorably by the Committee on Education. I make no criticism of either the Senate or the House Education Committees as it was not necessary for both to hold hearings and it would be a duplication of expense, and so forth, but I do think that it is high time that this matter should be made a reality. It was of such grave concern to our great President that in the year 1936 he appointed a committee, numbering 21, to study this problem and their recommendation is as embodied in bills now before the respective bodies of this Congress.

On page 3 of H. R. 3517 is the statement of policies which this legislation would, if enacted, put into force, and I quote you as follows: "It is the primary purpose of this act to assist in equalizing educational opportunities, among and within the States, insofar as the grants-in-aid to the States herein authorized will permit, without Federal control over the educational policies of States and localities. The provisions of this act shall therefore be so construed as to maintain local and State initiative and responsibility in the conduct of education and to reserve explicity to the States and their local subdivisions the administration of schools, including institutions for the preparation of teachers, the control over the processes of education, the control and determination of curricula of the schools, the methods of instruction to be employed by them, the selection of personnel employed by the State and its agencies and local school jurisdictions, and insofar as consistent with the purposes for which funds are made available under this act the determination of the best uses of the funds appropriated under this act."

I, therefore, feel that this Congress should not adjourn without this bill being enacted into law, to correct the inadequacies to which I refer. In my opinion, more is required for the preparation of teachers, both time and money, for the compensation they receive, and the amount of work they are required to do, than any other group of people on earth.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

Mr. CROSSER. Mr. Speaker, on account of the serious illness in his family, I ask unanimous consent for indefinite leave of absence for my colleague [Mr. Sweeney].

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

Mr. FLAHERTY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. FLAHERTY. Mr. Speaker, in offering an amendment to the Smith bill last Saturday, in my explanation I made the statement that I was of the opinion that the author of the bill was in accord with my amendment. I was somewhat surprised when the vote was taken on this amendment to find that the author of the bill stood up in opposition to it. In asking for an explanation of his position later on he explained to me that he had forgotten about the discussion I had with the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Casey] and himself on the proposal. It was an innocent misunderstanding on his part, I am sure, because of the tremendous activity of his legislative business and the minor nature of this amendment. However, I wanted to be fair with the Members of the House and to explain that it is not my intention at any time to make a misstatement here or to misinform my colleagues. I hope that this is an explanation for the statement I made at that time, for any Member who may have had any doubt as to the accurracy of my remarks on Saturday.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Hoffman] is very much interested in the people of Chicago, and I am grateful to him, because I am more interested in them than he could possiby be. But I feel we do not need his aid or assistance. We have a splendid and efficient administration. It is a Democratic administration in the State as well as in the city, and we can handle our affairs without any aid from him.

As to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Rich], who is fearful that the Government is encroaching on private business, I want to say that private business has increased under the Democratic administration by 300 percent; that greater profits are being made by industry in 1938 and 1939 than they made in the Republican inflation period of 1928 and 1929

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SABATH. Later on I will yield.

Mr. RICH. Tell us about the 11,000,000 unemployed.

Mr. SABATH. It is due to the Republican misrule of this Government of ours for 12 long years. If the Republicans would cooperate with us now we would not have any unemployed. The trouble is they are trying to do everything they can to prevent reemployment in order to try and make a campaign issue for next year. They want to keep people suffering, instead of helping us to restore prosperity, in the hopes they can fool the people into voting Republican. [Applause.]

CONSENT CALENDAR

The SPEAKER. Under previous order of the House, the Consent Calendar is in order today. The Clerk will call the first bill on the Consent Calendar.

WAPATO SCHOOL DISTRICT NO. 54, YAKIMA COUNTY, WASH.

The Clerk called the first bill on the Consent Calendar (H. R. 3824) to provide funds for cooperation with Wapato School District No. 54, Yakima County, Wash., for extension of public-school buildings to be available for Indian children of the Yakima Reservation.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that this bill be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

QUINAIELT RESERVATION, STATE OF WASHINGTON

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 2654, authorizing the payment of necessary expenses incurred by certain Indians allotted on the Quinaielt Reservation, State of Washington. The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. WOLCOTT and Mr. LEAVY asked unanimous consent that the bill be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

CONVEYING CERTAIN PROPERTY TO WASHINGTON COUNTY, UTAH The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 2184, to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to convey certain property to Washington County, Utah, and for other purposes. There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior, in his discretion, is hereby authorized to convey, by quitclaim deed, to Washington County, Utah, or the authorized agents or representatives of said county, certain land and the improvements thereon, said land being described as follows:

SALT LAKE MERIDIAN

A part of lot 1 in block 9, and a part of lot 2 in block 3, of Rock-ville Townsite Survey, described as follows: Beginning at the south-east corner of said lot 2 in block 3, which point is approximately north 639 feet and west 923 feet from the southeast corner of section 1, township 42 south, range 11 west, and running thence north 30 feet, thence west 80 feet, thence south 325 feet, thence east 80 feet, thence north 295 feet to the place of beginning, containing 26,000 square feet, more or less.

The bill was ordered to be engrosseed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

TRANSFERRING LANDS FROM SIERRA NATIONAL FOREST TO YOSEMITE NATIONAL PARK, CALIF.

Mr. RICH. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the gentleman from California what this bill is intended to do?

Mr. CHURCH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that this bill be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

RAILROADS IN THE TERRITORY OF ALASKA

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 4868, to amend the act authorizing the President of the United States to locate, construct, and operate railroads in the Territory of Alaska, and for other purposes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that this bill be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

AUTHORIZING UNITED STATES INDIAN SERVICE OFFICERS TO MAKE ARRESTS

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 5409, to authorize certain officers of the United States Indian Service to make arrests in certain cases, and for other purposes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that this bill be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from South Dakota?

There was no objection.

COLUMBIAN FOUNTAIN IN WASHINGTON, D. C.

The Clerk called the next business, House Joint Resolution 159, authorizing the selection of a site and the erection thereon of the Columbian Fountain in Washington, D. C.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the joint resolution, as follows:

Resolved, etc., That authority is hereby granted to any association organized within 2 years from date of approval of this joint resolution for that purpose to erect the Columbian Fountain on resolution for that purpose to erect the Columbian Fountain on an appropriate site on grounds now owned by the United States in the District of Columbia other than those of the Capitol or the Library of Congress. The location of said fountain and the plan for the development of the site shall be submitted to the Commission of Fine Arts and the National Capital Park and Planning Commission for advisory assistance and the construction shall be under the direction of the Director of the National Park Service, Department of the Interior: Provided, That the United States shall be put to no expense in or by the erection of said fountain and that unless funds, which in the estimation of the Secretary of the Interior are sufficient to insure the completion of the fountain, are certified available, and the erection of this fountain begun within 5 years from and after the passage of this joint resolution, the authorization hereby granted is revoked.

Mr. COSTELLO. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment. The Clerk read as follows:

MAJOR GENERAL WILLIAM JENKINS WORTH MEMORIAL COMMISSION

The Clerk called the next business, House Joint Resolution 283, to establish the Major General William Jenkins Worth Memorial Commission to formulate plans for the construction of a permanent memorial to the memory of Maj. Gen. William Jenkins Worth.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the joint resolution, as follows:

Whereas the people of the United States owe a deep debt of gratitude to Maj. Gen. William Jenkins Worth, whose military career meant so much during the Mexican War and the Seminole Indian War, and whose activities in the said Indian war succeeded in opening up such a large tract of land in the South now known as the State of Florida; and

Whereas no adequate memorial exists in the State of Florida; and Whereas it would seem appropriate and fitting to erect a memorial to said Maj. Gen. William Jenkins Worth in said State on the shores of the lake located therein named after said general and at or near the city of Lake Worth located on the shores of said lake: Therefore be it Resolved, etc., That there is hereby established a commission, to be known as the Major General William Jenkins Worth Commission and to be composed of six commissioners, two to be appointed by the President of the United States, two Senators to be appointed by the President of the Senate, and two Members of the House of Representatives to be appointed by the Speaker of the House. Such Commission shall consider and formulate plans for designing and constructing a permanent memorial in the city of Lake Worth, Fla., to the said Maj. Gen. William Jenkins Worth.

SEC. 2. Such commission may, in its discretion, accept from any source, public or private, money, obligations, or property to be used for the purpose of making surveys and investigations, formulating, preparing, and considering plans for the construction of such memorial, or other expenses incurred, or to be incurred, in carrying out the provisions of this joint resolution.

SEC. 3. The commission shall report its recommendations to Congress as soon as practicable.

Mr. COSTELLO. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Costello: Strike out the preamble.

DISPOSITION OF CERTAIN KLAMATH INDIAN TRIBAL FUNDS

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 2738, providing for the disposition of certain Klamath Indian tribal funds.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I have four amendments to make the amended bill conform to the recommendations of the Department of the Interior and the Bureau of the Budget. As far as I am concerned, if those interested in the bill desire to accept the amendments, I am willing to let the bill pass.

Mr. PIERCE of Oregon. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman

Mr. COCHRAN. I yield.

Mr. PIERCE of Oregon. We accept the amendments.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to distribute pro rata to all of the enrolled members of the Klamath and Modoc Tribes and Yahooskin Band of Snake Indians living on the date of the enactment of this act the unexpended balance of the judgment rendered against the United States in the United States Court of Claims in case No. E-346 in favor of said tribes and band of Indians, and appropriated E-346 in favor of said tribes and band of Indians, and appropriated by Public Law No. 723 of the Seventy-fifth Congress, and placed to the credit of said tribes and band of Indians in the Treasury of the United States, together with interest thereon as provided by existing law to the date of the distribution herein provided for: Provided, however, That said moneys shall be deposited to the credit of said enrolled members of said tribes and band in their individual Indian money accounts and disbursed under the regulation governing paymoney accounts and disbursed under the regulation governing payments from said accounts, approved by the Secretary of the Interior, for (1) dental, medical, surgical, and hospital treatment, including nurses' services; (2) education, including tuition, subsistence, and other expenses; (3) support of aged and incapacitated enrolled members of said tribes and band of Indians; (4) industrial and agricultural assistance; (5) purchase of land; and (6) construction, repair, and improvement of homes and buildings.

With the following committee amendment:

Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert the following: "That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed, from the judgment fund of the Klamath and Modoc Tribes and Yahooskin Band of Snake Indians created as the result of the passage of the act of June 25, 1938, and accrued interest thereon, to credit the sum of $2,000 upon the books of the Office of Indian Affairs, to each person determined by the Secretary of the Interior to be entitled to enrollment upon the annuity roll of said tribes of the Klamath Reservation, Oreg., living upon the date of the enactment of this act. The share of each adult member and not to exceed $1,500 of the share of any minor shall be available for expenditure, under such rules and regulations as the Secretary of the Interior may prescribe, for the following purposes: "Purchase of land; improvement of lands acquired or already "Purchase of land; improvement of lands acquired or already held by the Indian; erection and improvement of suitable homes; repayment of any loans received from the United States or from the Klamath tribal funds; purchase of building material, farming equipment, livestock, feed, food, seed, grain, tools, machinery, implements, household goods, bedding, clothing, and any other equipment or supplies necessary to enable the Indians to fit themselves for or to engage in farming, livestock, industry, or such other pursuits or vocations, including education, as will enable them to become self-supporting; and health purposes: Provided, however, That the funds of the aged, infirm, decrepit, and incapacitated members, and of minors, may be used for their proper maintenance and support. The remainder of the share of each minor Indian shall be held intact until such Indian reaches his majority, when it, together with interest at the rate of 4 percent per annum, shall be available for expenditure for the purposes specified herein.

As herein used, the term "minor" shall include all members of the tribe less than 21 years of age, except that minors 18 years of age or over and who are married or have families of their own to support, shall be regarded as adults. On the death of any enrolled member, adult, or minor, the sum on deposit to his credit shall be distributed as personal property, and shall be available for expenditure by the distributees only for the purposes herein authorized: Provided, however, That of the aforesaid $2,000 to be prorated to each person, $100 shall be paid to each member of said tribes as a per capita payment, free from the aforesaid restrictions, under rules and regulations prescribed by the Secretary of the Interior.

"SEC. 2. That after the segregation provided for in section 1 hereof shall have been made, the remainder of such judgment fund, including interest, shall be available for expenditure subject to the following limitations and conditions:

"SEC. 3. That in no event shall any portion of the said judgment fund become liable, payable, or subject to any debt or debts contracted prior to the passage of this act by any Indian of the Klamath Tribe except debts to the United States or to the tribe, and in no event shall any portion of the Klamath judgment fund or interest thereon be expended to defray the cost of Federal administration."

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Speaker, I offer four amendments to the committee amendment, and ask unanimous consent that they be considered en bloc.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendments offered by Mr. Cochran: Page 5, line 5, after the word "any", strike out the word "unobligated."

Page 5, lines 6 and 7, strike out the words "except the capital-reserve fund set forth in subsection (c) hereof."

Page 5, beginning in line 12 with the word "no", strike out all down to and including the word "accordingly" in line 21.

Page 6, line 2, after the word "tribe", insert a period and strike out the remaining language of lines 2, 3, and 4.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Speaker, nearly $5,000,000 is involved in this legislation. The money has been appropriated by the Congress, is in the Treasury, and, as the lawyers who participated have received their fees, amounting to about $500,000, there is no reason why the Indians should not get their money, provided it is disbursed as recommended by the Secretary of the Interior and the Director of the Budget.

Two weeks or more ago we passed the bill which enabled the Shoshone Tribe to receive the money awarded by the Court of Claims. In that case the amount, using round numbers, was about the same both for the Indians and the attorneys. The same issue is involved in both bills.

Mr. Speaker, I again impress upon Members of the House that this money in both cases was awarded as a result of the Congress amending the original Jurisdictional Act in such a way that the Government had practically no defense. The court in both cases awarded a little less than $2,000,000 as principal, and the balance was interest dating back over 50 years. As the court also held interest at the rate of 5 percent was to run on the principal until paid, the amount to meet the obligation was carried in the last deficiency bill of the Seventy-fifth Congress. Within 2 months thereafter the attorneys claimed and received over $400,000 in each case. At the start of the session I placed the exact amounts and the names of the attorneys in the RECORD.

Had the Congress not placed the Government in the position it did by amending the original Jurisdictional Act this legislation would not be here today nor would we have been required to appropriate nearly $10,000,000 in the last Congress. I have been making the argument for years that to amend the Jurisdictional Acts we simply are paving the way for hands to go into the Treasury, and, at the expense of the taxpayers, pay large sums on these Indian claims, some of them dating back well over 100 years.

In view of the fees in these cases, naturally the attorneys never want to close the cases. Strange as it may seem, it is not the attorneys that prepare the evidence but the Government. Under the procedure, when the General Accounting Office completes its investigation of the records and submits its report to the Department of Justice charged with defending the Government in the suits the attorneys for the claimants are entitled to this evidence. There can be no complaint there, because the Government is the only one that has the evidence. In other words, in some of the suits the attorneys simply go on a fishing expedition, hoping that when the General Accounting Office makes its report they will find that their clients are eligible to recover. The cost of preparing the evidence is borne entirely by the Government. There is one set of cases pending where the report has not been completed which has cost around $200,000 up to this time, according to officials of the General Accounting Office.

The amendments I suggested today are the ones that the Secretary of the Interior and the Bureau of the Budget insisted should be made to the bill. It is beyond me to understand why neither the House nor Senate committee accepted the amendments, which would have made it unnecessary to prepare and offer them on the floor.

I express the hope that Members of the House will remember these two cases in the future when we are considering resolutions changing the original jurisdictional acts.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the amendments to the committee amendment.

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 4831, authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to pay salaries and expenses of the chairman, secretary, and interpreter of the Menominee General Council, members of the Menominee Advisory Council, and official delegates of the Menominee Tribe.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as fol-

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior, or such official as may be designated by him, is hereby authorized beginning as of July 1, 1938, and until otherwise directed by Congress, to pay out of any unobligated tribal funds (except the Menominee 5-percent log fund) of the Menominee Indians in the Treasury of the United States the following salaries and expenses:

To the chairman, secretary, and interpreter of the Menominee General Council and members of the Menominee Advisory Council, when engaged on business of the tribe, a salary of not to exceed $5 per day, and a per diem of not to exceed $3 per day in lieu of subsistence and all other expenses; to such official delegates of the Menominee Tribe who carry on the business of the tribe at the seat of government a salary of not to exceed $5 per day and a per diem of $5 in lieu of subsistence and all other expenses: Provided, That the rate of salary and per diem paid shall be fixed in advance by the Menominee General Council or by the Menominee Advisory Council if authorized by the Menominee General Council: Provided further, That each of the official delegates of the tribe carrying on said business at the seat of government shall also receive ing on said business at the seat of government shall also receive the usual railroad and sleeping-car transportation to and from the seat of government or, in lieu thereof if travel be by automobile, seat of government or, in lieu thereof if travel be by automobile, 5 cents per mile payable to the delegate furnishing the automobile, provided two or more delegates travel therein, otherwise an amount equivalent to the cost of the usual railroad and sleeping-car transportation: Provided jurther, That the aforesaid salaries and expenses shall not exceed $6,000 per annum: Provided further, That the length of stay of the official delegates at the seat of government shall be determined by the Commissioner of Indian Affairs.

ERECTION OF MONUMENT TO THE MEMORY OF FATHER PIERRE GIBAULT

The Clerk called the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 219) to provide for the erection of a monument to the memory of the patriot priest, Father Pierre Gibault.

Mr. KEAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the resolution may be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. KEAN]?

There was no objection.

POWER PLANT AT PASSAMAQUODDY BAY

The Clerk called the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 57) authorizing the Secretary of War to cause a completion of surveys, test borings, and foundation investigations to be made to determine the advisability and cost of putting in a small experimental plant for development of tidal power in the waters in and about Passamaquoddy Bay, the cost thereof to be paid from appropriations heretofore or hereafter made for such examinations.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that this resolution may be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Wolcott]?

There was no objection.

TERM OF COURT AT KALISPELL, MONT.

The Clerk called the next bill, S. 474, to amend section 92 of the Judicial Code to provide for a term of court at Kalispell, Mont.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as fol-

Be it enacted, etc., That section 92 of the Judicial Code, as amended, is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 92. The State of Montana shall constitute one judicial district, to be known as the district of Montana. Terms of the district court shall be held at Helena, Butte, Great Falls, Lewistown, Billings, Missoula, Glasgow, Havre, Miles City, Livingston, and Kalispell at such times as may be fixed by rule of such court: Provided, That suitable rooms and accommodations for holding court at Lewistown, Livingston, Havre, and Kalispell are furnished free of all expenses to the United States. Causes civil and criminal. free of all expenses to the United States. Causes, civil and criminal, may be transferred by the court or a judge thereof from any sitting place designated above to any other sitting place thus designated, when the convenience of the parties or the ends of justice would be promoted by the transfer; and any interlocutory order may be made by the court or judge thereof in either place."

The title was amended so as to read: "An act to amend section 92 of the Judicial Code to provide for a term of court at Kalispell, Mont., and subject to the recommendation of the Attorney General of the United States to permit the provision of rooms and accommodations for holding court at Livingston and Kalispell, Mont."

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PROTECTION OF WITNESSES BEFORE CONGRESS AND ADMINISTRATIVE AGENCIES

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 6832, to provide for the protection of witnesses appearing before any department, independent establishment, or other agency of the United States or the Congress of the United States.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. EBERHARTER. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I would like to have this bill explained, if the author of the bill is present, or by any member of the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Speaker, the Committee on the Judiciary has regarded this bill favorably because witnesses before congressional committees do not have the same protection as witnesses in courts. This bill supplies that lack or deficiency. Also, the attendance of witnesses before the departments is not compellable, and this bill would also remedy that and prevents the intimidation of such witnesses.

Mr. EBERHARTER. There is no clause in this bill which would in any way restrict the rights of any witness appearing before any committee of the Congress or any department?

Mr. CELLER. None whatsoever.

Mr. EBERHARTER. On the gentleman's assurance, I have no objection, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Criminal Code of the United States be amended by inserting therein a new section immediately following section 135 (U. S. C., title 18, sec. 241) to be known as section 135 (a) (U. S. C., title 18, sec. 241 (a)) and reading as follows: "SEC. 135. LANDS HELD IN TRUST FOR INDIAN USE

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 6506, to declare that the United States holds certain lands in trust for Indian use. There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as

Be it enacted, etc., That title to the lands and interests in lands, together with the improvements thereon, which have been, or are in process of being acquired by the United States under authority of title II of the National Industrial Recovery Act of June 16, 1933 (48 Stat. 200), the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of April 8, 1935 (49 Stat. 115), and of section 55 of title I of the act of August 24, 1935 (49 Stat. 750, 781), lying and situated within the States of Florida, Idaho, Michigan, Minnesota, Montana, North Dakota, Oklahoma, Oregon, South Dakota, and Wisconsin, admin-Dakota, Oklahoma, Oregon, South Dakota, and Wisconsin, administrative jurisdiction over which has heretofore been transferred by the President from the Secretary of Agriculture to the Secretary of the Interior by Executive Order No. 7868, dated April 15, 1938, and such additional lands or interests therein, together with the improvements thereon, lying and situated within the States named herein, as have been or may hereafter be acquired by the United States under the authorities herein cited and as may hereafter be transferred for administrative purposes from the Secretary of Agriculture to the Secretary of the Interior, is hereby declared to be held in trust by the United States of America for the use and benefit of those respective tribes, bands, or groups of Indians for whom the Secretary of the Interior may by proclamation hereafter declare such lands to be available, and the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized to proclaim such lands as new Indian reservations or as additions to existing Indian reservations.

UNAUTHORIZED USE OF INSIGNIA OF VETERANS' ORGANIZATIONS

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 5982, for the protection against unlawful use of the badge, medal, emblem, or other insignia of veterans' organizations incorporated by act of Congress, and providing penalties for the violation thereof.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the manufacturing, wearing, purchase or sale, either separately or appended to, or to be appended to, or the reproduction of any article of merchandise manufactured or sold, of the badge, medal, emblem, or other insignia or any colorable imitation thereof, of any veterans' organization incorporated by act of Congress, or the printing, lithographing, engraving, or other like reproduction on any poster, circular, periodical, magazine, newspaper, or other publication, or the circulation or distribution of any such printed matter bearing a reproduction of such badge, medal, emblem, or other insignia or any colorable imitation thereof, of any such veterans' organization, is prohibited except when authorized under such rules and regulations as may be prescribed by such organization so incorporated. Any person who knowingly offends against any provision of this act shall on conviction be punished by a fine not exceeding $250 or by imprisonment not exceeding 6 months, or by both such fine and imprisonment. imprisonment.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

SETTLEMENT OF DISPUTES WITH THE UNITED STATES

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 6324, to provide for the more expeditious settlement of disputes with the United States, and for other purposes.

Mr. COSTELLO and Mr. WOLCOTT asked unanimous consent that the bill be passed over without prejudice.

There was no objection.

SEQUOIA NATIONAL FOREST, CALIF.

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 1790, to authorize additions to the Sequoia National Forest, Calif., through exchanges under the act of March 20, 1922, or by proclamation of Executive order.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

VIRGINIA (MERRIMAC) - MONITOR COMMISSION

The Clerk called the concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 32) establishing a commission to be known as the Virginia (Merrimac) - Monitor Commission.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the concurrent resolution?

Mr. COSTELLO. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, may I ask the chairman of the Committee on the Library or the author of the bill what the possible cost of this commission will be?

Mr. BLAND. As far as I can see, there will be no cost, as provision is made in the resolution that any assistants, clerks, or others shall be hired, if possible, without cost to the United

Mr. COSTELLO. The proposal is to create a memorial in Virginia to commemorate the battle referred to in the bill.

Mr. BLAND. Yes. This would simply be a commission to consider plans, and so forth, and that would have to be brought before the Congress.

Mr. COSTELLO. In other words, no particular type of memorial is being considered at this time?

Mr. BLAND. None at this time.

Mr. COSTELLO. I withdraw my reservation of objection, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the concurrent resolution?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the concurrent resolution, as follows:

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That there is hereby established a commission to be known as the Virginia (Merrimac)-Monitor Commission (hereinafter referred to as the commission) and to be composed of six commissioners, as follows: Three Senators to be appointed by the President of the Senate and three Members of the House of Representatives to be appointed by the Speaker of the House. The commissioners shall serve without compensation and shall select a chairman from among their number. among their number

BUREAU OF RECLAMATION

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 3391, providing payment to employees, Bureau of Reclamation, for mileage traveled in privately owned automobiles.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. WOLCOTT. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, in connection with this bill, I wish to call the attention of the committee to the bill H. R. 6693, No. 389 on the Consent Calendar. There seems to be some discrepancy in these bills. The bill we are considering authorizes payment to employees of the Bureau of Reclamation of 3 cents a mile for mileage traveled in motorcycles and 7 cents a mile for mileage traveled in automobiles. The bill H. R. 6693, No. 389 on the calendar, for civilian employees, authorizes the payment of 2 cents a mile for mileage traveled in motorcycles and 5 cents a mile for mileage traveled in automobiles. I believe that before we pass these bills this discrepancy should be corrected. I have no objection to the bills as long as they are consistent.

Mr. DEMPSEY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? Mr. WOLCOTT. I yield to the gentleman from New Mexico.

Mr. DEMPSEY. The bill we are now considering is one that passed the House in the last Congress, and also in the preceding Congress, but got to the Senate too late to be passed. The bill affects a few employees of the Bureau of Reclamation who several years ago were authorized to use their cars in the service of the Federal Government and to be reimbursed for such use, as prescribed here. It was later found that there was no authority in law to cover that service. Legislation was then enacted which is now in effect and covers the present employees. This bill is simply to reimburse those men who expended their money for that purpose for a short period prior to enactment of existing law. When the bill was under consideration last year, the gentleman from New York [Mr. Taber] asked certain questions

Mr. TABER. If the gentleman will yield, how much is allowed per mile by this bill?

Mr. DEMPSEY. I believe 7 cents per mile.

Mr. TABER. I object to the present consideration of the bill, Mr. Speaker; that amount is too much.

THE BENJAMIN HARRISON COMMISSION

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 4872, to establish the Benjamin Harrison Commission to formulate plans for the construction of a permanent memorial to the memory of Benjamin Harrison, twenty-third President of the United States.

Mr. COSTELLO. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I would like to ask the author of this bill a few questions regarding the purpose of the legislation.

It is my understanding that in the Seventy-fourth Congress we passed a general bill giving the Department of the Interior the right to select for preservation various historic monuments in the country. However, the bill we have here not only proposes to acquire and restore the home of President Harrison but also to acquire additional grounds in connection therewith. If that is the purpose of the bill, I want to ask the gentleman who is the author of the measure what he has in mind with respect to the size of the park and the location of it.

Mr. LUDLOW. Mr. Speaker, in reply to the gentleman's question I may state that reference in the report to acquiring the home of President Harrison is an unintentional error. It is an entirely different location. The location proposed is about 10 miles north of the city of Indianapolis, a place that President Harrison frequently visited and one which was a favorite haunt of his, but in no way associated with his home.

President Harrison is one of the few great characters that has never been shown any recognition in any way. This bill does not provide any appropriation for the memorial, but merely a small appropriation for an investigation. Benjamin Harrison was a statesman of sterling character, highly respected and honored by all who knew him, an ornament to the State of Indiana and to the Nation which he served so faithfully and well. This bill would confer deserved recognition that is long overdue.

I have this morning consulted the National Park Service, and Mr. R. F. Lee, the head of their Historic Sites Division, tells me the general authority they have under existing law does not cover a case of this kind, that it goes only to the preservation of existing historic sites and memorials, which is quite a different proposition.

Mr. COSTELLO. Does the gentleman know how large an area they plan to include in this proposed national park?

Mr. LUDLOW. I think that is more or less undetermined. It would not be a very large or expensive proposition, I will say to the gentleman. I hope the gentleman from California will not object.

Mr. COSTELLO. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection to this bill.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I would like to know how this memorial committee is going to be appointed. The bill itself does not seem to provide for that.

Mr. LUDLOW. I may say to the gentleman that I do not know definitely about the membership, but whatever is customary in the matter of investigating such matters will be followed. The commission will be appointed by the President, and the expense, I may say, is wholly and satisfactorily limited by the terms of the appropriation itself, the total expense being limited to $2,500. The President will find plenty of timber from which to make suitable selections for membership on the commission, and I have no doubt the commission will find it possible to perform all of the duties enjoined by the bill without exceeding the appropriation.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to objectand I shall not object—I desire to call attention to the fact that we are proposing by this bill to erect a memorial to a President of the United States who, we all know, was a Republican. I remember that for nearly 20 years we have been trying to erect a memorial to Thomas Jefferson, an outstanding American President, and we found objections on the Republican side. I simply want to compliment my colleague, the Democratic Member from Indiana, for introducing this bill, and I hope it will pass and that no Democrat shall object.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as fol-

Be it enacted, etc., That there is hereby established a commission, to be known as the Benjamin Harrison Memorial Commission, and to be composed of five commissioners, to be appointed by the President of the United States. Such commission shall consider and formulate plans for establishment of a permanent memorial in the city of Indianapolis to the said Benjamin Harri-son, twenty-third President of the United States.

SEC. 2. Such commission may, in its discretion, accept from any source, public or private, money or property to be used for the purpose of making surveys and investigations, formulating, preparing, and considering plans for the construction of such memorial, or other expenses incurred, or to be incurred, in carrying out the provisions of this joint resolution.

the provisions of this joint resolution.

Sec. 3. The commission shall report its recommendations to Congress as soon as practicable.

Sec. 4. There is hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $2,500, which shall be available to defray the necessary expenses of the commission for the performance of their duties herein prescribed. Disbursement of the sum herein authorized shall be made on vouchers approved by the chairman of the commission.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

EMPLOYMENT OF ENGINEERS AND ECONOMISTS ON RECLAMATION WORK

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 6379, to amend section 1 of an act entitled "An act authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to employ engineers and economists for consultation purposes on important reclamation work," approved February 28, 1929 (45 Stat. 1046).

Mr. KEAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that this bill be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Jersey?

There was no objection.

CENTRAL PACIFIC RAILWAY CO.

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 3764, to validate and confirm a certain conveyance heretofore made by Central Pacific Railway Co., and its lessee, Southern Pacific Co., to Consolidated Warehouse Co., involving a portion of the rightof-way acquired by the Central Pacific Railroad Co. of California under the act of Congress approved July 1, 1862 (12 Stat. 489)

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. WARREN). Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the conveyance heretofore executed by Central Pacific Railway Co., a corporation, and its lessee, Southern Pacific Co., a corporation, as grantors, to Consolidated Warehouse Co., a corporation, as grantee, dated June 16, 1937, and recorded in the office of the county recorder, of Washoe County, Nev., on September 21, 1937, in book No. 112, at page 19, of the official records of said county, involving a parcel of land containing seventy one-thousandths acre, more or less, situated at the foot of Evans Street in Evans Addition in the city of Reno, in the county of Washoe, State of Nevada, described as follows:

Beginning at the southwesterly corner of lot 13, block K, Evans Addition to the city of Reno; thence in a southwesterly direction along the prolongation of the southerly link of block K a distance of 80 feet, said line being parallel to and 100 feet distant northerly from the center line of the original Central Pacific main track; thence, at a right angle, 38 feet in a northwesterly direction; thence, at a right angle, 80 feet in a northeasterly direction Be it enacted, etc., That the conveyance heretofore executed to the westerly line of lot 13, block K; thence, at a right angle, 38 feet in a southerly direction along the westerly line of lot 13 to the point of beginning; and forming a part of the right-of-way granted to the Central Pacific Railroad Co. of California by an act of Congress approved July 1, 1862 (12 Stat. 489), entitled "An act to aid the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Missouri River to the Pacific Ocean and to secure to the Government the use of the same for postal, military, and other purposes," and other acts of Congress amendatory thereof or supplementary thereto, is hereby validated and confirmed, to the extent that said conveyance would have been legal and valid if the land involved therein and affected by this act had been held by the corporations making said conveyance under absolute or by the corporations making said conveyance under absolute or fee-simple title; subject to the conditions hereinafter stated.

SEC. 2. That this validation and confirmation shall not in any instance diminish said right-of-way to a width less than 100 feet on either side of the center of the main track of the railroad as now established and maintained.

SEC. 3. That there shall be reserved to the United States of America all oil, coal, or other minerals in the described parcel, and the right to prospect for, mine, and remove the same under such rules and regulations as the Secretary of the Interior may

SPECIAL DISTRICT JUDGE, VIRGIN ISLANDS

The Clerk called the bill (S. 190) to authorize the temporary appointment of a special judge for the district court of the Virgin Islands.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 26 of the Organic Act of the Virgin Islands of the United States (act of June 22, 1936, 49 Stat. 1813; U. S. C., title 48, sec. 1405y) be, and the same is hereby, amended by inserting therein immediately following the first sentence thereof the following sentence: "In case of the absence, disability, or disqualification of such judge, the President is authorized to appoint a special judge to discharge the duties of such judge only until the termination of such absence, disability, or disqualification; and the special judge so appointed shall be authorized and empowered to perform the duties of such office during such periods and shall receive compensation at the same rate, for the period of time actually served, and the same allowances for expenses and transportation, as are paid and allowed the judge of said court." said court.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

LOSS OF INSURED MAIL MATTER

The Clerk called the bill (S. 185) to amend section 224 of the Criminal Code so as to penalize the making of false claims for the loss of insured mail matter.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as fol-

Be it enacted, etc., That section 224 of the Criminal Code (35 Stat. 1133; U. S. C., title 18, sec. 354) be, and the same is hereby, amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 224. Whoever shall make, allege, or present, or cause to be made, alleged, or presented, or assist, aid, or abet in making, alleging, or presenting, any claim or application for indemnity for the loss of any registered or insured letter, parcel, package, or other article or matter, or the contents thereof, knowing such claim or application to be false, fictitious, or fraudulent; or whoever for the purpose of obtaining a registrative to the contents thereof. application to be false, fictitious, or fraudulent; or whoever for the purpose of obtaining or aiding to obtain the payment or approval of any such claim or application, shall make or use, or cause to be made or used, any false statement, certificate, affidavit, or deposition; or whoever shall knowingly and willfully misrepresent, or misstate, or, for the purpose aforessid, shall knowingly and willfully conceal any material fact or circumstance in respect of any such claim or application for indemnity, shall be fined not more than $500 or imprisoned not more than 1 year, or both, except in cases where the amount of such claim or application for indemnity is less than $100 there may be imposed a fine only."

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

TRAVEL AND SUBSISTENCE EXPENSES, DISTRICT JUDGES

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 7015) to reenact section 259 of the Judicial Code, relating to the traveling and subsistence expenses of circuit and district judges.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows: Be it enacted, etc., That section 259 of the Judicial Code (U. S. C., title 28, sec. 374) is hereby reenacted, the section reading as follows:

"Sec. 259. The circuit justices, the circuit and district judges of the United States, and the judges of the district courts of the United States in Alaska, Hawaii, and Puerto Rico, shall each be allowed States in Alaska, Hawaii, and Puerto Rico, shall each be allowed and paid his necessary expenses of travel, and his reasonable expenses (not to exceed $10 per day) actually incurred for maintenance, consequent upon his attending court or transacting other official business in pursuance of law at any place other than his official place of residence, said expenses to be paid by the marshal of the district in which such court is held or official business transacted, upon the written certificate of the justice or judge. The official place of residence of each circuit and district judge, and of each judge of the district courts of the United States in Alaska, Hawaii, and Puerto Rico, shall be at that place nearest his actual residence at which either a circuit court of appeals or a district residence at which either a circuit court of appeals or a district court is regularly held. Every such judge shall, upon his appointment, and from time to time thereafter whenever he may change his official residence, in writing notify the Department of Justice of his official place of residence."

SEC. 2. This act shall take effect July 1, 1939

DISPOSAL OF SURPLUS REAL PROPERTY

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 7233) to amend the act entitled "An act to provide for the disposition, control, and use of surplus real property acquired by Federal agencies, and for other purposes," approved August 27, 1935 (Public, No. 351, 74th Cong.), and for other purposes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. CHURCH. Mr. Speaker, I would like the author of the bill to give us an explanation of this.

Mr. TOLAN. Mr. Speaker, this bill has for its purpose the demolition of public buildings. The Treasury Department cannot go in now and demolish a building, and there are a lot of these old buildings in the United States which are a detriment to the property. If they were demolished, as is the case in the city of Oakland, the property could be sold. It has the approval of the Department. There is no objection from any source.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That an act entitled "An act to provide for the disposition, control, and use of surplus real property acquired by Federal agencies, and for other purposes", approved August 27, 1935 (Public, No. 351, 74th Cong.; 49 Stat. 885; U. S. C., Supp. II, title 40, sec. 304 (a) to (e)). be, and the same is hereby, amended as

At the end of section 1 add to subsection (c) the following: ": Provided, That if no bids, or if bids which are not satisfactory as to price or responsibility of bidder are received as a result of such public advertisement, the Commissioner of Public Buildings, with the approval of the Federal Works Administrator, is authorized to sell such property by negotiation, upon such terms as may be deemed to be to the best interest of the Government, but at a price not less than that bid by the highest responsible bidder."

Sec. 2. At the end of the act add the following sections:

OBTAINING MONEY BY FALSE PRETENSES ON THE HIGH SEAS

The Clerk called the bill (S. 1874) to amend the Criminal Code in regard to obtaining money by false pretenses on the high seas.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as

Be it enacted, etc., That the Criminal Code of the United States be amended by inserting after section 288 the following section: "Sec. 288A. Whoever, upon the high seas or on any waters within the admiralty and maritime jurisdiction of the United States and out of the jurisdiction of any particular State, or within the admiralty and maritime jurisdiction of the United States and out admiralty and maritime jurisdiction of the United States and out of the jurisdiction of any particular State on board any vessel belonging in whole or in part to the United States or any citizen thereof or to any corporation created by or under the laws of the United States, or of any State, Territory, or District thereof, by any fraud, or false pretense whatsoever with intent to defraud, obtains from any person anything of value, or procures the execution and delivery of any instrument of writing or conveyance of real or personal property, or the signature of any person, as maker, endorser, or guarantor, to or upon any bond, bill, receipt, promissory note, draft, or check, or any other evidence of indebtedness, or fraudulently sells, barters, or disposes of any bond, bill, receipt, promissory note, draft, or check, or other evidence of indebtedness, for value, knowing the same to be worthless, or knowing the signature of the maker, endorser, or guarantor thereof to have been obtained by any false pretenses, shall be fined not more than $5,000 or imprisoned not more than 5 years, or both." or imprisoned not more than 5 years, or both."

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

ISSUANCE OF REVENUE BONDS, HAWAII

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 6943) to ratify and confirm Act 58 of the Session Laws of Hawaii, 1939, extending the time within which revenue bonds may be issued and delivered under Act 174 of the Session Laws of Hawaii, 1935.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. KING. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that a similar Senate bill, S. 2738, be substituted for the House bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the Senate bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That Act 58 of the Session Laws of Hawaii, 1939, amending section 17 of Act 174 of the Session Laws of Hawaii, 1935, as amended, so as to extend the time within which revenue 1935, as amended, so as to extend the time within which revenue bonds may be issued and delivered under said Act 174, is hereby ratified and confirmed and revenue bonds may be issued under and pursuant to the provisions of said Act 174 of the Session Laws of Hawaii, 1935, as amended, and as further amended by said Act 58, without the approval of the President of the United States and without the incurring of an indebtedness within the meaning of the Hawaiian Organic Act, and said Act 174, as amended, shall constitute full authority for the Issuance of said bonds without reference to and independent of the Hawaiian Organic Act.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider laid on the table.

The House bill (H. R. 6943) was laid on the table.

CROP INSURANCE FOR COTTON

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 6972) to amend the Federal Crop Insurance Act.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be passed over without prejudice.

Mr. FULMER. Mr. Speaker, I suggest to the gentleman that a similar bill has already passed the Senate. simply extends the insurance program to cotton. The only reason why cotton was not included under the insurance program in 1938 was because the Department did not have the necessary information about cotton that would warrant placing cotton in the program. The crop-insurance bill authorized the Secretary to make an investigation, which he did, and this information has been printed in House Document 277.

The passage of this bill will mean much to the farmers in the South, where they have hailstorms and losses from other natural causes which destroy their crops and make them absolutely dependent on relief and relief work. I hope the gentleman will not object to the bill.

Mr. WOLCOTT. As I interpret this bill, this covers all agricultural crops as well as cotton. I think this altogether too important a bill to be passed by unanimous consent.

We do not have any reason to assume that the contingent liability of the Federal Government will not be increased materially by the adoption of this bill. Of course, we are right up against adjournment, and for that reason we have allowed many of these bills to go through that we might otherwise have objected to. But the gentleman will have to admit that if it does what the bill says it does, it is a very, very important bill, and I do not like the idea of our legislating on an important matter like this by unanimous

Mr. FULMER. May I say to the gentleman it only covers cotton as stated—was left out when the crop-insurance bill passed in 1938, for the reason given. We had extensive hearings before the Committee on Agriculture, which indicates the Crop Insurance Corporation has made a wonderful success with wheat. It is understood by the Department that cotton would work better under the program than wheat. If the gentleman would take the time to investigate the millions we spend in the way of relief when farmers have to give up their farms because of the destruction of their crops and their inability to pay these obligations and taxes, there would be no objection to this bill. When the act is amended it will only cover wheat and cotton.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Wolcott] that the bill be passed over without prejudice?

Mr. FULMER. Mr. Speaker, I object.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I object.

OSAGE TRIBE OF INDIANS

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 6314, authorizing an appropriation for payment to the Osage Tribe of Indians on account of their lands sold by the United States.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that this bill be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

AMENDING THE PROVISIONS OF LAW RELATING TO USE OF PRIVATE VEHICLES FOR OFFICIAL TRAVEL

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 6693, to amend the provisions of law relating to the use of private vehicles for official travel in order to effect economy and better administration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. TABER. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, this bill provides for the payment of 5 cents per mile for the use of automobiles. According to my understanding, and I think my information is accurate, the regular allowance in private industry is somewhere around 4 cents per mile. Very seldom is it over that. Anyone who receives that and who operates a Ford or Chevrolet can get by very nicely. Will the gentleman agree to an amendment reducing that 5 cents to 4 cents?

Mr. COCHRAN. This bill was referred to the committee by the Speaker. It is approved by the Treasury, the Bureau of the Budget, and the Comptroller General. As far as I am concerned personally, not speaking for the committee, I am willing to accept it. If the gentleman feels that 4 cents is sufficient, and the House agrees, I accept the decision.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the act of February 14, 1931 (46 Stat. 1103), as amended by section 9 of the act of March 3, 1933 (47 Stat. 1516; U. S. C., title 5, sec. 73a), entitled "An act to permit payments 1516; U. S. C., title 5, sec. 73a), entitled "An act to permit payments for the operation of motorcycles and automobiles used for necessary travel on official business, on a mileage basis in lieu of actual operating expenses," is further amended to read as follows:

"On and after the effective date of this act, a civilian officer or employee engaged in necessary travel on official business away from his designated post of duty may be paid, in lieu of actual expenses of transportation, under regulations to be prescribed by the President, not to exceed 2 cents per mile for the use of a privately owned motorcycle or 5 cents per mile for the use of a privately owned automobile for such transportation, whenever such mode of travel has been previously authorized and payment on such mileage basis is more economical and advantageous to the United States."

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment reducing the amount from 5 cents to 4 cents, on the second page. The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. TABER: Page 2, line 4, strike out the figure "5" and insert in lieu thereof the figure "4."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

RELIEVING DISBURSING AND CERTIFYING OFFICERS OF VETERANS' ADMINISTRATION FROM LIABILITY FOR PAYMENT

The Clerk called the next bill, S. 2454, to relieve disbursing officers and certifying officers of the Veterans' Administration from liability for payment where recovery of such payment is waived under existing laws administered by the Veterans' Administration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That no disbursing officer and no certifying officer of the Veterans' Administration shall be held liable for any amount paid to any person where the recovery of such amount from the payee is waived under existing laws administered by the Veterans' Administration.

JURISDICTION OVER LANDS ACQUIRED FROM MEXICO

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 6124, giving the consent to Congress to the addition of lands to the State of Texas and ceding jurisdiction to the State of Texas over certain parcels or tracts of land heretofore acquired by the United States of America from the United Mexican States.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That upon the acceptance of this act by the State of Texas all of the parcels or tracts of land lying adjacent to the territory of the State of Texas, which were acquired by the Government of the United States of America by virtue of the convention between the United States of America and the United Mexican States signed February 1, 1933, shall be and become a geographical part of the State of Texas and shall be under the civil and criminal jurisdiction of the said State, without affecting the ownership of the said lands.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read a third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

CLASSIFICATION AND GRADING OF FOREIGN-SERVICE PERSONNEL

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 7149, to amend the act entitled "An act for the grading and classification of clerks in the Foreign Service of the United States of America, and providing compensation therefor," approved February 23, 1931, as amended.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There was no objection.

Mr. BLOOM. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that a similar Senate bill (S. 2788) be substituted for the House

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the Senate bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That paragraph (o) of section 26 of the act entitled "An act for the grading and classification of clerks in the Foreign Service of the United States of America, and providing compensation therefor," approved February 23, 1931, as amended, is amended to read as follows:

"(o) For the purposes of this act the period of service shall be computed from the date of original cath of office as diplomatic secretary, consul general, consul, vice consul, deputy consul, consular assistant, consular agent, commercial agent, interpreter, or student interpreter, and shall include periods of service at differentimes as either a diplomatic or consular officer, or while on assignt times as either a diplomatic or consular officer, or while on assignment to the Department of State, or on special duty or service in another department or establishment of the Government, but all another department or establishment of the Government, but all periods of separation from the service and so much of any period of leave of absence without pay as may exceed 6 months shall be excluded: Provided, That service prior to appointment as a Foreign Service officer as a classified or an unclassified employee in the civil service of the United States, or in the service of the District of Columbia, including periods of service at different times and in one or more departments, branches, or independent offices, or the legislative branch of the Government, and also periods of service performed overseas under authority of the United States, and periods of honorable service in the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, or Coast Guard of the United States may be included in the period of service, in which case the officer shall pay into the Foreign Service retirement and disability fund a special contribution equal to 5 percent of his annual salary for each year of such employment subsequent to July 1, 1924, with interest thereon to date of payment compounded annually at 4 percent and all such officers within the purview of this provision may elect to make such deposits in installments during the continuance of their service in such amounts and under such conditions as may be determined in each instance by the Secretary of State; but in the case of a each instance by the Secretary of State; but in the case of a Foreign Service officer who is eligible for and elects to receive a Foreign Service officer who is eligible for and elects to receive a pension under any law, or retired pay on account of military or naval service, or compensation under the War Risk Insurance Act, the period of his military or naval service upon which such pension, retired pay, or compensation is based shall not be included, but nothing in this act shall be so construed as to affect in any manner his right to a pension, or to retired pay, or to compensation under the War Risk Insurance Act in addition to the annuity herein provided."

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

A House bill, H. R. 7149, was laid on the table.

SCHOOL USE OF NATIONAL PARKS AND MONUMENTS

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 4097, to authorize the use of certain facilities of national parks and national monuments for elementary-school purposes.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That in order to facilitate the providing of educational opportunities for children of Government employees and other residents in the national parks and national monuments the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized, in his discretion, to make available for elementary-school purposes therein, without charge, space in Government-owned buildings, and to permit the use, without charge, of Government-owned transportation facilities, when available, without detriment to the official business of such national parks and national monuments, for conveying such children to and from schools when not conveniently accessible by public transportation. public transportation.

With the following committee amendments:

Amend the title so as to read, "To authorize the use of certain facilities of national parks and national monuments for school purposes."

In lines 7 and 8 strike out the words "for elementary-school pur-one of the bill.

In line 7 and 8 strike out the words "for elementary-school purposes therein."

In line 9, beginning with the first comma, strike out up to and including the word "available" in line 10, and substitute in lieu thereof "for school purposes therein, when such space may be available for such purposes."

In line 12, substitute a period for the comma and strike out the remainder of the bill.

The committee amendments were agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill to authorize the use of certain facilities of national parks and national monuments for school purposes."

CUSTER BATTLEFIELD MUSEUM

The Clerk called the next bill, S. 28, to provide for the erection of a public historical museum in the Custer Battlefield National Cemetery, Montana.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War is authorized and directed (1) to select a site within the Custer Battlefield National Cemetery, Montana; (2) to erect and maintain thereon, as a memorial to Lt. Col. George A. Custer and the officers and soldiers under his command at the Battle of Little Big Horn River, June 25, 1876, a public museum suitable for housing a collection of historical relics; (3) to accept on behalf of the United States for exhibit in such museum the collection of relics now a part of the estate of Mrs. George A. Custer, deceased, the wife of such Lt. Col. George A. Custer; and (4), in his discretion, to accept such other historical relics as he may deem appropriate for exhibit therein.

therein. SEC. 2. SEC. 2. The Secretary of War is authorized and directed, not-withstanding any provision of law to the contrary, to do all things necessary to carry out the provisions of this act, by con-tract or otherwise, with or without advertising, under such con-ditions as he may prescribe, including the engagement by contract of services of such architects, sculptors, artists, or firms and such of services of such architects, sculptors, artists, or firms and such other technical and professional personnel as he may deem necessary, without regard to civil-service requirements and restrictions of law governing the employment and compensation of employees of the United States.

SEC. 3. There is hereby authorized to be appropriated the sum of $75,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, to carry out the provisions of this act.

With the following committee amendment:

Page 2, line 18, strike out "$75,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$25,000."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

FILING OF AFFIDAVITS OF PREJUDICE, DISTRICT COURT, ALASKA

The Clerk called the next bill. S. 1335, relating to the filing of affidavits of prejudice in the District Court for the District of Alaska.

Mr. DIMOND. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that this bill may be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the Delegate from Alaska?

There was no objection.

LIABILITY OF RAILROADS TO THEIR EMPLOYEES

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 4988, to amend an act entitled "An act relating to the liability of common carriers by railroad to their employees in certain cases," approved April 22, 1908 (U.S. C., title 45, sec. 51).

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 1 of the act entitled "An act relating to the liability of common carriers by railroad to their employees in certain cases," approved April 22, 1908 (35 Stat. 65; U. S. C., title 45, sec. 51), be, and it is hereby, amended to read as follows:

read as follows:

"That every common carrier by railroad while engaging in commerce between any of the several States or Territories, or between any of the States and Territories, or between the District of Columbia and any of the States or Territories, or between the District of Columbia or any of the States or Territories and any foreign nation or nations, shall be liable in damages to any person suffering injury while he is employed by such carrier in such commerce, or, in case of the death of such employee, to his or her personal representative, for the benefit of the surviving widow or husband and children of such employee; and, if none, then of such employee's parents; and, if none, then of the next of kin dependent upon such employee, for such injury or death resulting in whole or in part from the negligence of any of the officers, agents, or employees of such carrier, or by reason of any defect or insufficiency, due to its negligence, in its cars, engines, appliances, machinery, track, roadbed, works, boats, wharves, or other equipment. In any action brought against any common carrier under or by virtue of any of the provisions of this act to recover damages for injuries to, or the death of, any of its employees, such employee shall not be held to have assumed the risks of his employeent in any case where the negligence of risks of his employment in any case where the negligence of such common carrier, its officers, agents, or employees, proximately contributed to the injury or death of such employees except those risks incident to the employment."

With the following committee amendment:

Page 2, line 20, after the word "case" insert "where said employee has not had actual notice of any negligently maintained condition or practice."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

THE NAVY CLUB OF THE UNITED STATES

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 5880, to incorporate the Navy Club of the United States of America.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, will the gentleman from Illinois explain the necessity for a national charter for this organization?

Mr. REED of Illinois. I may say to the gentleman from New York that at the present time several Navy clubs throughout the United States have been in existence for several years. About 2 or 3 years ago they consolidated into a national organization. They had their national convention this year at Marion, Ohio, and they are now asking to be incorporated in the same manner as the American Legion and the Marine Corps, which was incorporated by act of Congress last year.

Mr. WADSWORTH. May I ask the gentleman would it not suffice if they could be incorporated under the laws of the District of Columbia?

Mr. REED of Illinois. I assume it would suffice, but in all of these veteran organizations I think they feel there is a great deal they can accomplish, so far as enlarging their organization is concerned, if they have a national charter.

Mr. WADSWORTH. I shall not object, but let me say, Mr. Speaker, that this practice of granting national charters at the hands of Congress instead of these organizations going to their States or to the District of Columbia, which provide the natural channels for incorporation of mutual-benefit societies, should not be followed.

Mr. HEALEY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. REED of Illinois. I yield.

Mr. HEALEY. I may say to the gentleman from New York that last year we authorized the Marine Corps Reserve, made up of men who served in the Marine Corps.

Mr. WADSWORTH. I doubt the wisdom of that.

Mr. HEALEY. I think it has had a very stimulating effect on that organization.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my ob-

Mr. VAN ZANDT. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, will the gentleman advise whether or not it is the intention of the committee to grant a national charter to the order of the Purple Heart?

Mr. HEALEY. That has already been done; they have a national charter.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I would like to know the underlying reason for this piece of legislation for this request for a national charter. What is the need for it? Are you going to incorporate everybody?

Mr. REED of Illinois. I may say to the gentleman from Illinois that membership in this organization is limited to men who are now serving in the Navy or who have served in the Navy. Membership in the organization is open to any officer or enlisted man of the United States Navy.

The Committee on the Judiciary has followed its custom in the past to approve a national charter only in those cases where the organizations are national in character and where they assist in the execution of some express or implied powers of the Constitution, or perform governmental functions thereunder.

Mr. SABATH. Is membership in the organization open only to officers of the Navy?

Mr. REED of Illinois. Not at all, it is open to the officer and enlisted personnel of the Navy.

Mr. WALTER. Any man who ever served in the Navy is eligible for membership.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That Sigfred A. Sandeen, national commandant; Ernest C. Fiedler, national senior executive officer; Thomas D. Hickey, national junior executive officer; Forest F. Bodiker, national paymaster; V. Homer Peabody, national chaplain; Mason C. Martin, national historian; and John F. McCullough, medical doctor, national medical officer, are hereby created a body corporate of the name, "Navy Club of the United States of America"

a body corporate of the name, "Navy Club of the United States of America."

SEC. 2. That the purposes of this corporation shall be (a) to further, encourage, promote, and maintain comradeship among those persons who are or have been in the active service of the United States Navy, the United States Marine Corps, or the United States Coast Guard; (b) to revere, honor, and perpetuate the memory of those persons who have been such members and have departed this life; (c) to promote and encourage further public interest in the United States Navy, the United States Marine Corps, and the United States Coast Guard and the history of said organizations; (d) to uphold the spirit and ideals of the United States Navy, the United States Marine Corps, and the United States Coast Guard; (e) to promote the ideals of American freedom and democracy and to fit its members for the duties of citizenship and to encourage them to serve as ably as citizens as they have served the Nation under arms; and (f) to maintain true allegiance to American institutions.

Sec. 3. That the corporation (a) shall have perpetual succession;

SEC. 3. That the corporation (a) shall have perpetual succession; (b) may charge and collect membership dues and receive contribu-tions of money or property to be devoted to carrying out the purtions of money or property to be devoted to carrying out the purposes of the organization; (c) may sue or be sued; (d) may adopt a corporate seal and alter it at pleasure; (e) may adopt and alter bylaws not inconsistent with the Constitution and laws of the United States or of any State; (f) may establish and maintain offices for the conduct of its business; (g) may appoint or elect officers and agents; (h) may choose a board of trustees, consisting of not more than 15 persons nor less than 5 persons, to conduct the business and exercise the powers of the corporation; (i) may acquire, by purchase, devise, bequest, gift, or otherwise, and hold, encumber, convey, or otherwise dispose of such real and personal property as may be necessary or appropriate for its corporate purposes; and (j) generally may do any and all lawful acts necessary or appropriate to carry out the purposes for which the corporation is created. the corporation is created.

Sec. 4. That the corporation shall, on or before the 1st day of December in each year, transmit to Congress a report of its proceedings and activities for the preceding calendar year, including the full and complete statement of its receipts and expenditures. Such reports shall not be printed as public documents.

That the right to alter, amend, or repeal this act at any time is hereby expressly reserved.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

FEDERAL RECLAMATION PROJECTS

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 6372, relating to the development of farm units on public lands under Federal reclamation projects with funds furnished by the Farm Security Administration.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill may go over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

OSAGE PRODUCTION TAX

The Clerk called the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 289) to amend section 5 of Public Law No. 360, Sixty-sixth Congress. The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution?

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I would like to ask the chairman of the Committee on Indian Affairs a few questions. Will the gentleman explain the resolution?

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, under present law the Osages, so far as royalties in Oklahoma are concerned, may be charged up to 5 percent on oil that is produced in Osage County. The original bill permitted 3 percent, which was later changed to make it a maximum of 5 percent when there was so much oil produced in Osage County. The tax collected from this oil is paid back to the State of Oklahoma. Under the present arrangement the limit would be 3 percent, of which Osage County gets onethird under the law as it is written now and it would continue to get one-third if this resolution is passed.

Mr. McCORMACK. What is the tax now?

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma. It can be up to 5 percent. Mr. McCORMACK. The purpose of this resolution is to make it what?

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma. To set it definitely at 3 percent.

Mr. McCORMACK. What tax do they oppose?

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma. They oppose anything up to 5 percent.

Mr. McCORMACK. What is being imposed now?

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma. Five percent.

Mr. McCORMACK. This has the effect of reducing it 2 percent?

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma. That is right; on Indians' royalty.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that this bill may be passed over without prejudice?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER]? There was no objection.

LEASING OF UNDEVELOPED COAL AND ASPHALT DEPOSITS OF THE CHOCTAW AND CHICKASAW INDIANS

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 7135, to authorize the leasing of the undeveloped coal and asphalt deposits of the Choctaw and Chickasaw Nations in Oklahoma.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object. this seems to be an important bill. I would like to know a little more about it. It is a far-reaching bill.

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma. It simply provides, as the title indicates, authorizing the leasing of the undeveloped coal and asphalt deposits of the Choctaw and Chickasaw Nations in Oklahoma.

Mr. SABATH. We ought to know a little more about it. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill may be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SABATH]? There was no objection.

COAST GUARD STATION, WRIGHTSVILLE BEACH, N. C.

ARIZONA STATE ELKS ASSOCIATION HOSPITAL

The Clerk called the next bill, S. 5, to grant certain lands to the Arizona State Elks Association Hospital.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. GEYER of California. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, I should like to have an explanation of this bill.

Mr. MURDOCK of Arizona. This bill pertains to a strip of land on the northern border of the city of Tucson, where there was an inaccurate survey. They want to set the line over about 200 feet on one side. This land is to be used as the site of a hospital by a charitable and benevolent society, for health purposes.

Mr. GEYER of California. It is just correcting a mistake in the survey?

Mr. MURDOCK of Arizona. It means that. It conveys certain land which is not otherwise used by Uncle Sam. The space was used as a rifle range at one time, but it is no longer valuable to the Federal Government. It will be put to a better use by a great fraternal order, the Elks, who recognize the value of healing sunshine and air in this sun parlor of the Nation.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as

Be it enacted, etc., That the Executive Order No. 2295 and dated January 1, 1916, as modified by the Executive Order No. 6971 and dated February 19, 1935, is hereby further modified by the elimination from the provisions of said Executive order as modified of a certain tract of land particularly described as follows, to wit: The north 200 feet northwest quarter northwest quarter section 10 township 14 south, range 13 east, Gila and Salt River base and meridian; in all, an area approximately 200 feet wide by approximately 1,315.28 feet long.

MOREHEAD CITY TARGET RANGE, N. C.

The Clerk called the next bill, S. 1156, to authorize the transfer to the jurisdiction of the Secretary of the Treasury of portions of the property within the military reservation known as the Morehead City Target Range, N. C., for the construction of improvements thereon, and for other purposes.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows: Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized to make transfers to the jurisdiction and control of the Secretary of the Treasury of such portions of the property at present included within the military reservation known as the Morehead City Target Range, N. C., and upon such conditions, as may be mutually agreed upon by the Secretary of War and the Secretary of the Treasury. The Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized to construct within the limits of the property so transferred. from such funds as may be now or may hereafter become available, such improvements or buildings, appurtenances, and approaches thereto as he may deem adequate and suitable for the use of said property as a target range by the United States Coast Guard, and for use in carrying out any other functions or duties of the Treasury Department: Provided, That upon cessation of such use the premises or any part thereof so transferred shall revert to the jurisdiction of the War Department.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

CONSTRUCTION WORK FOR THE ARMY

The Clerk called the next bill, S. 2562, to facilitate certain construction work for the Army, and for other purposes.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That to enable the Secretary of War to accomplish without delay or excessive cost those public-works projects for which appropriations are available or may become available, to be located outside the continental limits of the United States, he is hereby authorized to enter into contracts upon a cost-plus-a-fixed-fee basis after such negotiations as he may authorize and approve and without advertising for proposals with reference thereto. Approval by the President shall be necessary to the validity of any contract entered into under authority of this section. The fixed fee to be paid the contractor as a result of any contract entered into under authority of this section shall be determined at or before the time such contract is made, and shall be set forth in such contract. Such fee shall not exceed 10 prepart of the estimated cost. the time such contract is made, and shall be set forth in such contract. Such fee shall not exceed 10 percent of the estimated cost of the contract, exclusive of the fee, as determined by the Secretary of War. Changes in the amount of the fee shall be made only upon material changes in the scope of the work concerned as determined by the Secretary of War, whose determination shall be conclusive.

(b) Negotiations under this section shall be between the Secretary of War, or a duly authorized representative, and three or more reputable and qualified contracting individuals, firms, or corporations regularly engaged in work of comparable magnitude and class tions regularly engaged in work of comparable magnitude and class to that contemplated by the negotiations, as determined by the Sec-retary of War, and contracts may be made with any such individual, firm, or corporation, or with any two or more of them jointly, upon such terms and conditions as the Secretary of War may determine to be fair and equitable and in the interests of the national defense. For each contract entered into under authority of this section the Secretary of War may detail an Army officer to duty, without additional compensation, as an executive representative of the contracting officer. The contract shall provide that the officer so detailed shall have the right to attend any meetings of the board of directors shall have the right to attend any meetings of the board of directors or other executive or administrative board or committee of any corporation, partnership, firm, or syndicate which is or may become a party thereto, for the purpose of submitting propositions, propounding questions, and receiving information relative to any matter within the purview of the contract with the intent and for the purpose of safeguarding the interests of the United States, coordinating efforts, and promoting mutually beneficial relationships, and making decisions within the scope of his delegated authority and not in conflict with any provision of the contract.

(c) In any project the contract for which is negotiated under authority and not in conflict with any provision of the contract.

(c) In any project the contract for which is negotiated under authority of this section, the Secretary of War may waive the requirement of a performance and a payment bond and may accept materials required for any such project at such place or places as he may deem necessary to minimize insurance costs.

(d) The Secretary of War shall report annually to the Congress all contracts entered into under authority of this section, including the names of the contractors and copies of the contracts concerned, together with the amounts thereof.

together with the amounts thereof.

SEC. 2. Whenever deemed by him to be advantageous to the national defense, and providing that in the opinion of the Secretary of War the existing facilities of the War Department are inadequate, the Secretary of War is hereby authorized to employ, by contract or otherwise, outside architectural or engineering corporations, or otherwise, outside architectural or engineering corporations, firms, or individuals for the production and delivery of the designs, plans, drawings, and specifications required for the accomplishment of any public works or utilities project of the War Department without reference to the Classification Act of 1923 (42 Stat. 1483), as amended (5 U. S. C., ch. 13), or to section 3709 of the Revised Statutes of the United States (41 U. S. C. 5). In no case shall the fee paid for any service authorized by this section exceed 6 percent of the estimated cost, as determined by the Secretary of War, of the project to which such fee is applicable.

With the following committee amendment:

Page 1, line 6, after the word "located", strike out the remainder of line 6 and insert "in Alaska and the Panama Canal Zone."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

FOR THE RELIEF OF THE STATE OF OHIO

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 5118, for the relief of the State of Ohio.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, would like to know from the gentleman from Ohio what relief is contemplated or asked for in this measure.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. If the gentleman will permit I would prefer that the acting chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary make the explanation.

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Speaker, I may say to the gentleman that the Judiciary Committee considered very carefully this application which, I understand, has the support of the entire Ohio delegation, both Democrats and Republicans, as well as the two Senators from that State.

It would appear that there were differences of opinion as to computation and distribution of socal-security funds for the State of Ohio for the month of October last. Those differences have now been reconciled and the Social Security Board is satisfied that the conditions that existed during the month of October no longer exist. The Board withheld the funds for October, but have resumed monthly payments thereafter. Thus the Board indicated satisfaction with the changed conditions in Ohio.

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? Mr. CELLER. I yield.

Mr. DOUGHTON. The gentleman understands that the Social Security Board is very much opposed to this legis-

Mr. CELLER. I will come to that. The Chairman of the Social Security Board has objected and he appeared before the Judiciary Committee. The members of the Judiciary Committee unanimously felt that Mr. Altmeyer was assuming an attitude in this matter which was somewhat unjust. He said that according to the wording of the statute, particularly section 4, he may not have the power to pay this money to the State of Ohio, and therefore he said that the State of Ohio should go into court and test out the question. It would be highly unjust to place that burden upon the State of Ohio and make it go through the Federal courts and up to the Supreme Court before it could get this money which we, the members of the Judiciary Committee, feel is rightly due the State of Ohio. Ohio was compelled, in order to take care of its poor and indigent and aged during that month to go out and borrow one-million-three-hundredand-some-odd-thousand dollars from the bankers in Ohio and they were compelled to issue their bonds. Ohio is entitled to this money. Why blame the innocent people of Ohio for some derelictions of one official-in this case the Governor. The money has been deposited in the United States Treasury, it is there to the credit of the State of Ohio, and there seems no good reason why Mr. Altmeyer should take the attitude he has assumed and compel Ohio to go into the courts to get this money. I have great respect for Mr. Altmeyer and his colleagues. They have done and are doing excellent work. But in this instance they are wronging a great State. The unanimous verdict of the House Judiciary Committee and the entire Ohio delegation in House and Senate that this bill pass should have considerable weight in the House.

Mr. DOUGHTON. Did not the Chairman of the Social Security Board propose to submit the legal aspects of this matter to the Attorney General and the Ohio authorities declined to do that?

Mr. CELLER. I asked Mr. Altmeyer, if the Attorney General would decide in favor of the State of Ohio, would he agree to that decision and doubt was expressed. I am of the personal opinion that the withholding of this money is highly unfair. There is no defense, and I say that as an attorney, and that will be borne out by the members of the Judiciary Committee. I say that Mr. Altmeyer and the Social Security Board have no defense whatever against this claim by the State of Ohio. It would be ill-advised to compel any State in Ohio's position to be compelled to go into court for redress. We expressly provided that the Security Board could punish a State for its failure to comply. The Board can refuse to certify payments by the Treasury to a State until that State repents and changes its method and practices interdicted by the Board. Ohio did rectify its procedure. Why has not the Board, therefore, the right and duty under section 4 of the act to certify payment?

Mr. HARTER of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CELLER. Yes.

Mr. HARTER of Ohio. Did not this matter arise because of differences of opinion between the State officials and the Federal Social Security Board with reference to the administration of the old-age pension act in Ohio?

Mr. CELLER. That is correct.

Mr. HARTER of Ohio. Is it not a matter of strict justice and right and equity that the State of Ohio is entitled to the relief granted in this bill?

Mr. CELLER. That is the unanimous opinion of the Committee on the Judiciary.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I desire to get some information. Is not this on all fours with the Illinois situation?

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Oklahoma.

Mr. SABATH. Illinois; whereby because of the passing of a law in the State of Illinois, the State was not allowed for 2 months any appropriation or allocation for the old-age pension and other laws.

Mr. CELLER. An analogous situation arose concerning Oklahoma. That State admitted its wrong, changed its methods, and the Board made payment.

Furthermore, be it remembered there is no claim by the Board of any fraud or defalcation. The equities are with the sovereign State of Ohio.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from Illinois has expired. Is there objection?

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection? There was no objection.

CIVIL GOVERNMENT, VIRGIN ISLANDS

The Clerk called the bill (S. 2784) to amend section 4 of the act entitled "An act to provide a civil government for the Virgin Islands of the United States, approved June 22, 1936."

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as fol-

The bill was order to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

ADDITIONAL DISTRICT AND CIRCUIT JUDGES

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 7079) to provide for the appointment of additional district and circuit judges.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection? Mr. KEAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection? There was no objection.

PROCUREMENT OF AIRCRAFT FOR NATIONAL DEFENSE

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 7267) to facilitate the procurement of aircraft for the national defense.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. CLASON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. HARTER of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman reserve his request?

Mr. CLASON. Yes.

Mr. HARTER of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, this bill is of great importance to the national defense at this time. It permits multiple awards in the purchase of additional aircraft for the Army and Navy. It is a temporary measure and will. expire, under the terms of the bill, June 30, 1941. If we are to complete a program of airplane purchasing during the period fixed by the Congress, this legislation, in the opinion of the Army Air Corps, is most important.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HARTER of Ohio. Yes.

Mr. TABER. Is it not a fact that this permits the letting of contracts to the highest bidder?

Mr. HARTER of Ohio. No. It allows awards to be split between the three lowest bidders, or two of them, if in the judgment of the Secretary of War it is in the interest of the national defense to do so. It is designed to prevent the overloading of a plant or plants, thus permitting the procurement of the authorized planes by June 30, 1941. It does not in any way set aside the present system of procuring aircraft by competitive bidding. Under the terms of the bill the Secretary of War must make a report to Congress following each award made pursuant to the provisions of this bill showing that it is in the interest of the national defense to make such an award.

Mr. CLASON. Mr. Speaker, it is my understanding that for every contract or every set of bids sent out there have not been less than 14 bidders. Each bid provides for penalties. So far as both Major General Arnold and Assistant Secretary of War Johnson are concerned, it was testified that there was no penalty being inflicted upon any company for failure to produce aircraft and the only penalties in connection with present contracts are minor in nature. There is nothing to indicate that these lowest bidders will not be able to produce the aircraft in accordance with the terms of their contracts. I think this is too important a subject to be dealt with in this way and that the bill ought to go over.

Mr. HARTER of Ohio. Of course, the gentleman is mis-

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts that the bill go over without prejudice?

There was no objection.

RETIREMENT FOR DISABLED JUDGES

The Clerk called the next bill, S. 1282, to extend the privilege of retirement for disability to judges appointed to hold office during good behavior.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that this bill be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

THE BARGES "PRARI" AND "PALPA"

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 6664, to admit the American-owned barges Prari and Palpa to American registry and to permit their use in coastwise trade.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the barges Prari and Palpa, owned by the Southern Banana Corporation, a Delaware corporation, shall be admitted to American registry, and shall be entitled to engage in the coastwise trade and to transport merchandise between points in the United States, including Districts, Territories, and possessions thereof embraced within the coastwise laws; said barges and the merchandise transported by them shall not be subject to the provisions of section 27 of the act of June 5, 1920, as amended (46 U. S. C., sec. 883).

With the following committee amendment:

Beginning on page 1, line 3, strike out all after the enacting clause and insert: "That notwithstanding the provisions of section 27 of the act of June 5, 1920, as amended (U. S. C., 1934 ed., Supp. IV, title 46, sec. 883), the barges Prari and Palpa, owned by the Southern Banana Corporation, a Delaware corporation, shall be admitted to American registry, and shall be entitled to engage in the coestwise trade and to transport merchandise between points. the coastwise trade and to transport merchandise between points in the United States, including Districts, Territories, and possessions thereof embraced within the coastwise laws."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PERFECTING CONSOLIDATION OF LIGHTHOUSE SERVICE WITH THE COAST GUARD

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 7288, to perfect the consolidation of the Lighthouse Service with the Coast Guard by authorizing the commissioning, appointment, and enlistment in the Coast Guard, of certain officers, and employees of the Lighthouse Service, and for other purposes.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the President is hereby authorized to commission, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, in the line of the Coast Guard in grades appropriate to their qualifications, experience, and lengths of service, as determined by the Secretary of the Treasury (hereinafter referred to as the "Secretary"), such personnel of the Lighthouse Service as, on June 30, 1939, were serving in professional and scientific grades 1 to 8, inclusive, of the classified civil service, and who, on that date, met the requirements for retirement (except those relating to age and period of service) of section 6 of the act approved June 20, 1918 (40 Stat. 608), as amended and symplemented (II S. C. title 33, sec. 763): 608), as amended and supplemented (U. S. C., title 33, sec. 763): Provided, That no person shall be commissioned under the provisions of this section who does not possess such mental, moral, professional, and physical qualifications as may be prescribed by the Secretary.

fessional, and physical qualifications as may be prescribed by the Secretary.

Sec. 2. Any officer commissioned pursuant to section 1 of this act shall be an extra number in his grade and in the grades to which he may be promoted. He shall take precedence (1) with other officers commissioned in his grade pursuant to section 1 of this act as the Secretary may determine, and (2) with other line officers in his grade in accordance with the respective dates of their commissions in such grade. He shall be eligible for promotion, if otherwise qualified, at such time as the officer in a regular number in line of promotion next above him on the seniority list becomes eligible for promotion; or if there be no such officer in his grade, he shall be eligible for promotion, if otherwise qualified, when a vacancy occurs in the next higher grade: Provided, That an officer commissioned pursuant to section 1 of this act shall be assigned to duty for which he is specially qualified, and professional examinations for promotion given to such officer shall embrace only subjects which pertain to the duty to which he is assigned.

SEC. 3. Each vacancy (1) hereafter occurring in the extra numbers of officers commissioned pursuant to section 1 of this act; (2) existing on the date of the enactment of this act in positions in the Lighthouse Service classified in professional and scientific grades 1 to 8, inclusive, of the classified civil service; and (3) created by the retirement, resignation, death, or separation from the service for any other cause, of personnel described in section 1 of this act who do not possess the qualifications prescribed by the Secretary, or who, being qualified, do not accept a commission thereunder, shall operate to increase by one the total authorized number of line officers of the Coast Guard.

Sec. 4. (a) The President is hereby authorized to commission, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, as chief warrant

SEC. 4. (a) The President is hereby authorized to commission, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, as chief warrant officers of the Coast Guard as the needs of the service may require, such personnel of the Lighthouse Service as, on June 30, 1939, met the requirements for retirement (except those relating to age and period of service) of section 6 of the act approved June 20, 1918, as amended and supplemented, and who possess such mental, moral, professional, and physical qualifications as may be pre-scribed by the Secretary.

(b) Under such regulations as he may prescribe the Secretary is hereby authorized to appoint or cause to be enlisted, in the Coast Guard, in warrant grades or enlisted ratings appropriate to their qualifications, experience, and length of service, such personnel of the Lighthouse Service as, on June 30, 1939, met the requirements for retirement (except those relating to age and period of service) of section 6 of the act approved June 20, 1918, as amended and supplemented.

(c) Chief warrant officers and warrant officers commissioned or appointed under the provisions of this section shall take precedence among themselves as the Secretary may determine, and with other chief warrant and warrant officers in accordance with the dates of their respective commissions or warrants in such grades. SEC. 5. Vacancies created by the retirement, resignation, death, or separation from the service for any other cause, of personnel described in section 4 of this act who do not possess the qualifications prescribed by the Secretary, or who, being qualified, do not accept a commission, appointment, or enlistment thereunder may or may not be filled, in the discretion of the Secretary, in accordance with the existing needs of the service. If such vacancy be filled it shall be filled by commission, appointment, or enlistment in an appropriate chief warrant or warrant grade or rating, as the case may be. the case may be.

SEC. 6. In computing length of service, for the purpose of retirement in the Coast Guard, of any person commissioned, appointed, or enlisted under the provisions of this act, there shall be included all service computable for retirement under the provisions of section 6 of the act of June 20, 1918, as amended and supplementations.

SEC. 7. No person commissioned, appointed, or enlisted in the Coast Guard pursuant to this act shall suffer any reduction in the Coast Guard pursuant to this act shall suffer any reduction in the total of the annual compensation and allowances which he was receiving on the date of his commission, appointment, or enlistment. Upon his retirement from active duty in the Coast Guard, the retired pay of any person so commissioned, appointed, or enlisted, shall not be less than an annuity computed in accordance with the provisions of section 6 of the act of June 20, 1918, as amended and supplemented, substituting, however, for purposes of such computation, the annual compensation which he was receiving on the date of his commission, appointment, or enlistment in the Coast Guard for the average annual pay received by him for the Coast Guard for the average annual pay received by him for the last 5 years of service.

the last 5 years of service.

Sec. 8. All persons commissioned, appointed, or enlisted in the Coast Guard pursuant to this act, shall be subject to all laws and regulations for the government of the Coast Guard, and nothing contained in this act shall be construed to prevent the application to any of such persons of laws and regulations concerning the military discipline of commissioned and warrant officers and enlisted men of the Coast Guard.

Sec. 9. All acts or parts of acts inconsistent with the provisions of this act are hereby repealed.

of this act are hereby repealed.

With the following committee amendments:

Page 1, line 9, after the word "in", strike out the remainder of line 9 and all of the first line on page 2 and insert "grades 1 to 8, inclusive, of the professional and scientific service as defined in the Classification Act of 1923, as amended (U. S. C., 1934 ed., Supp. IV, title 5, sec. 673)."

Page 5, line 2, after the word "filled", strike out the remainder of line 2 and all of lines 3 and 4 and insert "from among the chief warrant, warrant, or enlisted personnel of the Coast Guard."

The committee amendments were agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

COMPACTS BETWEEN ATLANTIC COAST STATES FOR REGULATION OF FISHING

The Clerk called the next business, House Joint Resolution 302, to authorize compacts or agreements between or among the States bordering on the Atlantic Ocean with respect to fishing in the territorial waters and bays and inlets of the Atlantic Ocean on which such States border, and for other purposes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that this bill be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

Mr. BLAND. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I want to say that practically all the commissioners along the Atlantic coast and the territory affected are urging that this bill be passed. There is no objection, because the States are simply permitted to enter into their compacts, and the Congress then ratifies them.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I would prefer that the bill be introduced after the compacts have been tentatively agreed upon, so that we may ratify the compacts then.

Mr. BLAND. I have no objection to its going over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

CONVEYANCE OF CERTAIN LAND TO NEVADA

The Clerk called the next bill, S. 2, authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to convey certain land to the State of Nevada to be used for the purposes of a public park and recreational site and other public purposes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. KEAN. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, this is the same bill that I objected to on Calendar No. 410. In the report I have, the Secretary of the Interior recommends against the bill. Will the gentleman explain this?

Mr. SCRUGHAM. Mr. Speaker, this area is absolutely unnecessary as an adjunct of Federal withdrawal to protect the Boulder Dam reservoir. It is valuable for State-park purposes. At no time in history do I recall a case where the request of a State for cession of an area of desert land of this kind for recreational purposes, has ever been refused. There seems to be some misunderstanding in regard to the bill. It was claimed that part of the area might be used for gambling, and that there might be created unsanitary places on the ground that would contaminate water in the Boulder Dam Reservoir. To meet these objections, there is included in the bill the following language:

In the bill the following language:

In the event the State shall fail to devote such lands to the purposes of a State public park and recreational site within 5 years after the date of enactment of this act, or fail to maintain such land as a public park and recreational site for any period of 5 consecutive years subsequent to its devotion to such use, or devote such lands or any part thereof to other than public use, or shall fail within a reasonable time to authorize and put in effect and practice within said area any laws, rules, and regulations that are put in effect and practice by the Department of the Interior within the Boulder Canyon Reclamation Area relative to gambling, the sale of intoxicating liquors, water pollution, or sanitation, such land and all improvements thereon shall revert to the United States; and in such event the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized and empowed to declare such a forfeiture of the grant, and to assume jurisdiction of such land for forfeiture of the grant, and to assume jurisdiction of such land for national recreational area or national-monument purposes under the act of June 8, 1906.

I am sure that this language amply protects the situation. I sincerely trust that the gentleman will not enter further objection to the passage of the measure by the House. It creates a needed adjunct to the State-park system and will be developed without cost to the Federal Government. It is especially needed as a recreational area for the people of the town of Las Vegas.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. KEAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that this bill be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Jersey?

There was no objection.

SHIPOWNERS' LIABILITY CONVENTION, 1936

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 6881, to implement the provisions of the Shipowners' Liability (sick and injured seamen) Convention, 1936.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That where used in this act—

(a) The term "convention" shall mean Shipowners' Liability (sick and injured seamen) Convention, 1936 (International Labor Organization Draft Convention No. 55, "Concerning the liability of the shipowner in case of sickness, injury, or death of seamen"), as ratified by the President on August 15, 1938, with understandings appended, and effective October 29, 1939.

Be it enacted, etc., That in order to promote interstate commerce, improve the postal service, and provide for military and other purposes, the county of Howard, State of Missouri, be, and is hereby, authorized to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge and approaches thereto across the Missouri River, at a point suitable to the interests of navigation, at or near Petersburg, Mo., in accordance with the provisions of the act entitled "An act to regulate the construction of bridges over navigable waters," approved March 23, 1906, and subject to the conditions and limitations contained in

SEC. 2. There is hereby conferred upon the county of Howard, State of Missouri, all such rights and powers to enter upon lands and to acquire, condemn, occupy, possess, and use real estate and other property needed for the location, construction, maintenance, other property of such bridge and its approaches, as are possessed by and operation of such bridge and its approaches, as are possessed by railroad corporations for railroad purposes or by bridge corporations for bridge purposes in the State in which such real estate or other property is situated, upon making just compensation therefor, to be ascertained and paid according to the laws of such State, and the proceedings therefor shall be the same as in the condemnation or expropriation of property for public purposes in such State.

SEC. 3. The said county of Howard, State of Missouri, is hereby authorized to fix and charge tolls for transit over such bridge, and the rates of toll so fixed shall be the legal rates until changed by the Secretary of War under the authority contained in the act of March 23, 1906. March 23, 1906.

SEC. 4. In fixing the rates of toll to be charged for the use of such bridge the same shall be so adjusted as to provide a fund sufficient to pay for the reasonable cost of maintaining, repairing, and operating the bridge and its approaches under economical management, and to provide a sinking fund sufficient to amortize the cost of such bridge and its approaches, including interest at a rate of not to exceed 5 percent per annum and reasonable financing cost, as approved by the Commissioner of Public Roads, as soon as possible, under reasonable charges, but within a period of not to exceed 25 years from the completion thereof. After a sinking fund sufficient for such amortization shall have been so provided, such bridge shall thereafter be maintained and operated free of tolls. An accurate record of the cost of the bridge and its approaches, the expenditures for maintaining, repairing, and operating the same, and of the daily tolls collected shall be kept and shall be available for the information of all persons interested.

Sec. 5. Notwithstanding any restrictions or limitations imposed by the act entitled "An act to provide that the United States shall aid the States in the construction of rural post roads, and for other purposes," approved July 11, 1916, or by the Federal Highway Act, or by an act amendatory of, or supplemental to either thereof, the Secretary of Agriculture or any other Federal department or agency of the United States Government may extend Federal aid under such acts for the construction of said bridge out of any money allocated to the State of Missouri with the consent of the State highway commission of said State.

TOLL BRIDGE ACROSS THE MISSOURI RIVER, FLORENCE STATION, OMAHA, NEBR.

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 7069, authorizing Douglas County, Nebr., to construct, maintain, and operate a toll bridge across the Missouri River at or near Florence Station, in the city of Omaha, Nebr.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. JENSEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be passed over without prejudice.

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, may I call the attention of the gentleman to the fact that this bridge, while a toll bridge, is a bridge that will amortize itself in 20 years and thereafter become a free

I should further like to call the attention of the gentleman to the fact that there previously existed a franchise for a bridge at this identical place, but the franchise expired with the passage of time and because of the fact that the bridge was not constructed.

I should like to urge the gentleman, if he can see fit to do so, to allow this bill to pass, for the reason that it is a bill which will provide bridge facilities for the people in the northern part of the city of Omaha across the Missouri River into Iowa. I urge the gentleman not to insist upon his request if he can possibly see fit to do so.

Mr. JENSEN. Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the position of the gentleman from Nebraska, but we have two bridges across the river now and they are toll bridges. What the people of Omaha and Council Bluffs want is a free bridge. If we get more toll bridges it will just be further in the future when we do get a free bridge.

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. This bill simply gives to the people of North Omaha the same facilities that are now enjoyed by the people of South Omaha. We have a bridge at the central part, the business part of Omaha, across to Council Bluffs. We have a bridge at South Omaha across the Missouri River into Iowa. We are now asking a franchise for a bridge from the north end of Omaha, or at Florence, Nebr., across the Missouri River into Iowa. I believe this would give to the people of Iowa and Nebraska and the surrounding territory adequate bridge facilities which are very much needed.

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. If the gentleman will yield, the people want this bridge, do they not?

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. The people of North Omaha want it and they state that they need it very much.

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. I hope the gentleman will not insist upon his request.

Mr. JENSEN. I am sorry, but I feel that it is necessary for me to insist upon my request that the bill be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Iowa?

There was no objection.

RAILROAD BRIDGE ACROSS THE MISSOURI RIVER AT OR NEAR RAN-DOLPH, MO.

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 7262, granting the consent of Congress to Frank O. Lowden, James E. Gorman, and Joseph B. Fleming, trustees of the estate of the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railway Co., to construct, maintain, and operate a railroad bridge across the Missouri River at or near Randolph, Mo.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I would like to know the reason for the construction of this new bridge; and in the absence of anyone to explain the purpose of this bill, I ask unanimous consent that the bill go over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

SOLICITATION OF PROCUREMENT OF DIVORCES IN FOREIGN COUNTRIES

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 6051, to prohibit the use of the mails for the solicitation of the procurement of divorces in foreign countries.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There was no objection.

Mr. HEALEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to substitute a similar Senate bill (S. 2245).

There being no objection, the Clerk read the Senate bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That every written or printed card, circular, letter, book, pamphlet, advertisement, or notice of any kind, giving or offering to give information concerning where or how or through whom a divorce may be secured in a foreign country, and designed to solicit business in connection with the procurement designed to solicit business in connection with the procurement thereof, is hereby declared to be nonmailable matter and shall not be conveyed in the mails or delivered from any post office or by any letter carrier. Whoever shall knowingly deposit, or cause to be deposited, for mailing or delivery, anything declared by this section to be nonmailable, or shall knowingly take or cause the same to be taken from the mails for the purpose of circulating or disposing thereof, shall be fined not more than $5,000 or imprisoned for not more than 5 years, or both.

Sec. 2. Nothing herein contained shall be construed to preclude criminal prosecution under the provisions of section 338, title 18.

criminal prosecution under the provisions of section 338, title 18, United States Code (Criminal Code, sec. 215), in any case in which the mails are used by any person in furtherance of any scheme or artifice to defraud, or for obtaining money or property by means of false or fraudulent pretenses, representations, or promises.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

A House bill (H. R. 6051) was laid on the table.

NEW USES FOR ANTHRACITE COAL

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 7189, to authorize research and experiments to find new uses for anthracite

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That there is authorized to be appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $54,500, which shall be available exclusively to enable the Bureau of Mines of the Department of the Interior to conduct research and experiments into new and extended chemical and other uses for anthracite coal and necessary administrative expenses in connection therewith. No part of any appropriation made in pursuance of this act may be obligated after December 31, 1939. The Bureau of Mines shall submit to the Senate and the House of Representatives a report of operations and results obtained under the provisions of this act on the first day of the next regular session of Congress. next regular session of Congress.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

STATUE OF JOHN MARSHALL

The Clerk called the next joint resolution, House Joint Resolution 260, authorizing the removal of the statue of John Marshall from its present site on the Capitol Grounds to a new site in proximity to the Supreme Court Building.

Mr. COSTELLO. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I notice that this bill, along with several others of a similar character, providing for the creation of a monument or the erection of a statue, simply provides that the statue shall be erected at some place in the city of Washington. but we never get a report as to exactly where the statue is to be put. In this particular case the proposal is to remove the statue of John Marshall now in the rear of the Capitol to some other place, either in the grounds of the Supreme Court or elsewhere in the Capitol Grounds. It seems to me to be very inadvisable to authorize the removal of the statue without knowing to what location we intend to move it. Personally, I do not see any suitable location between the Capitol and the Supreme Court Building to which this statue might be moved.

The purpose of moving the statue of John Marshall from the Capitol Grounds apparently, as shown by a bill further down on the calendar, is to provide a place for a statue of George Washington. Whether this exchange of statue is necessary or not I am not in a position to judge, but I do believe the Congress should be informed as to the location at which we are going to put these various statues, fountains, and other monuments of that kind around the city of Washington before we authorize such legislation. You will recall the difficulty we had over the Jefferson Memorial when we had a similar proposition to this, simply authorizing the location of a memorial somewhere in the city of Washington.

Mr. BREWSTER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? Mr. COSTELLO. I yield.

Mr. BREWSTER. The gentleman is clear that this provides for the location to be approved by the Supreme Court. Mr. COSTELLO. I agree with the gentleman that that is quite correct.

Mr. BREWSTER. And the gentleman realizes that the Fine Arts Commission and the Architect of the Capitol both approve of this bill?

Mr. COSTELLO. I understand that likewise is correct. Mr. BREWSTER. The gentleman would not disagree with the purpose of putting John Marshall in the vicinity of the Supreme Court Building?

Mr. COSTELLO. I question very much the advisability or the necessity of moving the statue from its present location, where it has been for a long period of time.

Mr. BREWSTER. The gentleman will agree that not 1 percent of the visitors to the Capitol ever see the statue of John Marshall.

Mr. COSTELLO. I will state to the gentleman that the contrary is quite true, and if he passes by the Capitol on a Sunday afternoon, for example, I will venture to say that he will see as many pictures being taken of the statue of John Marshall at its present location as the dome of the Capitol itself.

Mr. BREWSTER. That disagrees with my observation,

I will say to the gentleman.

Mr. COSTELLO. Further, I do not see any location immediately adjacent to the Supreme Court on which this statue might be placed.

Mr. BREWSTER. The gentleman would accept competent architectural advice on that?

Mr. COSTELLO. I do not set myself up either as one competent to judge the finest architectural location, or to judge beauty, but I can say to the gentleman that I have a holy horror of seeing statues poking out from behind every tree in the Capitol Grounds every time you go for a walk in the Capitol Grounds. This bill provides that this statue could be placed anywhere in the Capitol Grounds.

Mr. ROBERTSON. Mr. Speaker, the Chairman of the Fine Arts Commission told me this morning that his Commission desires to place the John Marshall statue in the grounds of the Supreme Court Building, and then the Commission desires to have the John Q. Ward statue of Washington placed on the west side of the Capitol from which the Marshall statue would be removed. He said when the Marshall statue was removed, it would leave no statue on that side of the Capitol, and so far as the Fine Arts Commission is concerned, it definitely wants to put the Marshall statue on the grounds of the Supreme Court. Whether they can get the consent of the Court to do that I do not know.

Mr. COSTELLO. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that this bill be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

DEVELOPMENT OF FARM UNITS ON PUBLIC LANDS

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to return to Calendar No. 398, H. R. 6372, relating to the development of farm units on public lands under Federal reclamation projects with funds furnished by the Farm Security Administration, and I ask unanimous consent that Senate bill 2410 be substituted for the House bill, with an amendment thereto.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Montana asks unanimous consent to return to Calendar 398, H. R. 6372, and substitute therefor S. 2410, with an amendment. Is there

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the Senate bill. The Clerk read the Senate bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That in order to further cooperation between the Bureau of Reclamation and the Farm Security Administration in the development of farm units on public lands under Federal reclamation projects, the Secretary of the Interior is authorized, in pursuance of cooperative agreements between the Secretary of Agriculture and the Secretary of the Interior, (1) to consider the money or any part of the money made available to settlers or prospective settlers by the Farm Security Administration as all or a portion of the capital required of such settlers under subsection C of section 4 of the act of December 5, 1924 (43 Stat. 702); and (2) where such farm units have been or may be improved by means of funds made available by the Farm Security Administration, to require an entryman of any such unit to enter into a mortgage contract with the Farm Security Administration to repay the value of such improvements thereon before an entry is allowed. Be it enacted, etc., That in order to further cooperation between

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, I offer the following amendment, which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. O'Connos: Page 1, line 3, after the word "that", insert the words "during the fiscal year 1940."

The amendment was agreed to; and the bill as amended was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider laid on the table.

A House bill, H. R. 6372, was laid on the table.

PAYMENT TO EMPLOYEES OF BUREAU OF RECLAMATION FOR MILEAGE

Mr. DEMPSEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to return to Calendar No. 377, H. R. 3391, providing payment to employees, Bureau of Reclamation, for mileage traveled in privately owned automobiles.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Mexico?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Comptroller General is hereby authorized and directed to credit disbursing agents of the Bureau authorized and directed to credit disbursing agents of the Bureau of Reclamation for payments made as mileage reimbursement for the use, during the period of February 14, 1931, to April 30, 1932, of privately owned motor vehicles, in accordance with the act of February 14, 1931 (46 Stat. 1146), which payments were suspended and/or disallowed pursuant to the decision of the Comptroller General of April 30, 1932 (A-41688). In those cases where collections have been made from employees pursuant to such suspension and/or disallowed, refunds are authorized.

Mr. DEMPSEY. Mr. Speaker, I offer the following amendment which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 2, line 3, strike out the period, insert a comma and the following: "Provided, however, That all payments made pursuant to this act shall be at the rate of 4 cents per mile."

The amendment was agreed to, and the bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GRAND CANYON NATIONAL MONUMENT

Mr. MURDOCK of Arizona. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to return to Calendar No. 417, S. 6, to return a portion of the Grand Canyon National Monument to the public domain, vacate the proceedings by which the bill was passed, and correct an amendment.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Arizona asks unanimous consent to return to S. 6, to vacate the proceedings by which the bill was passed, and to offer a perfecting amendment. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill.

Mr. MURDOCK of Arizona. Mr. Speaker, I offer the following amendment which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. MURDOCK of Arizona: Page 3, line 21, strike out all of line 21 and insert "(49 Stat. 1976)."

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to, and the bill as amended was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table. COMMEMORATION OF ONE HUNDRED AND TWENTY-FIFTH ANNI-VERSARY OF WRITING OF THE STAR-SPANGLED BANNER Mr. SASSCER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of Senate Joint Resolution 176, providing for participation by the United States in the celebration to be held at Fort McHenry on September 14, 1939, in celebration of the one hundred and twenty-fifth anniversary of the writing of The Star-Spangled Banner.

The Clerk read the title of the joint resolution.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Maryland?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Reserving the right to object, will the gentleman explain what the cost of this resolution will be?

Mr. SASSCER. Mr. Speaker, on the 14th of September of this year at Fort McHenry in Baltimore we are celebrating the one hundred and twenty-fifth anniversary of the writing of The Star-Spangled Banner. There is a feeling that this is not a matter that is local to Baltimore or local to the great Free State of Maryland, but national in its scope and importance. On the 14th of September, 125 years ago, The Star-Spangled Banner was written by the great poet and lawyer, Francis Scott Key, who was then a prisoner on board a British ship during the bombardment of Fort McHenry. Standing on the deck in the harbor of Baltimore, seeing our American flag waving proudly over Fort McHenry during the bombarding of that fort, he was inspired to write The Star-Spangled Banner.

This resolution calls for a committee to represent the United States Government consisting of the President of the United States, the President of the Senate, the Speaker of the House of Representatives, the two Senators from Maryland, three Members appointed by the President of the United States, three Members appointed by the Speaker of the House. In this age when we are spending so much time considering legislation in connection with, and talking about, subversive influences and un-Americansm, I think it would be particularly unfortunate if a single voice should be raised here in this body objecting to the National Government participating in this ceremony commemorating the writing of The Star-Spangled Banner, that inspiring anthem which, when played, causes all Americans to arise in patriotic reverence.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. How much is it going to

Mr. SASSCER. In answer to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Martin], there is an appropriation of $5,000, none of which is to be used by the committee for compensation or personal expenses of the members. I may add that the State of Maryland is appropriating money, the city of Baltimore is appropriating money, and we felt it would be particularly appropriate for our National Government to participate.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. What committee does this come from?

Mr. SASSCER. From the Committee on the Library, with a report unanimously recommending the passage of the resolution.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Maryland?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the Senate joint resolution, as follows:

Resolved, etc., That, for the purpose of providing for participation by the United States in the celebration of the one hundred and twenty-fifth anniversary of the writing of The Star-Spangled Banner, twenty-litth anniversary of the writing of The Star-Spangled Banner, there is hereby established a commission to be composed of the President of the Senate, the Speaker of the House of Representatives, the United States Senators from the State of Maryland, three Senators to be appointed by the President of the Senate, the Members of the House of Representatives from the State of Maryland, three Members of the House of Representatives to be appointed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives, the Governor of Maryland, the mayor of the city of Baltimore, and three persons to be appointed by the President of the United States. It shall be the duty of such commission to formulate and carry out plans for participation by the United States in the celebration to be held at Fort McHenry on September 14, 1939, in commemoration of such anniversary. The members of such commission shall serve without compensation and shall select a chairman from among their number.

SEC. 2. The commission is authorized to make such expenditures for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of the first section of this joint resolution as it may deem advisable. Expenditures of the commission shall be paid upon the presentation of vouchers approved by the chairman of the commission.

Sec. 3. There is hereby authorized to be appropriated the sum of $5,000 to be expended by the commission for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of the first section of this joint resolution.

SEC. 4. The President is authorized to extend invitations to for-eign governments to be represented by their accredited diplomatic agents at the celebration to be held at Fort McHenry on September 14, 1939, in commemoration of the one hundred and twenty-fifth anniversary of the writing of The Star-Spangled Banner: Provided, That no appropriation shall be granted by the United States for expenses of delegates or for other expenses incurred in connection with such invitation.

With the following committee amendment:

Page 1, line 7, after the word "composed" insert "of the President of the United States."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The Senate joint resolution was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

ERIDGE ACROSS MISSOURI RIVER AT OR NEAR RANDOLPH, MO.

Mr. BELL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to return to Calendar No. 462, H. R. 7262, granting the consent of Congress to Frank O. Lowden, James E. Gorman, and Joseph B. Fleming, trustees of the estate of the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railway Co., to construct, maintain, and operate a railroad bridge across the Missouri River at or near Randolph, Mo.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I would like to know a little about why these trustees are starting to construct this bridge and whether it means to prolong an additional 5 years their trusteeship at the expense of the stockholders and bondholders of the railroad?

Mr. BELL. Mr. Speaker, it will have no effect whatsoever upon the tenure of office of those trustees. All this bill does is to grant the railroad the right to build a bridge across the river near Kansas City. It will mean that about 500 men will have employment there, paid for out of private funds, and not one cent of Government money going into it. That is all it means, that the railroad has the right to build the bridge across the river. The War Department, the Department of Public Roads, and everybody has consented to it. It will have no effect whatsoever on the tenure of office of these trustees.

Mr. SABATH. I ask the usual question that is asked by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Rich] where will these trustees of the railroad get the money to build this bridge?

Mr. BELL. They have the money and are ready to spend it. Mr. SABATH. Why do they not give up the trusteeship and turn the railroad over to the bondholders and stockholders that own the railroad if the money is forthcoming? Can the gentleman explain that?

Mr. BELL. I cannot explain that. I do not know anything about their trusteeship except that I would like to have this bridge in order to give employment to a lot of good men down in my district and help keep them off of relief.

Mr. SABATH. I am not opposed to reemploying 500 men. will be only delighted if they will find employment, but I doubt very much whether the gentleman's constituents will have an opportunity to get any of this work while it is under the trusteeship of these three Republicans.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

LXXXIV-

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as

Be it enacted, etc., That the consent of Congress is hereby granted to Frank O. Lowden, James E. Gorman, and Joseph B. Fleming, trustees of the estate of the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railway Co., their successors and assigns, to construct, maintain, and operate a railroad bridge and approaches thereto across the Missouri River, at a point suitable to the interests of navigation, at or near Randolph, Mo., near river mile 370, as located by the Secretary of War in accordance with the provisions of the act entitled "An act to regulate the construction of bridges over navigable waters," approved March 23, 1906, and subject to the conditions and limitations contained in this act.

the conditions and limitations contained in this act.

SEC. 3. The right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

expressly reserved.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

Mrs. NORTON rose.

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks it proper to make the statement that the gentlewoman from New Jersey is going to ask unanimous consent that may save recognition on the part of the Chair on a motion to suspend the rules.

The gentlewoman from New Jersey is recognized.

Mrs. NORTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill (H. R. 2900) to amend the act entitled "An act to establish a Civilian Conservation Corps, and for other purposes", approved June 28, 1937, as amended.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from New Jersey?

There being no objection the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 1 of the act entitled "An act to establish a Civilian Conservation Corps, and for other purposes", approved June 28, 1937 (50 Stat. 319), as amended, is amended by striking out the provise which reads "Provided, That the provisions of this act shall continue for the period of 3 years after July 1, 1937, and no longer" and that a period be substituted for the colon immediately preceding this provise.

"SIC. 3. Section 5 of said act is amended by striking out the words "without regard to civil-service laws and regulations" and inserting in lieu thereof the following: "in accordance with the civil-service laws and regulations made thereunder and their compensation shall be fixed in accordance with the Classification Act of 1923, as amended: Provided, That employees of the Civilian Conservation Corps who have been continuously employed for a least servation Corps who have been continuously employed for at least 6 months prior to the effective date of this act, and who do not have a competitive classified civil-service status appropriate for the positions to be occupied, shall be permitted to acquire such a status (1) upon recommendation by the Director of the corps the positions to be occupied, shall be permitted to acquire such a status (1) upon recommendation by the Director of the corps and certification by him to the Civil Service Commission that such persons have rendered satisfactory service in said corps for not less than 6 months and (2) upon passing a suitable noncompetitive examination prescribed by the Commission, said examination to be given within a period of 10 months after the effective date of this act, and those employees who do not receive an eligible rating as the result of said examinations shall be dropped from the rolls not later than 2 years subsequent to the date the Director is notified of their failure to receive an eligible rating: Provided further, That no employee otherwise qualifying shall be dismissed because of failure to comply with age provisions which would normally apply on a competitive examination: Provided further, That the provisions of this section shall not apply to Reserve officers on active duty with the corps, enrollees of the corps, or unskilled laborers: And provided further, That, notwithstanding any contrary provisions of this or any other act, the employment of Indians shall be in accordance with section 12 of the act of June 18, 1934 (48 Stat. 984).

Sec. 4. Section 13 of said act is amended by substituting a colon for a period after the last word in the section and inserting the following: "Provided, That the Director may designate an appropriate official seal for the corps which shall be judicially noticed and which shall be preserved in the custody of the Director."

Sec. 5. This act shall be immediately effective.

SEC. 5. This act shall be immediately effective.

With the following committee amendment:

Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"That section 1 of the act entitled 'An act to establish a Civilian That section 1 of the act entitled An act to establish a Civillan Conservation Corps, and for other purposes, approved June 28, 1937 (50 Stat. 319), as amended, is amended by striking out of the second proviso the words 'for the period of 3 years after July 1, 1937, and no longer' and inserting in lieu thereof the words 'until July 1, 1945.' "SEC. 3. This act shall be immediately effective."

Mrs. NORTON. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment to the committee amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mrs. Norton: On page 3, line 23, after the word "longer", strike out "until July 1, 1945" and insert "July 1, 1943."

The amendment to the committee amendment was agreed to. The committee amendment, as amended, was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

BONNEVILLE DAM

The SPEAKER. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Mansfield].

Mr. MANSFIELD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill (H. R. 7270) to amend the Bonneville Project Act.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, will the gentleman from Texas explain the purpose of the bill?

Mr. MANSFIELD. The Bonneville Act of a few years ago authorized the appointment of an administrator. One was appointed. He has since died. The pending bill extends the provisions of the original act and provides for an assistant administrator and an engineer in addition.

Mr. RICH. We are now to have an administrator and an assistant administrator?

Mr. MANSFIELD. That is the purpose of the bill.

Mr. RICH. Just in charge of the Bonneville Dam?

Mr. MANSFIELD. No; the extension lines. It has nothing to do with the dam.

Mr. RICH. It seems to me we are putting in assistant administrators not only in Cabinet offices but in all other Government organizations. It seems to me it is time we tried to eliminate some of these extra employees instead of creating

Mr. MANSFIELD. I agree with the gentleman on the general proposition, but I think this is more urgent than some of the others.

Mr. RICH. If we let this one go through will the gentleman from Texas try to cut out some that are not so important?

Mr. MANSFIELD. I will endeavor to cut out all I can.

Mr. RICH. It seems to me if the gentleman uses his good offices to that effect we could eliminate a lot of these extra employees.

Mr. MANSFIELD. I think I can join with the gentleman from Pennsylvania on a good many of them.

Mr. RICH. Let us see that we get some action on cutting out some of these jobs.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 2 (a) of chapter 720 of the act of the Seventy-fifth Congress, first session (50 Stat. 731, 732), is hereby amended by inserting after the second sentence ending "in the vicinity of the Bonneville project.", the following sentence: "The Secretary of the Interior shall also appoint, without regard to the civil-service laws, an Assistant Administrator, chief engineer, and general counsel, and shall fix the compensation of each at not exceeding $9,000 per annum. The Assistant Administrator shall perform the duties and exercise the powers of the Administrator, in the event of the absence or sickness of the Administrator, until such absence or sickness shall cease, and, in the event of a vacancy in the office of Administrator until a successor is appointed."

SEC. 2. Section 2 (a) of the said chapter is hereby further amended by adding at the end thereof the following sentences:
"The office of the Administrator of the Bonneville project is hereby constituted an office in the Department of the Interior and shall "The office of the Administrator of the Bonneville project is hereby constituted an office in the Department of the Interior and shall be under the jurisdiction and control of the Secretary of the Interior. All functions vested in the Administrator of the Bonneville project under this act may be exercised by the Secretary of the Interior and, subject to his supervision and direction, by the Administrator and other personnel of the project."

SEC. 3. Section 4 (b) of the said chapter is hereby amended by striking out the words and figures "January 1, 1941" wherever they occur therein and by substituting in lieu thereof the words and figures "January 1, 1942."

With the following committee amendments:

On page 2, line 1, after the word "administrator", insert "and a."
On page 2, line 1, strike out the words "and general counsel."
On page 2, line 2, strike out "$9,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$7,500."

The committee amendments were agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

RIVER AND HARBOR PROJECTS

Mr. MANSFIELD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill (H. R. 7411) authorizing the construction, repair, and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, will the gentleman from Texas explain

Mr. MANSFIELD. I may state, Mr. Speaker, that the river and harbor bill recently passed by the House has been sidetracked in the Senate. Senator BALLEY introduced in the Senate a bill similar to the pending bill, and at his suggestion I introduced this bill in the House. It provides for the clarification of some of the matters that were embraced in the other bill, but does not authorize the expenditure of funds from the Federal Treasury, except nominal sums for preliminary examinations.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MANSFIELD. Gladly.

Mr. RANKIN. Let me say to the chairman of the Committee on Rivers and Harbors that this bill cannot become a law at this session of Congress. The bill introduced by Senator Balley was referred to the Senate Committee on Commerce. That committee met and discussed it and came to the very definite conclusion that they did not want to pass that bill because it eliminated, so to speak, a large number of projects in the other bill.

Mr. MANSFIELD. The gentleman is entirely mistaken.

Mr. RANKIN. So this bill was reported out. I am not going to object, but I want to serve notice that if this bill passes the House it will not pass the other body at this session of Congress.

Mr. MANSFIELD. This bill has not been opposed by the Committee on Commerce of the Senate. The original river and harbor bill was postponed until January by a majority vote of the Commerce Committee.

Mr. RANKIN. But I understand that this very proposition was taken up by the chairman of the Senate Commerce Committee, Senator Balley, and it was the consensus of opinion of the Commerce Committee of the Senate that the entire matter should go over until January. So if this bill passed it would simply be held up in the Senate.

Mr. MANSFIELD. My information is entirely different from that of the gentleman.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, may I ask the gentleman from Texas how we are going to have a number of surveys made that will not cost anything? I have never seen the Government make a survey that did not cost something.

Mr. MANSFIELD. These are preliminary surveys.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, for the time being I shall object, until we can see what the Senate committee does about it. I object to the consideration of the bill at this time.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, I do not think this bill ought to be taken up in this way, at this time; therefore I object for the time being.

ENCOURAGING TRAVEL IN THE UNITED STATES

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill (H. R. 6884) to encourage travel in the United States, and for other purposes.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, will the gentleman explain the bill?

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, this is a bill to promote and encourage travel in the United States by people from foreign countries and has been unanimously reported by the House Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce. By legislation in 1935 the National Park Service was authorized to engage in certain of these activities in the way of collecting and disseminating information regarding our national parks and to encourage travel to them. It is desired to expand that service to take in all places and points of interest in the United States. Every country on the continent but the United States has what is known as a travel bureau. These countries held a conference in San Francisco in April, 21 American countries being officially represented by travel bureaus, and the United States was the only country that was not officially represented there.

Under this bill the National Park Service will collect. publish, and disseminate information with respect to places of interest, routes, transportation facilities, accommodations, and other matters advantageous for the purpose of developing travel from other countries to the United States. The Service may prepare graphic materials in foreign languages and encourage the use of American registered ships and planes. The existing facilities of the United States Government in foreign countries will be employed in the distribution of this material.

It is a startling fact that the balance of travel against this country is between four and five hundred million dollars a year. That is, Americans going from this country to other countries spend four to five hundred million dollars more every year as compared with the tourists and visitors from those countries to the United States, when, as a matter of fact, no country in the world equals this in its great natural attractions.

Mr. MURDOCK of Arizona. Will the gentleman yield? Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. I yield to the gentleman from Arizona.

Mr. MURDOCK of Arizona. I wish to emphasize what the gentleman from Colorado has just said in this respect. that it is possible to name 50 spots in our Rocky Mountains which are worth traveling around the earth to see. More than one portion of the whole western highlands surpass anything that can be found in Switzerland. I have received hundreds of letters from chambers of commerce and civic bodies endorsing this legislation, and I sincerely trust that it will be enacted today.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. I thank the gentleman from Arizona for his contribution, and I may add that similar interest has been displayed in this legislation by such bodies all over the United States.

The introduction of this bill originally involved the creation of a separate bureau. Thanks to the carpenter work of the able and distinguished gentleman from New York [Mr. Wadsworth], the bureau part of it was amputated from the bill and this bill merely means an expansion in the National Park Service, plus an advisory committee of six to represent the Departments of State, Agriculture, Commerce, the Interstate Commerce Commission, the Civil Aeronautics Authority, and the United States Maritime Commission, appointed by the Secretary of the Interior but designated by the departments, and not to exceed six additional members to be appointed by the Secretary of the Interior, representative of the various sections of the Nation, including transportation and accommodation agencies. gentleman will not draw any salary, although if called for an annual conference to Washington they would receive their expenses for coming here to confer.

Mr. RICH. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. RICH. Every State now has an organization within the State that advertises that particular State and the beauties and glories of the roads, trails, and parks.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. About 40 of them have, but there is no coordination between the States. The hotels, the transportation lines, and various civic bodies are interested in this matter. It is felt it would be of immense value to the United States to have these activities coordinated and directed by the National Park Service.

Mr. RICH. The National Park Service now is advertising

all the parks of the United States.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. That is limited to parks, but we have a lot of things in the United States that are not national parks, which are well worth seeing.

Mr. RICH. Every railroad in the country has its travel bureau that does a lot of advertising.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. But the gentleman can see that the more of them he mentions the greater is the need of coordination between them.

Mr. RICH. Where are you going to do this advertisingin America? Where are you going to get the money to Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. We are going to do it in America and in foreign countries both.

Mr. RICH. The organization that was set up, which was cut out by the gentleman from New York, would cost how much? In other words, what is it going to cost to do this advertising of America when we already have all these bureaus and organizations now advertising America, American parks, and American scenery?

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. I may say that the National Park Service is now spending about $70,000 a year on the activities that were authorized by an act of Congress in 1935. This will cost about $30,000 a year more, and will perform a vastly greater and more effective service, and will include many places of great interest that are not within the national parks.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. I yield to the gentleman from

Mr. WADSWORTH. May I call the attention of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. RICH] to the fact that every nation or nearly every nation on the face of the globe advertises its attractions and its beauties. They do this by governmental action. For example, the Government at Ottawa, Canada, appropriates $300,000 a year to attract tourists to Canada and the sum of $280,000,000 was spent by American tourists in Canada last year. The purpose of this centralization or coordination is to put the proper material in the hands of our embassies and our legations in foreign countries, so that the foreigner who may be contemplating taking a vacation tour may be attracted to the United States. This material has to be translated into his language. It is the purpose of the Park Service to arrange the translating and coordination of all this information. Most of it will come from the States to this organization in Washington. The State of New York, for example, spends $200,000 a year on this very thing. Other States do like-

Mr. RICH. The point I make in reference to this bill is that the State of New York is spending $200,000, the State of New Mexico, the State of Colorado, the State of Maine, the State of Pennsylvania, and all these States are spending a large amount of money. We are going to duplicate the work that is being done by those States. We duplicate the cost, and where are you going to get the money?

Mr. WADSWORTH. Not at all. That is where the gentleman is mistaken. It is to gather in all that information and make it available, not only to the whole of the United States, but to Europe and South America.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. May I say to the gentleman that there are 57 countries that have over 350 agencies in this country working to get our people and their money to come to their countries, but we have no organization seeking to bring any of the tourist trade here. The consequence is that we are practically $500,000,000 in the red annually on national tourist travel.

Mr. RICH. Five hundred million dollars in the red? Does the gentleman know that you went $3,500,000,000 in the red this last year and you will go $4,500,000,000 in the red this year; yet you come in here with bill after bill after bill duplicating the work that we are doing in this country. It seems to me it is about time you stopped it.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. No; we are going to get some of those hundreds of millions of dollars back, under this bill, at an added cost of only $30,000.

Mr. Speaker, the following letter from Secretary Ickes summarizes the existing situation with regard to foreign travel to this country and the great need for this legislation. While the letter was written with regard to H. R. 5412, the predecessor of the pending bill, the only material change made is the elimination of a separate bureau, and the vesting of jurisdiction of the activity in the National Park Service, as I stated earlier in my remarks. The letter of the Secretary reads as follows:

> THE SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR, Washington, June 13, 1939.

Hon. John A. Martin,

Member of Congress, Washington, D. C.
My Dear Congressman Martin: The bill to encourage travel to and within the United States, concerning which I telephoned you recently, would establish for our Government what every other advanced nation in the world already has.

While the Department of the Interior administers a travel bureau that was the natural outgrowth of the National Park Service, it lacks the coordinating function that is essential to the full utiliza lacks the coordinating function that is essential to the full utilization of such an agency. The proposed legislation, embodied in H. R. 5412, if enacted, would remedy this deficiency.

The measure now before the Congress would permit the broad expansion of the activities of the Government in the further development of a great industry. The United States now has an adverse travel trade balance in excess of $500,000,000 annually. The tide of travel out of the United States, particularly through Europe, Canada, and, more recently, the countries of Latin America, has increased enormously during the last few decades. Other nations realize this, and, through their own nationally established travel bureaus, have sought systematically to attract as large a share of this lucrative business as they can contrive. We alone seem to have this lucrative business as they can contrive, been backward in this respect. We alone seem to have been backward in this respect.

We had recently a graphic instance of how other governments regard the work of their travel bureaus. This was at the inter-American Travel Congress recently held in San Francisco, where the delegates of the United States met the travel representatives of the 20 other American republics and the Dominion of Canada. Each of these nations and the Canadian Commonwealth has already established official travel bureaus. Our country was the only one not reporting an officially accredited travel agency. Apparently all others are keenly alive to the development of travel as a great national industry yielding consistently increasing revenues.

national industry yielding consistently increasing revenues.

A particularly striking instance is furnished by Canada, which A particularly striking instance is furnished by Canada, which appropriates around $300,000 annually for the maintenance of the Canadian Travel Bureau. Largely as a result of the promotional activities of this bureau, an average of 17,000,000 Americans visit Canada each year and spend in the Dominion more than $280,000,000. Canada is a nation of only 12,000,000 people, and while its scenic areas are beautiful, their extent and diversity are not comparable to our own.

It seems unquestionable that to leave this subject to the States, acting alone, will always fall badly short of the need. A number of them have their own travel agencies, supported by State funds, but not unnaturally these devote themselves to their own local but not unnaturally these devote themselves to their own local facilities and attractions. There is no agency at present that synchronizes, coordinates, and cooperates with these various States and private agencies. The object of this proposed legislation is not to substitute for these existing agencies but to cooperate with and extend their useful functions by making them universally available to the traveling public. The argument for exploiting the travel resources of any one of the States applies, with cumulatively greater force, to the present proposal for the establishment of an official Federal bureau that would act not only as a clearing house of information between the States but as the principal coordinating agency for assembling and spreading information of our travel resources as a whole Nation.

resources as a whole Nation.

The legislation to implement all this is inherent in the present bill, H. R. 5412, a copy of which is attached. It calls for an appropriation of only $100,000 for the first year of operation. The nucleus of organization necessary already exists and is functioning efficiently. The whole project is practical and realistic. For an appropriation far less than that of many smaller governments, it promises rich, realizable returns. It is sound economics to give to our travel industry the full encouragement and assistance of to our travel industry the full encouragement and assistance of our Government.

This proposed legislation has been approved by the President, the Budget, the State, Agriculture, and Interior Departments, by the Maritime Commission and the Civil Aeronautics Authority. It has a favorable report from the Budget Bureau.

This legislation also has approval of many local, private, as well as State groups, interested in travel development. We have spent much for the development of our commerce. Under the methods proposed by this bill, we can, judging by the results obtained by other pations, reen large dividends from this mediants business. other nations, reap large dividends from this moderate investment in travel advancement.

Sincerely yours.

HAROLD L. ICKES, Secretary of the Interior.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. MARTIN]?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior is authorized and directed, through the National Park Service, to encourage, promote, and develop travel within the United States, its Territories and possessions, providing such activities do not compete tories and possessions, providing such activities do not compete with the activities of private agencies; and to administer all exist-ing travel-promotion functions of the Department of the Interior through such Service.

SEC. 2. In carrying out the purposes of this act, the Secretary is authorized to cooperate with public and private tourist, travel, and other agencies in the display of exhibits, and in the collection, publication, and dissemination of information with respect to places of interest, routes, transportation facilities, accommodations, and such other matters as he deems advisable and advantageous for the purpose of enguiraring prompting or developing such and such other matters as he deems advisable and advantageous for the purpose of encouraging, promoting, or developing such travel. Nothing in this act shall prohibit the preparation of graphic materials in foreign languages, designed to call attention to the attractions and places of interest in the United States and to encourage the use of American registered ships and planes. The existing facilities of the United States Government in foreign countries are hereby authorized to assist in the distribution of this material. The Secretary may enter into contracts with private countries are hereby authorized to assist in the distribution of this material. The Secretary may enter into contracts with private publishers for such printing and binding as he may deem advisable in carrying out the purposes of this act. The Secretary is also authorized to make charges for any publications made available to the public pursuant to this act; and any proceeds from the sale of publications produced by the expenditure of contributed funds shall continue to be available for printing and binding as aforesaid.

Sec. 3. The Secretary of the Interior is authorized to create an advisory committee to consist of a representative from each of the

SEC. 3. The Secretary of the Interior is authorized to create an advisory committee to consist of a representative from each of the Departments of State, Agriculture, and Commerce, the Civil Aeronautics Authority, and the United States Maritime Commission, as may be designated by such Departments or agencies, respectively, and such additional members, representatives of the various sections of the Nation, including transportation and accommodations agentics, not to aveed six members, to be appointed by the Secretary. cies, not to exceed six members, to be appointed by the Secretary of the Interior to serve at his pleasure. Meetings of the Board shall be held at the request of the Secretary for the purpose of making recommendations concerning the promotion of tourist travel under the provisions of this act. The members of the Board travel under the provisions of this act. The members of the Board shall receive no compensation for their services as members, but shall be entitled to reimbursement for such necessary travel and other expenses in connection with their attendance at Board meetings as may be authorized or approved by the Secretary.

SEC. 4. In the performance of his functions and duties under the provisions of this act, the Secretary of the Interior is authorized.

(a) To prescribe, amend, and repeal such rules and regulations as he may deem necessary, and to accept contributions for carrying out the purposes of this act; and

(b) To employ without regard to the civil-service laws, but subject to the Classification Act of 1923, as amended, one special assistant and not to exceed five artists and illustrators.

SEC. 5. There is authorized to be appropriated annually not to exceed the sum of $100,000 to carry out the provisions of this act.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

DEVILS DEN SPRINGS, DECATUR COUNTY, GA.

Mr. COX. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to return to Calendar No. 455 on the Consent Calendar the bill (H. R. 4040) declaring Devils Den Springs, in Decatur County, Ga., to be nonnavigable for immediate consideration.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Georgia?

Mr. GEYER of California. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, may we have an explanation of this bill?

Mr. COX. Mr. Speaker, this bill concerns a stream that rises in a spring near the banks of the Flint River. The entire body of water is not more than half as large as this Capitol. Where the spring runs into the Flint River the stream is about 8 to 10 feet wide, or was the last time I saw it. It is not deep enough to accommodate an ordinary skiff that carries the usual kicker. I have been there many times, and in order to get in we ordinarily have to push our little flatboat into the mouth of the stream. The stream runs back in the forest and winds around for some three or four hundred yards, but altogether the entire body of water is not more than half as large as the ground on which this Capitol rests. The stream could not be navigable in the sense that the word is understood for any purpose in the world.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. If the gentleman will yield, is the fishing good in that creek?

Mr. COX. Yes; it is good.

Mr. GEYER of California. What is the object of having an act of Congress to declare the stream nonnavigable? Why is that necessary?

Mr. COX. That is to keep out people, very frankly, who come in from many miles away and bring their little boats in there and dynamite the stream and destroy the fish. This is for the purpose of keeping such persons out. Arrangements have been made or will be made for anybody in the neighborhood wishing to fish in the stream to enjoy that privilege. The man who owns it has no purpose in the world of denying the public the pleasure of using the stream for fishing purposes, and this bill is to protect it against those persons who come in in the nighttime and dynamite the waters; and that is all.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Georgia?

Mr. GEYER of California. I object, Mr. Speaker.

CITY OF PIERRE, S. DAK.

Mr. MUNDT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill (H. R. 6446) amending section 4 of the act entitled "An act to authorize the city of Pierre, S. Dak., to construct, equip, maintain, and operate on Farm Island, S. Dak., certain amusement and recreational facilities; to charge for the use thereof; and for other purposes."

The SPEAKER. Is this a bill that was on the Consent Calendar for consideration?

Mr. MUNDT. Yes, Mr. Speaker; it was Calendar No. 471. The SPEAKER. Was it eligible for call on the calendar today.

Mr. MUNDT. No.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the title of the bill.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from South Dakota?

Mr. SCHULTE. I object, Mr. Speaker.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my own remarks on the tourist travel bill under consideration this afternoon and to include a letter on the bill from the Secretary of the Interior.

The SPEAKER. Is three objection to the request of the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. MARTIN]?

There was no objection.

GDYNIA AMERICA LINE, INC.

Mr. KEOGH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to return to the consideration of the bill H. R. 3087, for the relief of the Gdynia America Line, Inc., of New York City, N. Y., No. 307 on the Private Calendar.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York [Mr. KEOGH]?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, may I ask the gentleman if that bill was objected to by a Member and is that Member now on the floor?

Mr. KEOGH. It was objected to by the from California [Mr. Costello]. I have taken the matter up with him. I am informed that the objection on the other side came as the result of the objection of the gentleman from California [Mr. Costello].

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to the Gdynia America Line, Inc., of New York City, N. Y., the sum of $2,520, in full payment for duplicate revenue stamps required to be attached to the manifests of the motorship Batory belonging to said corporation, the original revenue stamps having been lost or destroyed in some unknown manner: Provided, That the Secretary of the Treasury shall require the said corporation to give a surety bond to the United States in the amount of $2,520 to indemnify the Government in the event said original revenue stamps are recovered, such bond to run for such period of time as the Secretary of the Treasury shall prescribe.

With the following committee amendments:

Page 1, line 7, strike out the word "payment" and insert "in full settlement of all claims against United States."

Page 2, line 6, after "prescribe", insert "Provided further, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or attorney on account of services rendered in connection with this claim, and the same shall be unlawful, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding states.

The committee amendments were agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PRIVILEGE OF RETIREMENT FOR DISABILITY TO CERTAIN JUDGES

Mr. WALTER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill S. 1282, to extend the privilege of retirement for disability to judges appointed to hold office during good behavior, No. 425 on the Consent

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Walter]?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object. I understand this is agreeable to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Wolcott], who was in charge of the Consent Calendar?

Mr. WALTER. This bill was passed over without prejudice. Since that time I have talked with the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Wolcott]. As a matter of fact, he instructed me to advise you he did not object to the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WALTER]?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as

Be it enacted, etc., That any judge or justice of any court of the United States, appointed to hold office during good behavior, who becomes unable because of permanent disability to perform the duties of his office, may retire from regular active service on the bench and the President shall thereupon be authorized to appoint a successor.

SEC. 2. Any district or circuit judge, other than a senior circuit judge, who desires to retire under the provisions of this act shall certify his disability in writing and shall furnish a like certificate made by the senior circuit judge of the judicial circuit in which the court of which he is a member is situated. Any Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, other than the Chief Justice of the United States, who desires to retire under the Chief Justice of this act shall certify his disability in writing and shall furnish a like certificate made by the Chief Justice of the United States. If the Chief Justice of the United States retires under the provisions of this act he need not furnish any certificate in addition to his own. Any judge of the Court of Claims, other than the chief justice, any judge of the United States Customs Court, or any judge of the United States Court of Customs and Patent Appeals, other than the presiding judge of the United States Court of Customs and Patent Appeals, who desires to retire under the provisions of this act shall certify his disability in writing and the United States Court of Customs and Patent Appeals, who desires to retire under the provisions of this act shall certify his disability in writing and provisions of this act shall certify his disability in writing and shall furnish a like certificate made by the chief justice of the Court of Claims, if he be a judge of the Court of Claims, or by the presiding judge of the United States Court of Customs and Patent Appeals, if he be a judge of the United States Customs Court or the United States Court of Customs and Patent Appeals. Any other judge or justice who desires to retire under the provisions of this act shall certify his disability in writing and shall furnish a like certificate made by the Chief Justice of the United States.

SEC. 3. Any judge or justice who retires under the provisions of this act, after he has served less than 10 years, shall receive annually, in equal monthly installments, during the remainder of his life, a sum equal to one-half of the annual salary he is receiving at the date of retirement; and any judge or justice who retires under the provisions of this act, after he has served 10 years or more, shall receive in like manner during the remainder of his life the salary he is receiving at the date of retirement.

SEC. 4. The term "senior circuit judge," as used in this act, includes the chief justice of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia. The term "judicial circuit," as used in this act, includes the District of Columbia.

REFUNDING OF NEGOTIABLE BONDED INDEBTEDNESS OF MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS IN ALASKA

Mr. DIMOND. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill (H. R. 5919) to provide for the refunding of the negotiable bonded indebtedness of municipal corporations and public-utility districts in the Territory of Alaska.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the Delegate from Alaska?

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I understand that some Members of Congress have presented a bill whereby municipalities can go into bankruptcy, thereby cutting down their indebtedness. Does this bill do anything of that kind?

Mr. DIMOND. No. This permits cities in Alaska to refund their bonded indebtedness, thereby saving some interest

Mr. RICH. There is no intent or purpose of any of the municipalities to try to get rid of their obligations?

Mr. DIMOND. No; indeed it is just the opposite. Not a single bond of any Alaska city has been in default, to my knowledge.

The purpose of the bill is to provide for the refunding of the bonds of municipal corporations and public-utility districts in the Territory of Alaska, and to validate bonds which have heretofore been issued by any municipal corporation or any public-utility district in the Territory.

Under the provisions of the act approved August 24, 1912, commonly called the Organic Act of Alaska, municipal corporations of the Territory were forbidden to incur any bonded indebtedness without the express consent or authority of Congress. Thereafter, from time to time, by special acts, Congress authorized several cities of Alaska to incur bonded indebtedness in order to undertake the construction of schoolhouses, the purchase or installation of waterworks, the pavement of streets, or other kindred projects for the public use and benefit. Bonds were accordingly issued by the cities so authorized to incur indebtedness, and some of those bonds are still outstanding; and some of the bonds, by modern standards, bear exceptionally high rates of interest.

By an act approved May 28, 1936, Congress authorized any municipal corporation in Alaska to incur bonded indebtedness and issue negotiable bonds for necessary and useful public works, in amount not to exceed 10 percent of the aggregate taxable value of the real and personal property of the city subject to taxation. Provision was made in this act, as was the case with respect to most of the prior acts, that before any such bonded indebtedness could be incurred it must be approved by at least 65 percent of the taxpayers of the city, who should vote at a special election to be called for the purpose of determining whether or not the indebtedness should be incurred and the bonds issued. In fact, all municipal bonds heretofore issued in Alaska have been authorized by more than a majority vote of the taxpayers of the city of issuance, or the voting residents of a city. By a subsequent act, approved May 31, 1938, like powers with respect to bonded indebtedness were conferred upon Alaska public-utility districts, to be exercised under like circumstances. Bonds have been issued under the provisions of these acts and are now outstanding.

To the best of my knowledge and belief, none of the bonds so issued by Alaska cities or public-utility districts is in default, but the interest charges thereon are in some cases, under present conditions, excessive. It would, therefore, be much to the financial advantage of some of the municipalities of Alaska, where the terms of the bonds permit, to refund the outstanding bonds through the issue of bonds at lower rates of interest. By such refunding operations considerable savings in interest charges can be made by several Alaska cities. I have recently received a telegram from Mr. Harry I. Lucas, mayor of Juneau, the capital city of Alaska, stating that if this bill is enacted the city of Juneau will be able to save approximately $3,000 per year in interest on its bonded indebtedness. There is in this no suggestion, or thought, or inference of default, or bankruptcy, or failure or refusal to comply with the terms and provisions of the outstanding bonds. In every instance every promise made in the bonds will be faithfully kept. But if the cities and public-utility districts of Alaska may justly and legally, pay off the outstanding bonds through the issue of bonds bearing a lower rate of interest, they should be accorded that right. An act of Congress is necessary. In most if not all of the States such refunding is authorized as a matter of course.

The bill contains another provision for the validation of outstanding bonds. Such legislation has been enacted in a large number of States in order to cure technical omissions or defects with respect to the municipal bonds of the State. No such defect is known to exist as concerns any municipal or public-utility district bonds in Alaska, but it is possible that errors may have been made, or a full and complete record not kept, with respect to the calling of a bond election, or in some other purely technical matter, relating to an issue of bonds. The validation of bonds as proposed in this bill would aid in obtaining a low rate of interest in refunding operations.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the Delegate from Alaska?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That whenever any municipal corporation or any public-utility district in the Territory of Alaska shall have outstanding any negotiable bonded indebtedness, which indebtedness is subject at the option of the municipal corporation or public-utility district to be paid or redeemed, it shall be lawful for said municipal corporation or public-utility district through its common council or board of directors, or other governing body, as the case may be, to issue its negotiable bonds and to sell such bonds and apply the proceeds of the sale in payment of the bonded indebtedness for the payment of which such refunding bonds are issued. No election shall be required to authorize the issuance and sale of such refunding bonds and the issuance and sale thereof may be authorized, and all proceedings with reference thereto prescribed, by ordinance or resolution of the common council, or the board of directors, or other governing body, of the municipal corporation or public-utility district, as the case may be, at any legally called meeting thereof. Such refunding bonds shall not be subject to the limitations of bonded indebtedness prescribed by Public Law No. 626, Seventy-fourth Congress (49 Stat. 1388), as amended, or by the provisions of Public Law No. 563, Seventy-fifth Congress (52 Stat. 589), or by any other debt-limitations law applicable to municipal corporations or public-utility districts in the Territory of Alaska: Provided, That the total debt of the municipal corporation or public-utility district shall not be increased by such refunding operations.

SEC. 2. Bonds issued pursuant to this act shall bear such date or dates, may be in such denominations, may mature in such amounts at such time or times, not exceeding 30 years from the date thereof, may be payable at such place or places, may be sold at either public or private sale, may be redeemable (either with or without premium) or nonredeemable, may carry such registration pri may be executed by such officers and in such manner, as shall be prescribed by the common council or board of directors or other governing body of the municipality or public-utility district issuing the bonds. In case any of the officers whose signatures appear on the bonds or coupons shall cease to be such officers before delivery of such bonds, such signatures, whether manual or facsimile, shall, nevertheless, be valid and sufficient for all purposes, the same as if such officers had remained in office until such delivery. The bonds so issued shall bear interest at a rate to be fixed by the governing body of the municipality issuing the same, not to exceed, however, 6 percent per annum payable semiannually, and in no event to exceed the rate of interest paid on the bonded indebtedness to be so refunded. All such bonds on the bonded indebtedness to be so refunded. All such bonds shall be sold for not less than the principal amount thereof plus accrued interest

SEC. 3. It shall be the duty of the governing body of every municipal corporation or public-utility district which incurs such bonded indebtedness under the authority of this act to levy or to cause to be levied each year during the life of such outstand-ing bonds, taxes in amounts sufficient to seasonably provide for payment of and to pay all interest on and the principal of such obligations as they respectively accrue and mature: Provided, however, That the provisions of this section shall not apply to bonds which by their terms are to be paid from the revenues of a public utility owned or operated by such municipal corporation or public-utility district and are not general obligations of the municipal corporation or public-utility district.

the municipal corporation or public-utility district.

SEC. 4. All bonds which have heretofore been issued by any municipal corporation or any public-utility district in the Territory of Alaska, and all proceedings for the authorization and issuance of such bonds and the sale, execution, and delivery thereof, hereby are validated, ratified, approved, and confirmed, notwithstanding any defects or irreguarities in such proceedings. Said bonds heretofore issued and sold are declared to be and shall be, in the actual form in which such bonds have been issued, the binding and legal obligations of the municipal corporation or public-utility district issuing the same.

With the following committee amendment:

Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert the following:

That whenever any municipal corporation or any public-utility district in the Territory of Alaska shall have outstanding any bonded indebtedness or bonds payable from the revenues from any municipal or public utility, it shall be lawful for said municipal corporation or public-utility district through its common council or board of directors, or other governing body, as the case may be, to issue its bonds and to sell such bonds and apply the proceeds of the sale in payment of the bonds for the payment of which such refunding bonds are issued, or to exchange same for such outstanding bonds constituting said indebtedness, or, as the case may be, for such outstanding bonds payable from the revenues of a municipal or public utility. Said refunding bonds may be exchanged privately for and in payment and discharge may be exchanged privately for and in payment and discharge of any outstanding bonds of a municipal or public-utility district. of any outstanding bonds of a municipal or public-utility district. Refunding bonds payable from the revenues of a municipal or public utility may be exchanged for a like or greater amount of outstanding bonds payable from the revenues of such municipal or public utility, and the principal amount of such refunding bonds may exceed the principal amount of such outstanding bonds to the extent necessary or advisable to fund interest in arrears or about to become due on such oustanding bonds. The holder or holders of any outstanding bonds need not pay accrued interest on the refunding bonds to be delivered in exchange there for if, and to the extent that interest is due or accrued and unpaid on the outstanding bonds to be surrendered. No election shall be required to authorize the issuance and sale of such refunding bonds and the issuance and sale thereof may be authorrefunding bonds and the issuance and sale thereof may be authorized, and all proceedings with reference thereto prescribed, by ordinance or resolution of the common council, or the board of directors, or other governing body, of the municipal corporation or public-utility district, as the case may be, at any legally called meeting thereof. The committee amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill to provide for the refunding of the bonds of municipal corporations and public-utility districts in the Territory of Alaska, to validate bonds which have heretofore been issued by a municipal corporation or any public-utility district in the Territory of Alaska, and for other purposes."

INTERNATIONAL EXHIBITION OF POLAR EXPLORATION

Mr. BLOOM. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 137) authorizing and requesting the President to accept the invitation of the Government of Norway to the Government of the United States to participate in an International Exhibition of Polar Exploration, which will be held at Bergen, Norway, in 1940; and authorizing an appropriation to cover the expenses of such participation.

The Clerk read the title of the joint resolution.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

Mr. RICH. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, what will be the cost to the Federal Government of participation in this exhibition in Norway?

Mr. BLOOM. The participation of this Government in the exhibition will cost $35,000. The exhibit that will be used there will be a permanent one and will be used in other places after it is used in the exhibition in Norway. This is the first exhibition of its kind ever held in the world. This resolution is endorsed by the President of the United States, the Secretary of the Navy, and all the interested departments. It would mean a great deal to this country to participate in the exhibition.

Mr. RICH. Why not include in this a celebration of Byrd's South Pole expedition? Then we will be conducting two celebrations at one time.

Mr. BLOOM. The expedition of Admiral Byrd is included in this exhibition.

Mr. RICH. Then next year we will not have another resolution before us asking for another celebration?

Mr. BLOOM. No; we will not.

Mr. TABER. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, it seems to me that an expenditure of $35,000 for such an exhibition as this is out of line; $5,000 or $2,500 would not be so bad. I shall feel obliged to object to spending $35,000 for participation in this sort of an exhibition.

Mr. BLOOM. I may say to the gentleman from New York that estimates have been made on what participation in this exhibition will cost, and this figure does not include salaries of commissioners or attachés who may participate in this exhibition. Such persons will receive the salaries they are now getting, and no extra salaries will be paid. We could not participate in this exhibition for less than $35,000, and that is the estimate made by the different departments that will participate. I hope the gentleman will not object.

Mr. TABER. For the time being, Mr. Speaker, I shall have to object.

UNITED STATES-PHILIPPINE TRADE AND RELATED MATTERS

Mr. KOCIALKOWSKI. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H. R. 7096) to amend an act entitled "An act to provide for the complete independence of the Philippine Islands, to provide for the adoption of a constitution and a form of government for the Philippine Islands, and for other purposes."

The Clerk read the bill as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 6 of the act of March 24, 1934, entitled "An act to provide for the complete independence of the Philippine Islands, to provide for the adoption of a constitution and a form of government for the Philippine Islands, and for other purposes" (48 Stat. 456), is hereby amended to read as follows:

"Sec. 6. During the period beginning January 1, 1940, and ending July 3, 1946, trade relations between the United States and the Philippines shall be as now provided by law, subject to the following expensions:

following exceptions:

"(a) On and after January 1, 1941, the Philippine government shall impose and collect an export tax on every Philippine article shipped from the Philippines to the United States, except as other-wise specifically provided in this section. Said tax shall be computed in the manner hereinafter set forth in this subsection and in subsection (c) of this section. During the period January 1, 1941, through December 31, 1941, the export tax on every such article shall be 5 percent of the United States duty; on each succeeding January 1 thereafter the export tax shall be increased progressively by an additional 5 percent of the United States duty, except that during the period January 1, 1946, through July 3, 1946, the export tax shall remain at 25 percent of the United States duty.

"(b) (1) No export tax described in subsection (a) of this section

"(b) and a calledted upon any Philippine article of a class shall be imposed or collected upon any Philippine article of a class or kind in respect of which a quota is established by subdivision (3) of this subsection, nor upon copra or manila (abaca) fiber not dressed or manufactured in any manner.

"(2) The United States duty shall be levied, collected, and paid in "(2) The United States duty shall be levied, collected, and paid in the United States upon every article which is of a class or kind in respect of which a quota is established by subdivision (3) of this subsection and which is entered, or withdrawn from warehouse, for consumption after December 31, 1939, in excess of its respective quota: Provided, however, That nothing in this section or any subsection thereof shall be construed to exempt the quota of coconut oil therein provided for from the excise taxes provided for in section 2470 of the Internal Revenue Code (I. R. C., ch. 21, sec. 2470) sec. 2470).

"(3) For the purposes indicated in subdivisions (1) and (2) of this subsection, there are hereby established the following quotas of the designated Philippine articles: For the calendar year 1940, the quotas, hereafter called original quotas, shall be as follows:

"a. Cigars (exclusive of cigarettes, cheroots of all kinds, and paper cigars and cigarettes including wrappers), 200,000,000 cigars;

"b. Scan tobacco, and stemmed and unstemmed filler tobacco."

b. Scrap tobacco, and stemmed and unstemmed filler tobacco described in paragraph 602 of the Tariff Act of 1930, 4,500,000

"c. Coconut oil, 200,000 long tons;
"d. Buttons of pearl or shell, 850,000 gross.
"For each calendar year thereafter through the calendar year 1945, each of the said quotas shall be the same as the corresponding quota for the immediately preceding calendar year, less 5 percent of the corresponding original quota.
"For the period January 1, 1946, through July 3, 1946, each of said quotas shall be one-half of the corresponding quota specified for the calendar year 1945.

for the calendar year 1945.

"(c) The Philippine government, in imposing and collecting export taxes on Philippine embroideries, shall compute the tax in accordance with the formulas specified in subsection (a) of this section, except that in determining the taxable value of any such article, an allowance shall be made equal to the cost—cost, insurance of the property of the Philippines of any cloth of United States.

article, an allowance shall be made equal to the cost—cost, insurance, and freight the Philippines—of any cloth of United States origin used in the production thereof.

"(d) The United States duty shall be levied, collected, and paid, in the United States, upon all Philippine sugars, which are entered, or withdrawn from warehouse, for consumption in any calendar year after 1939, in excess of 850,000 long tons, of which not more than 50,000 long tons may be refined sugars: Provided, however, That for the period January 1, 1946, through July 3, 1946, the quota of Philippine sugars, not subject to the United States duty, shall be 425,000 long tons, of which not more than 25,000 long tons may be refined sugars. Any export tax imposed and collected on Philippine sugars entered or withdrawn from warehouse for consumption in excess of the quotas established by this subsection shall be refunded by the Philippine government.

"(e) Upon the expiration of the act of June 14, 1935 (49 Stat.)

"(e) Upon the expiration of the act of June 14, 1935 (49 Stat. 340), as extended to May 1, 1941, by proclamation of the President, dated January 26, 1938, the total amount of all Philippine cordage dated January 26, 1938, the total amount of all Philippine cordage coming into the United States which may be entered or withdrawn from warehouse, for consumption during the remainder of the calendar year 1941, shall not exceed 4,000,000 pounds and in any calendar year after 1941 shall not exceed 6,000,000 pounds: Provided, however, That for the period January 1, 1946, through July 3, 1946, the total amount of Philippine cordage which may be entered, or withdrawn from warehouse, for consumption shall not exceed 3,000,000 pounds.

"(f) (1) The quotas for sugars established by subsection (1)

"(f) (1) The quotas for sugars established by subsection (d) of this section shall be allocated annually as prescribed in section 6 (d) of the act of March 24, 1934 (48 Stat. 456), which section in this respect is not repealed by this amendatory act.

"(2) The quotas for cordage, established by subsection (e) of this section, and by the act of June 14, 1935, shall be allocated by authorities of the Philippine government among the manufacturers of such commodities proportionately upon the basis of the shipment of each such manufacturer to the United States during the 12 months immediately preceding the inauguration of the Commodities proposed to the Commodities proposed to ment of each such manufacturer to the United States during the 12 months immediately preceding the inauguration of the Commonwealth of the Philippines.

"(3) The quotas for all articles for which quotas are established by this section, except sugars and cordage, shall in each instance be allocated by authorities of the Philippine government among the manufacturers who products were shipped to the United States during the calendar year 1937, on the basis of the proportion which each manufacturer's maximum production shipped to the United States, directly or through other persons, in any calendar year during the 5-year period, 1933 through 1937, bears to the total of such maximum shipments of all such manufacturers.

"(2) The said Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to accept the deposits of the proceeds of the export taxes referred to in subdivision (1) of this subsection in accordance with the act of June 11, 1934 (48 Stat. 929).

"(3) The Secretary of the Treasury of the United States, with the approval of the Philippine government, is authorized to purchase with such supplementary sinking-fund bonds of the Philippines, its Provinces, cities, and municipalities, issued prior to May 1, 1934, under authority of acts of Congress and to invest such fund in interest-bearing obligations of the United States or in obligations guaranteed as to both principal and interest by the United States. Whenever the Secretary of the Treasury finds that such fund is in excess of an amount adequate to meet future interest and principal payments on all such bonds, he may, with the approval of the Philippine government, purchase with such excess any other bonds of the Philippines, its Provinces, cities, municipalities, and instrumentalities. For the purpose of this subsection obligations may be acquired on original issue at par, or by purchase of outstanding obligations at the market price. Any obligations acquired by the fund may, with the approval of the Philippine government, be sold by the Secretary of the Treasury at the market price and the proceeds of such sale and the proceeds of the payment upon maturity or redemption of any obligations held in the supplementary sinking fund, as well as all moneys in any manner earned by such fund or fund, as well as all moneys in any manner earned by such fund or on any obligations acquired by said fund, shall be paid into the After such outstanding portion of this indebtedness is thus determined, and before July 4, 1946, (i) there shall be set up with the Treasurer of the United States a special trust account in the name of the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States up with the Treasurer of the United States a special trust account in the name of the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States to pay future interest and principal payments on such bonds; (ii) the Philippine government shall pay to the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States for deposit in this special trust account all of the sinking funds maintained for the payment of such bonds; and (iii) the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States shall transfer into this special trust account all of the proceeds of the supplementary sinking fund referred to in subdivision (1) of this subsection. Any portion of such special trust account found by the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States on July 4, 1946, to be in excess of an amount adequate to meet future interest and principal payments on all such outstanding bonds shall be turned over to the Treasury of the independent government of the Philippines to be set up as an additional sinking fund to be used for the purpose of liquidating and paying all other obligations of the Philippines, its Provinces, cities, municipalities, and Instrumentalities. To the extent that such special trust account is determined by the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States to be insufficient to pay interest and principal on the outstanding bonds of the Philippines, its Provinces, cities, and municipalities, issued prior to May 1, 1934, under authority of acts of Congress, the Philippine government shall, on or before July 3, 1946, pay to the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States for deposit in such special trust account an amount which said Secretary of the Treasury determines is required to assure payment of principal special trust account an amount which said Secretary of the Treasury determines is required to assure payment of principal and interest on such bonds: Provided, however, That if the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States finds that this requirement would impose an undue hardship upon the Philippines, then the Philippine government shall continue to provide annually the necessary funds for the payment of interest and principal on such bonds until such time as the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States determines that the amount in the special trust account is adequate to meet interest and principal payments on such bonds. such bonds.

(5) On and after July 4, 1946, the Secretary of the Treasury of United States is authorized, with the approval of the independent government of the Philippines, to purchase at the market pendent government of the Philippines, to purchase at the market price for the special trust account bonds of the Philippines, its Provinces, cities, and municipalities, issued prior to May 1, 1934, under authority of acts of Congress. The Secretary of the Treasury of the United States is also authorized, with the approval of the independent government of the Philippines, to invest all or any part of such special trust account in any interest-bearing obligations of the United States or in any obligations guaranteed as to both principal and interest by the United States. Such obligations may be acquired on original issue at par or by purchase of outstanding obligations at the market price, and any obligations acquired by the special trust account may, with the approval of the independent government of the Philippines, be sold by the Secretary of the Treasury at the market price, and the proceeds of the payment upon maturity or redemption of such obligations shall be held as a part of such special trust account. Whenever the special trust account is determined by the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States to be adequate to meet interest and principal payments on all outstanding bonds of the Philippines, its Provinces, cities, and municipalities, issued prior to May I, 1934, under authority of acts of Congress, the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to pay from such trust account the principal of such outstanding bonds and to pay all interest due and owing on such bonds. All such bonds and to pay all interest due and owing on such bonds. All such bonds and interest coupons paid or purchased by the special trust account shall be canceled and destroyed by the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States. From time to time after July 4, 1946, any moneys in such special trust account found by the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States to be in excess of an amount adequate to meet interest and crimeful approach or all amount adequate to meet interest and principal payments on all such bonds shall be turned over to the treasurer of the independent government of the Philippines.

UNITED STATES-PHILIPPINE TRADE AND RELATED MATTERS

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois that a second be considered as ordered?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois is recognized for 20 minutes, and the gentleman from California [Mr. Welch] will be recognized for 20 minutes.

Mr. KOCIALKOWSKI. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. McGehee].

Mr. McGEHEE. Mr. Speaker, the bill we are considering today has nothing whatever to do with any political issue between the United States and the Philippine government, these issues being taken care of in the original Tydings-McDuffle Act passed in March 1934. This bill is confined entirely to economic and commercial matters that will affect the Philippine Islands and our country after November 15, 1940, relative to the exportation of certain basic articles from the Philippines to the United States.

The membership will recall that the Tydings-McDuffie Act and subsequent acts passed by the Congress insofar as they concerned Philippine products coming into the United States provided for limitations on duty-free shipments of the basic articles of sugar, coconut oil, and cordage. It provides for the elimination during the period from November 15, 1940, to July 4, 1946, while the Philippine Islands are still under our sovereignty, of a 25-percent tariff preference which all the Philippine products enjoy in the United States. This elimination is to be effective gradually by the imposition on November 15, 1940, of the export taxes collectible in the Philippines, beginning at a rate equal to 5 percent of the United States import duty and increased an additional 5 percent annually until July 4, 1946.

The Tydings-McDuffie Act provides further that the proceeds of this tax are to be used in the payment of principal and interest on the bonded indebtedness of the Philippine Islands, its provinces, municipalities, and instrumentalities, until such indebtedness has been discharged in full.

Our economic experts, as well as the Tariff Commission, after giving many months of thought and study to the probable effects of the application of this export tax on these products, have found that the imposition of such a tax on these commodities, even during this early stage of preparing the Philippine Islands for independence, would result not only in serious injury but in most cases in the absolute destruction of the Philippine industries producing these commodities.

These articles enumerated are principally prepared for exportation to the United States and constitute about 40 percent of the total value of all Philippine exports to the United States, excluding sugar. Should this condition be continued and no relief given by this Congress, it would reduce the purchasing power of the Philippines in the United States to the extent that it would be most detrimental to our export trade.

I may call the attention of the Congress to the fact that the Philippine Islands stand seventh on the list of our customers to whom we export our manufactured products. The total exports to the Philippine Islands for the year 1937 of all manufactured goods amounting to around $475,000,000.

To avoid a condition that would be most unfortunate, not only to the Philippines but to business, manufacturers, and labor of our country, this bill has been introduced with a view of not enforcing the export duty by the Philippine government on the commodities named in this bill that are to be shipped to the United States, but to gradually reduce the quotas of 5 percent per year from 1940 to 1946, rather than charge the export duty on this basis.

Will you permit me to add in addition to the preference remarks already made on this bill that, in my opinion, our country has a moral obligation to the Philippine Islands which is mandatory at this time and, especially, after their absolute independence is gained in giving them every aid and assistance possible to reach a secure economic state as one of the nations of the world. The Philippine Islands are our adopted children. We have reared and nurtured them until, evidently, in the opinion of the Congress they have reached the age of maturity. During that period of growth since infancy they have known only to lean on the arm of their foster parents. Rather than to turn them loose, with world conditions as unsettled as they are today and the leadership of several of the principal nations manifesting a course of imperialism, should we not continue a policy of advancement and aid? You can readily visualize that certain conditions could exist immediately on the Philippines acquiring their independence whereby in a short period of a few months they would be absorbed by one of the major powers.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. KOCIALKOWSKI. Mr. Speaker, I yield the gentleman 2 additional minutes.

Mr. McGEHEE. Mr. Speaker, this bill is one that would help effectuate the Philippine Islands in acquiring a status they are entitled to in the commercial world. Not only this, but as stated in the beginning, statistics show they are one of our leading export markets and that relationship we want to continue; not only continue but place them in a position whereby they can take more commodities, manufactured or raw

Mr. Speaker, I must now hasten along and explain some of the provisions of this bill.

Under the Tydings-McDuffie Act the date for beginning the charge of the export duty on these products is November 15, 1940. This bill moves the date up to January 1, 1941. Our Treasury Department is asking for this change for fiscal reasons, as our fiscal year begins on January 1.

Under the Tydings-McDuffie Act there were no quotas established as is provided in section 6, subsection 3 of this bill. It was provided in the Tydings-McDuffie Act that 5 percent of the duty collectible by the United States was to be collected as export duty by the Philippine government; and if this 50-percent export tax were imposed by the Philippine government it would amount to about 30 percent of the entire value of the products on the basis calculated by our Government in the collection of tariff duties.

Mr. JOHNSON of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McGEHEE. I wish I could yield, but I have not the

We establish in this bill a quota of 200,000,000 cigars and, were the Philippine exporters to this country compelled to pay the 5-percent export duty to the Philippine government, it would destroy that industry within 2 years and most of the capital which is invested in that industry is American capital. It would put out of employment over 60,000 people, according to my information.

So you can see how destructive that would be and can appreciate the obligation that devolves on this Congress which has, through the Tydings-McDuffle Act, granted independence to the Philippine Islands which takes effect in 1946 to help these people along in an economic way and we must do this in such a way that they can eventually get on their feet and take their place as one of the nations of the world. They can only do this by our changing the provisions of the Tydings-McDuffle Act providing for the collection of the 5-percent export duty to a 5-percent reduction in quota allowance thereby allowing them to gradually work out this economic problem during the transition period from January 1, 1941, to July 4, 1946.

I wish I had more time, Mr. Speaker, to explain in detail the provisions of this bill.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. KOCIALKOWSKI. Mr. Speaker, I yield 8 minutes to the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. Hare].

Mr. HARE. Mr. Speaker, I do not know that I will need 8 minutes to explain my understanding of this bill. I believe we all know that in 1898, and the few years following, the United States unselfishly acquired the Philippine Islands and undertook their administration, and also undertook to teach the Filipino people the principles of democracy, assuring them at the time that when they were prepared to establish a stable form of government we would withdraw our sovereignty and provide for their independence. In 1932, the Congress of the United States was convinced that the people of ethe Philippine Islands had complied with the terms fixed by Congress and proceeded to enact legislation whereby they would gain their independence in 10 years. This act was not accepted by the Filipino people until 1934, when a similar law was enacted and the people of the Philippines accepted it.

Under the provisions of that act it provided that beginning with November 15, 1940, all exports from the Philippine Islands to the United States should pay 5 percent of the then-existing American tariff duty, increasing 5 percent per annum until 1946, when they would be paying 25 percent of the American duty on all exports from the Philippine Islands to the United States. Under the act the export duty collected by the Philippine government was for the purpose of creating a sinking fund for care of outstanding bonded indebtedness of the islands, which this Government has underwritten.

It was found by an investigating committee last year, previously appointed by the President of the United States and President of the Philippine Commonwealth, that if the application of the tariff should begin in November 1940, together with the export tax, it would practically prohibit the exportation of the leading products of the islands and therefore destroy the possibility of economic adjustment prior to the transition period when we were to withdraw our sovereignty in 1946. Consequently it has been recommended to the Congress by the committee appointed that instead of applying the tariff duty beginning November 1940 there should be an application of a reduction in the quotas of the principal products to this country, particular reference being made to sugar, cordage, coconut oil, pearl buttons, tobacco, cigars, and so forth, and that is what this bill does. It provides for the repeal of the tariff duty applying to certain Philippine products from 1940 to 1946 and provides in the place thereof the reduction of 5 percent of the quota already allocated under the existing law, such quota reduction to increase at the rate of 5 percent per annum until 1946.

Mr. Speaker, I think this is a practical solution of the situation, because in this way the Filipino people will be able to carry on for another 5 or 6 years, and at the same time there will be no increase—but in reality a decrease—in competition with American products, particularly sugar, cottonseed oil, peanut oil, and dairy products.

And, Mr. Speaker, I stop long enough here to suggest that at the conclusion of the existing relationship between the United States and the Philippine Islands we should then have a trade agreement between the two countries, provided for in this bill. There are three things in the Philippine Islands that are indispensable to the continued life, growth, and the development of the islands. One is clothing. The other two are food made up of wheat flour and dairy products.

The Philippine Islands will never be able to produce dairy products sufficient to meet the needs of the people, and they will never be able to supply themselves with wheat flour. They will not be able to supply themselves with textiles or goods with which to cover their backs. Consequently we can easily afford to make an agreement whereby we might maintain a trade relation in the future so that they may have a continued quota of their leading products to the United States, and in consideration therefor they obligate themselves to take a sufficient amount of textiles, wheat, and dairy products in order that we may have reciprocal trade policy that will prove to be to the mutual benefit of both countries.

Mr. HOBBS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HARE. Yes.

Mr. HOBBS. As I understand the very illuminating statement the gentleman is making, this bill does not affect in the slightest degree the excise tax now levied on coconut oil.

Mr. HARE. That is correct. It makes no change whatever.

Mr. HOBBS. Nor does it prevent the importation of any other fats or oils, except to reduce their quota by 5 percent per annum until 1946, when they will pay the full duty.

Mr. HARE. Beginning with January 1, 1940.

Mr. HOBBS. Is there any provision for an upward scale of the quota or a downward scaling?

Mr. HARE. The quota will be reduced 5 percent annually; that is, 5 percent in 1941, 10 percent the next year, 15 percent the third, and 20 to 25, so that in 1946 the quota provided for under the original act will be reduced by 25 percent.

Mr. CULKIN. Does the bill change the character of the import tax?

Mr. HARE. None whatever. It will not interfere with the import tax provided in the Revenue Act of 1934. This is also made clear in the bill.

Of course, the United States Government and the Congress so far have dealt unselfishly with the Philippine Islands from the beginning; but I have to admit that the idea I have advanced relative to future trade relations between the United States and the islands after 1946 carries with it a certain amount of selfishness, for, while the arrangement suggested may be to the interest of the islands, I am also interested in what it will mean to the cotton growers, wheat producers, and those engaged in the dairy industry in the United States. As one who is particularly interested in the cotton producers, I can see where we can afford to allow a certain amount of coconut oil to come to the United States. even in competition with cottonseed oil, provided we can ship to them a certain amount of cotton goods and cotton fabrics. I can see, further, that if we do not make such an arrangement and the existing tariff law continues, we might shut out coconut oil, but this will not prevent the shipping of copra to the United States, which is nothing more or less than the dried coconut, and this can be converted into the coconut oil here, and we will then have the coconut oil in competition with our cottonseed oil and we will have in addition the coconut meal in competition with our cottonseed meal. It must be remembered that under the existing tariff law there is no tariff on copra, which, as I have already said, is dried coconut. In case there is no future agreement relative to coconut oil and the existing tariff law is not changed. copra, or the dried coconut, can be shipped into the United States free of duty and in any quantity without limitation. Therefore, unless there is some other arrangement made before 1946, there will be more coconut oil in the United States in competition with cottonseed oil and peanut oil and at the same time we will have an increased amount of coconut meal in competition with cottonseed meal. I am, therefore, in favor of this amendment, and I sincerely trust that there can be a trade agreement perfected before 1946 that may prove to the mutual benefit of both countries. With the rapidly increasing population of the islands, I can see an everincreasing market there for our textile products, particularly cotton, because they are great consumers of cotton goods, and if we can have wisdom and foresight enough to arrange a trade policy with them they will be the best and largest customers the cotton producer and cotton manufacturer in the United States can find in the entire world.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from South Carolina has expired.

Mr. WELCH. Mr. Speaker, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CRAWFORD].

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Speaker, this bill was taken up in committee and reported without public hearings, which were not permitted. The bill was not read in executive session. The interests which I represent, so far as I am authorized to speak, were not permitted to state their position on the bill, and I am making this statement today primarily for the purpose of letting the record speak as to what happened. In reference to the statement just made by the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. HARE], this bill sets aside export taxes as originally provided in the economic provisions of the Philippine Independence Act.

Instead of paying the export tax they reduce the amount of their free-of-duty export quota 5 percent per annum. The export taxes were originally to be collected and set aside in a fund to guarantee the bonded obligations of the Philippine Islands, for which the United States appears morally responsible. This bill prevents the building up of an export tax fund, guaranteeing the Treasury of the United States some protection. This is clearly set forth in the changes in the bill, if you will read the committee report.

Under the Philippine Independence Act and other acts since approved, we had up to June 30, 1939, made available some $82,573,000 for the Philippine treasury. We are providing for the Philippine treasury on the coconut-oil excise tax and the sugar excise tax, in round figures, from twentytwo to twenty-seven million dollars annually. If you will read the bill carefully you will find language to the effect that when this money is made available over there they shall use it for the purpose of entrenching Philippine economy to meet world conditions after they have received their independence. When Dr. Sayre was before the committeeand he was the only witness we heard and of course he supported the bill-I asked him for certain figures, and a statement covering certain acts taken by the Philippine Legislature looking to the disposition of these funds. If you want an eye opener, read the extension of remarks where I shall include this statement I hold, furnished me by the State Department and which I received directly from Mr. Jacobs. Read what is being done with this excise-tax fund. Then make up your mind as to whether or not the funds are being used for the purpose of constructively recasting Philippine economy to meet conditions after independence is

Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to insert the statement in the RECORD at this point.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered. There was no objection.

¹In all cases where there are no citations to the Official Gazette, the source of information has been some report of the United States High Commissioner to the Philippine Islands. Printed copies of the Official Gazette have only been received up to June 13, 1939.

² Copies of the acts passed by the National Assembly in 1939 have not been received so that it is impossible to prepare an accurate list of all those appropriations the payment of which might be authorized out of the excise-tax proceeds.

Although the total amount of the excise-tax proceeds known to have been appropriated is approximately $\text{P165,000,000}$, or $82,500,000$, the actual amount which the Philippine authorities have had set up in demand deposits in the United States to cover these appropriations is only $\text{P76,000,000}$, or $38,000,000, out of total collections from August 1934 through June 30, 1939, available for remittance to the commonwealth government, amounting to $\text{P165,147,931.40}$, or $82,573,965.70. The actual amount spent, therefore, does not exceed $38,000,000 and must be less than this, as some of these demand deposits and all of the time deposits are still in the United States. are still in the United States.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Speaker, I am further advised by Mr. Jacobs, of the State Department, that, roughly, $3,000,000 have been loaned to the National Development Co. of Manila for the purchase of the steamship Mayon from the Dollar Steamship Co. representatives and two sugar refineries located in the city of Manila. If this be true, it is certainly in order to assume that these Government-owned refineries will in the future compete with the fields and mills owned by the people here in the United States. These are additional reasons for a thorough inquiry into the use of all of these funds

You will also find—you people who are interested in the sugar-beet and sugarcane areas of this country—that there is a distinct tie-up between this bill and the Sugar Quota Act of 1937 and the Philippine Independence Act of 1934 and the Sugar Act which you will be called upon to deal with next January to June when you come back for the second session. It was dovetailing and conflicting elements of this kind which I desired to bring out in committee. We have legislated carelessly in connection with Philippine-American affairs. I think it is time, in the interest of the Filipinos and the American people—and I have no grudge against the Filipinos—I think it is time we began to give more serious consideration to legislation of this type which so directly affects our far eastern relationships.

Here is a bill dealing with the economic relations of the Filipinos and our own people. These relations are directly involved in our Far Eastern problems. We bring the bill here with 20 minutes debate on a side; with 10 minutes, you might say, in opposition to the bill and with 30 minutes in favor of the bill, because I assume I am the only one who is going to speak at all in a questioning manner. Certainly I am not in favor of doing anything that will destroy the Filipinos or their country, because I am wise enough to know that the United States Treasury will have to take the Filipinos out of the ditch, and I am interested in doing the job, if it must be done, in a constructive manner. But I detest this manner of legislating, when a bill is so far-reaching and you cannot get hearings in the committee; when you cannot even get the bill read in executive session-and I protested against the procedure in committee. I yield to the gentleman from Mississippi to correct me if I am wrong.

Mr. McGEHEE. Were not hearings held by the Senate and were not those hearings before the House committee—335 pages of them?

Mr. CRAWFORD. Here are the Senate hearings. I have them before me. Those hearings were not on this bill, and the gentleman knows they were not. They were on the bill S. 1028, and subsequently another bill was introduced in the Senate. A great many of the original provisions were eliminated. The only hearings held in the House committee were in executive session, and Dr. Sayre, who is now High Commissioner of the Philippines, came up and spoke in the interest of the bill.

Mr. Osmena, Vice President of the Philippine Islands, was supposed to have been heard. He came up, and we had no chance to examine him with reference to the bill except one or two questions. There were many inquiries I desired to make pertaining to matters not covered in the Senate hearings. I yield to the gentleman if he wants to correct me on this statement.

Mr. McGEHEE. The hearings before the Senate were before the House committee, were they not?

Mr. CRAWFORD. The hearings were not on the House bill. There is not any use arguing about that. Take the hearings on the House bill and the two bills of the Senate and decide that for yourself.

Mr. McGEHEE. Did not the House have the benefit of the Joint Preparatory Committee on Philippine Affairs, six appointees by the President and six by the Philippine government?

Mr. CRAWFORD. Oh, yes; but what has that got to do with this bill?

Mr. COLE of New York. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman vield?

Mr. CRAWFORD. I yield.

Mr. COLE of New York. Would the gentleman explain to the House what reason was given for all this hurry and rush and insisting on this bill being passed so hurriedly? Mr. CRAWFORD. The reason that was given—and I stand corrected if I am in error—was to the effect that this legislation must now go to the Philippine Assembly; that it must go to the people of the Philippine Islands; that there must be amendments made to the Philippine constitution, and that all of that must be brought into accord with this bill. Therefore it should be enacted now, so that it may go into effect November 15, 1940.

Mr. COLE of New York. The gentleman might explain that there have been three modifications of the Philippine Independence Act, and that not a single one of them was submitted to the Philippine Assembly.

Mr. CRAWFORD. The gentleman is correct. We changed the Philippine Independence Act in a way in the case of the Sugar Quota Act of 1937, in the case of the excise tax on coconut oil, and in the case of amendments affecting the cordage industry, rope, and twine coming into this country; and, so far as I know, none of those was submitted to the Philippine Legislature for confirmation, and certainly there was no plebiscite held on them in connection with amendments to the Philippine Constitution.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CRAWFORD. I yield.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. Is there any need for haste in passing this legislation?

Mr. CRAWFORD. I take the position that this should not be considered until next January, when it should be made the first order of business of the Insular Affairs Committee of the House, and that in the meantime the different industries involved and the sugar people who were denied the privilege of coming up and being heard on this bill should be heard. I am talking about the sugarcane industry of the South and the sugar-beet industry of the West and the North-they were entitled to have their say on this House bill. They were not given that say because hearings were not held. There was too big a rush to get the bill through. Next January we shall be forced to again consider Philippine-American sugar relations. The State Department may be inclined to use the approval of this bill as an excuse to prevent reopening the sugar quotas in the new sugar legislation. The committee and Mr. Osmena were given warning on this phase of the problems touched upon by the bill. In the absence of printed hearings, I think it is appropriate to make this record at this time. I hope the State Department and the Department of Agriculture will not attach a great moral responsibility respecting fixed sugar quotas and thereby stand on this bill. That is a poor way to legislate on Filipino-American affairs, I care not how friendly you may be to the Filipinos.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield further?

Mr. CRAWFORD. I yield.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. That should be done because of the importance of measures of this type to the Philippine people and also to the American people. We should at least have hearings and due consideration of it before passage.

Mr. CRAWFORD. We certainly should; otherwise they will be back here asking for other concessions; and if one studies the Senate hearings one will find the question asked time and time again, "Are you coming back again for a further revision of the economic provisions of the act?"

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks and to include therein certain excerpts from documents from the State Department and from hearings on the Senate bill.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered. There was no objection.

Mr. KOCIALKOWSKI. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the Resident Commissioner from the Philippine Islands [Mr. ELIZALDE].

LXXXIV-669

AMENDING THE PHILIPPINE INDEPENDENCE ACT

Mr. ELIZALDE. Mr. Speaker and Members of the House, In rising to support the bill now pending, may I express my appreciation of the courtesies and privileges that are extended to me as the representative of the Filipino people by this gracious body. I wish to voice our deep gratitude for this new evidence of your interest in our welfare.

The Filipino people, Mr. Speaker, want very much to see the passage of H. R. 7096, which is now before you.

The report of the Committee on Insular Affairs explains the salient points contained in this bill, such as trade and economic matters, Philippine bonded indebtedness, rights and privileges of Filipinos in the United States, retention of properties for diplomatic and consular establishments, future conference on trade relations between the United States and the Philippines after the coming into effect of the new law, and assignment of Foreign Service officers to the Philippines.

Members of that committee on both sides of the House, who have worked so hard and so conscientiously to present this measure today, have well explained the significance of the various provisions. At this point, I thank the distinguished chairman of the committee, the gentleman from Illinois, for the continuous and sympathetic interest he has maintained in our problem.

I may add that the conditions which this legislation seeks to ameliorate were intensively studied for over a year by a joint committee of competent experts both in Manila and Washington. Let me emphasize that the bill before you deals in no way with the political status of the Philippines. The political aspects of Philippine-American relations were settled by the Independence Act of March 24, 1934.

This pending piece of legislation is an emergency measure. It is designed primarily to bring some opportunity of adjustment during the commonwealth period to four of our important industries—coconut oil, cigar, pearl button, and embroidery.

This legislation should help to prevent the threatened disruption of those particular industries that have been built up on the basis of America's traditionally generous trade policy toward the Philippines. It will afford these industries a reasonable opportunity for orderly adjustment over the next 7 years.

Let me call the attention of my friends in the House to the fact that there remain 7 years more during which the Philippines continue as a ward of the United States under the American flag. During this period it is intended that we make the necessary economic preparations to bring about an orderly shift from our present dependent trade status.

Mr. Speaker, I must repeat that what we ask here is, to us, emergency legislation, which will benefit not only the Filipinos but the Americans in the Philippines who, over the past 40 years, have devoted their energies, in partnership with us, to build up a flourishing Philippine-American trade.

I respectfully stress the urgency of enacting this legislation at this session of Congress since several constitutional processes must be attended to in the Philippines before these provisions can go into effect.

In closing I wish gratefully to acknowledge the attention given this measure by the House. I am grateful in the name of the Filipino people, whose fate has been inextricably linked with that of the United States for over 40 years. In asking for sympathetic consideration, Mr. Speaker, we are confident that we can rest our welfare in your hands.

SUMMARY OF PROVISIONS OF H. R. 7096

The full title of the measure under consideration is, "A bill to amend an act entitled 'An act to provide for the complete independence of the Philippine Islands, to provide for the adoption of a constitution and a form of government for the Philippine Islands, and for other purposes.'"

The bill contains eight sections, divided into subsections and subdivisions.

Section 1 provides for the continuation of trade relations between the United States and the Philippines during the period from January 1, 1940, to July 3, 1946, as now provided by law subject to the exceptions in subsections (a), (b), (c), (d), (e), (f), (g), and (h).

Subsection (a) provides that export taxes shall be 5 percent in 1941, the rate to be progressively increased by an additional 5 percent each year, but that during the period January 1, 1946, through July 3, 1946, the export tax shall remain at 25 percent of the United States duty.

Subsection (b) has three subdivisions: Subdivision (1) provides that no export tax shall be collected upon any Philippine article with quota in subdivision (3) of this subsection, nor upon copra or manila (abaca) fiber; subdivision (2) provides that the United States tariff duties are to be collected on articles in excess of quotas, with a proviso that declares that this section shall not be construed to exempt coconut oil from excise taxes imposed by the Internal Revenue Act; subdivision (3) provides for the following quotas for the calendar year 1940: (a) Cigars (exclusive of cigarettes, cheroots of all kinds, and paper cigars and cigarettes, including wrappers), 200,000,000 cigars; (b) scrap tobacco, and stemmed and unstemmed filler tobacco described in paragraph 602 of the Tariff Act of 1930, 4,500,000 pounds; (c) coconut oil, 200,000 long tons; (d) buttons of pearl or shell, 850,000 gross. The duty-free quotas are to decrease by 5 percent each year through 1945, but that during the period from January 1, 1946, through July 3, 1946, the quotas shall be one-half of those for 1945.

Subsection (c) provides that in computing export taxes on Philippine embroideries, the value of the cloth used, if of United States origin, shall be deducted.

Subsection (d) provides that United States duty shall be collected from Philippine sugars in excess of 850,000 long tons, of which not more than 50,000 long tons may be refined sugars.

It further provides that from January 1, 1946, through July 3, 1946, the quota not subject to United States duty shall be 425,000 long tons, of which not more than 25,000 long tons may be refined, and that export taxes on sugars in excess of quotas established by this subsection shall be refunded by the Philippine government.

Subsection (e) provides that after the expiration of the Cordage Act as extended to May 1, 1941, the total amount of all Philippine cordage coming into the United States shall not exceed 4,000,000 pounds during the remainder of the calendar year 1941. Thereafter the absolute quota shall not exceed 6,000,000 pounds every year; and from January 1, 1946, through July 3, 1946, the quota shall not exceed 3,000,000 pounds.

Subsection (f) subdivision (1) relates to the procedure in which the quotas for sugars established by subsection (d) of this section shall be allocated annually as prescribed in section 6 (d) of the act of March 24, 1934. Subdivision (2) empowers the authorities of the Philippine government to allocate the quotas for cordage established by subsection (e) of this section and by the act of June 14, 1935, among the manufacturers of such commodities and provides for the basis of shipment of each such manufacturer to the United States; subdivision (3) provides that quotas for all articles except sugars and cordage shall be allocated on the basis of maximum shipment to the United States in any year during the 5-year period 1933 through 1937; subdivision (4) provides that if, after the first 9 months of any quota year, there is evidence that the entire quota will not be used, the Philippine government shall apportion the amount that the quota holder cannot ship to the United States.

Subsection (g), subdivision (1), relates to the payment by the Philippine government to the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States at the end of every quarter proceeds from export taxes, and such moneys shall be deposited with the Treasurer of the United States and shall constitute a supplementary sinking fund for the payment of Philippine bonds issued before May 1, 1934; and that moneys received from any export tax on any article shipped from the Philippines to the United States prior to July 4, 1946, and which is entered or withdrawn from warehouse for consumption on or after said date shall be refunded by the independent Philippine government. Subdivision (2) authorizes the Secretary of the Treasury to accept the deposits of the proceeds of the export taxes referred to above. Subdivision (3) also authorizes the Secretary of the Treasury, with the approval of the Philippine government, to purchase with such supplementary sinking fund Philippine bonds issued before May 1, 1934, and may invest such fund in interest-bearing obligations of the United States or obligations guaranteed by the United States. If the Secretary of the Treasury finds that the supplementary sinking fund is more than adequate to meet future interest and principal payments on such bonds, he may, with the approval of the Philippine government, purchase with such excess other bonds of the Philippines. Obligations may be acquired on original issue at par or by purchase of outstanding obligations at the market price. This subdivision further provides that the Secretary of the Treasury may, with the approval of the Philippine government, sell at the market price any obligation acquired by the fund and the proceeds of the sale and the proceeds of the payment upon maturity or the redemption of any obligations as well as any money earned by the fund or en any obligations acquired by said fund, shall be paid into the said fund. Subdivision (4) relates to a conference to be held during the 3 months preceding July 4, 1946, between the Philippine government and the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States, the purpose of which is to ascertain the portion of Philippine bonds issued before May 1, 1934, which will remain outstanding on July 4, 1946; and that the Philippine government shall turn over to the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States for destruction all such bonds then held, in any of the sinking funds maintained for the payment of such bonds.

This subdivision also provides for the creation of a special trust account in the name of the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States after the outstanding portion of the indebtedness is determined, and before July 4, 1946; the provisions with regard to this special trust account are as follows: First, the special trust account takes care of paying future interest and principal payments on such bonds; second, the Philippine government shall pay the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States for deposit in this special trust account all of the sinking funds maintained for the payment of such bonds; and, third, the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States shall transfer to this special trust account all of the proceeds of the supplementary sinking fund. If the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States finds this special trust account more than adequate to meet future payments on the outstanding bonds, the excess shall be turned over to the Treasury of the independent Philippine government to be set up as an additional sinking fund for the payment of other obligations of the Philippines. If the special trust account is determined by the Secretary of the Treasury to be insufficient for future payments on the outstanding bonds issued before May 1, 1934, the Philippine government shall pay on or before July 3, 1946, to the Secretary of the Treasury for deposit in the special trust account an amount which he deems necessary to assure such payments on the outstanding bonds. If the Secretary of the Treasury finds this requirement would impose undue hardship on the Philippines, the Philippine government shall continue to provide annually for the payment of interest and principal on such bonds until the Secretary of the Treasury determines that the special trust account is sufficient to meet future payments on the bonds; subdivision (5) authorizes the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States, with the approval of the independent Philippine government, to purchase, on and after July 4, 1946, at the market price for the special trust account, bonds of the Philippines issued prior to May 1, 1934; he may also, with the approval of the independent Philippine government, invest the funds in the special trust account in interest-bearing obligations of the United States or obligations guaranteed by the United States and such obligations may be acquired on original issue at par or by purchase at the market price.

Any obligations acquired by the special trust account may, with the approval of the independent Philippine government, be sold by the Secretary of the Treasury at the market price and the proceeds of the payment upon maturity or redemption of such obligations shall be held as a part of such special trust account. When the Secretary of the Treasury determines that the special trust account is adequate to meet payments on Philippine bonds issued before May 1, 1934, he may pay the principal and interest on the outstanding bonds. Any money in the special trust account in excess of the amount necessary to meet interest and principal payments of outstanding bonds shall be turned over to the treasurer of the independent Philippine government.

Subsection (h) provides that importers of articles into the United States after January 1, 1941, should present to the United States collector of customs a certificate signed by a competent authority of the Philippine government containing a statement of the value and quantity of the article, the rate and amount of the export tax paid, or shall give a bond for the production of such certificate within 6 months from date of entry.

Section 2 amends section 8 of the said act of March 24, 1934, by adding thereto a new subsection (d) which provides that citizens and corporations of the Philippines—pending the final and complete withdrawal of United States sovereignty over the islands—shall enjoy in the United States and all places under its jurisdiction the rights and privileges they enjoyed under the laws of the United States at the time of the inauguration of the Philippine Commonwealth.

Section 3 amends section 10 of said act of March 24, 1934, by adding thereto another subsection (c) with four subdivisions. Subdivision (1) authorizes the President of the United States to exchange property of the United States in the Philippines, with the approval of the Philippine government, for property owned by the Philippine government or by private persons suitable for diplomatic or consular establishments of the United States, and that title to transferred property shall be vested in fee simple in such persons and the United States, respectively; subdivision (2) provides that any property of the United States in the Philippines suitable for diplomatic and consular establishments may be designated by the President of the United States prior to July 4, 1946, for such purpose, and after that date title to such property shall remain with the United States; subdivision (3) provides that title to lands, buildings, and fixtures and movable objects belonging to the official residences of the United States High Commissioner in Manila and Baguio shall continue to be vested in the United States after July 4, 1946; subdivision (4) vests in the Secretary of State administrative supervision and control over property of the United States in the Philippines and the residences in the Philippines of the High Commissioner on and after July 4, 1946.

Section 4 amends section 13 of the said act of March 24, 1934, which provides for a trade conference. The present section 4 introduces several minor changes: First, it changes the date by which said trade conference must be called, namely, at least 2 years prior to July 4, 1946; second, it fixes the membership of this committee at 18 and prescribes the manner in which the members are appointed; 9 members to represent the United States and 9 to represent the Philippine Commonwealth, with a further provision that the American membership shall consist of 3 Members of the Senate, 3 Members of the House of Representatives, and 3 persons appointed by the President of the United States; and, third, it provides for the filling of vacancies by reason of death, resignation, or retirement of any of the members.

Section 5 further amends said act of March 24, 1934, by adding thereto a new section—section 18—setting forth and defining the following terms under subsection (a): (1) "United States," (2) "cordage," (3) "Philippine government," (4) "United States duty," (5) "refined sugars," (6) "Philippine article," (7) "American article," and (8) "Philippine import duty." Subsection (b) further makes clear the meaning of the terms (1) "includes" and "including," and (2) "ordinary customs duty."

Section 6 further amends said act of March 24, 1934, by adding thereto a new section—section 19—dealing with excise and import taxes. Subsection (a) provides that excise taxes on coconut oil and sugar shall be held as separate funds and paid into the treasury of the Philippines to be used for the purpose of meeting new or additional expenditures necessary in adjusting Philippine economy to a position independent of United States trade preferences and in preparing the Philippines for independence, and that the portion of such funds expended by the Commonwealth government shall be budgeted, appropriated, and accounted for separately from other moneys of said government; subsection (b) authorizes the President of the United States to withhold or discontinue payments to the Philippines if he finds that the Commonwealth government has failed, or is about to fail, to comply with any requirement of subsections (a) and (c) of this section; subsection (c) repeals the provisions in the Internal Revenue Act prohibiting further payments if the Commonwealth government subsidizes producers of copra, coconut oil, or allied products and of the provisions in the Sugar Act of 1937 specifying the purpose for which such appropriations could be used by said government and the manner and condition of transfer. This subsection, however, provides that the restriction contained in the proviso to section 503 of the Sugar Act of 1937 shall continue in full force and effect. and provides further that the excise taxes shall not be paid directly or indirectly as a subsidy to producers of copra, coconut oil, or allied products, except in the establishment of facilities for better curing of copra or for bona fide production loans to Philippine copra producers; subsection (d) provides that the United States is not obligated to continue any or all of the excise and import taxes; subsection (e) provides that all customs duties collected on Philippine products brought into the United States shall be covered into the general fund of the Treasury of the United States and shall not be paid into the treasury of the Philippines.

Section 7, which contains three subsections, relates to the procedure and dates for the coming into effect of this amendatory act. Subsection (a) provides that sections 1 to 5, inclusive, of this amendatory act shall become effective on January 1, 1940, if before that date—

First. Subsection 5 of section 1 of the ordinance appended to the constitution of the Philippines shall have been amended accordingly.

Second. The President of the United States shall have found and proclaimed that the Philippine government has enacted a law relating to export taxes and has retained the laws relating to sinking fund and currency in force and effect May 20, 1938.

Subsection (b) provides that section 1 of this amendatory act shall remain in force and effect after its effective date until July 4, 1946, unless the President of the United States finds and proclaims that the Philippine government has repealed or amended or failed or refused to enforce or administer any Philippine law referred to in subdivision (2) of subsection (a) of this section. In the event of such finding and proclamation, section 1 becomes ineffective and American-Philippine trade relations shall be governed by section 6 of the act of March 24, 1934. Subsection (c) provides that section 6 (relating to excise and import taxes) and section 7 of this amendatory act shall become effective upon enactment.

Section 8 makes provisions regarding Foreign Service. It provides that officers—Foreign Service—may be assigned to the Philippines, and during such assignments they shall be considered as stationed in a foreign country subject to regulations prescribed by the Secretary of State. Said Foreign Service officers may also advise and assist the United States High Commissioner to the Philippines in accordance with the act of March 24, 1934, and the ordinance appended to the constitution of the Philippines.

This section shall become effective upon its enactment.
Mr. WELCH. Mr. Speaker, I yield the balance of my time to myself.

Mr. Speaker, the main purpose of this bill is to prevent the destruction of four Philippine industries, which cannot survive the imposition of certain taxes in accordance with the Tydings-McDuffle Act, which will be collected beginning November 1940.

No opposition appeared against giving relief to these four industries in the hearings conducted by the Senate Committee on Territories and Insular Affairs. The bill was unanimously passed by the Senate.

While the House committee did not hold public hearings because of lack of time, it did, however, consider the subject very thoroughly in several executive sessions, with practically every member of the committee taking part in a detailed consideration of the bill and in the deliberations of the committee.

This bill contains very important amendments with reference to cordage manufactured in the Philippine Islands. There are four cordage companies in Manila, one of which is the Manila Cordage Co., an American-owned company.

Out of the 3,000,000 pounds of duty-free cordage shipped to the United States from the Philippine Islands, the American-owned company—although producing 33 percent of the cordage produced in the Philippine Islands—was only allocated less than 1½ percent, or a total of 86,400 pounds, of the quota of 6,000,000 pounds.

The bill under consideration changes this quota as follows:

(2) The quotas for cordage, established by subsection (e) of this section, and by the act of June 14, 1935, shall be allocated by authorities of the Philippine government among the manufacturers of such commodities proportionately upon the basis of the shipment of each such manufacturer to the United States during the 12 months immediately preceding the inauguration of the Commonwealth of the Philippines.

This amendment does justice to the American companies and was approved by the United States Cordage Institute.

In order to remove any doubt or fear that this bill either directly or indirectly changes the provisions of the Revenue Act of 1934, I will refer you to page 20 of the bill, which reads as follows:

And provided further, That no part of the proceeds of the excise taxes herein referred to shall be paid directly or indirectly as a subsidy to the producers or processors of copra, coconut oil, or allied products, except that this provision shall not be construed as prohibiting the use of a portion of said funds for facilities for better curing of copra or for bona fide production loans to Philippine copra producers.

Mr. Speaker, the other amendments referred to are very necessary for the future of the Philippine Islands, and the enactment of this bill into law will be another evidence of the good will and friendship of the American people toward the Philippines.

May I say in conclusion that the time has arrived when this country needs friends in the Orient. We all know what has transpired within the last week with reference to our trade relations with a large eastern power. I refer to Japan. The people of the Philippine Islands are decidedly friendly. They have been our wards since this country took possession of them during the Spanish-American War. It is only just that they receive fair and impartial treatment. That is all this minor bill—I might call it that—provides for; and I sincerely hope, regardless of the fears of my good friend from Michigan [Mr. Crawford], that the bill will pass and that the people of the Philippine Islands will be given the relief they are entitled to under its provisions. [Applause.]

Mr. KOCIALKOWSKI. - Mr. Speaker, I yield the balance of my time to the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. McGehee].

Mr. McGehee. Mr. Speaker, in answer to the gentleman from Michigan, who stated there had been no hearings on this bill before the House committee, I want to inform the membership of the House that the Senate held hearings for some 45 days on this bill, and those hearings were before the committee. In April 1937 a committee was appointed by the President of the United States, which held hearings in both the Philippine Islands and this country for some 14 months. We had those hearings also before us.

The gentleman from Michigan said there was no necessity for the passage of this legislation at this session, intimating that it should be passed over until next session and hearings held on it at that time. May I say to the membership that unless this legislation is passed at this session and were we to delay consideration of the bill for hearings at the next session we know all too well it would be April or May probably before the two branches of Congress could act upon it. Then it would have to be transmitted to the Philippine Islands, which would take some 20 or 25 days. They would have to call their assembly together, call and hold an election, then call the assembly back to adopt it. This would take 200 or 240 days. All this could not be done by the expiration date, November 15, 1940. That is why it is necessary for the passage of this legislation at this session.

Mr. Speaker, I have placed an amendment in this bill, suggested by the cottonseed oil, soy bean, peanut oil, and fat associations, and they have no objection to its passage. We have placed in it an amendment suggested by the cordage institute. We inserted amendments to take care of every industry that is enumerated in this bill and suggested by them, and it should be satisfactory.

[Here the gavel fell.]

The SPEAKER. All time has expired. The question is on suspending the rules and passing the bill.

Two-thirds having voted in favor thereof, the rules were suspended and the bill was passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, House Resolution 268, making in order the Philippine bill just passed, will be laid upon the table.

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT-CUT-OVER REGIONS IN MICHIGAN, MINNESOTA, AND WISCONSIN (H. DOC. NO. 458)

The SPEAKER laid before the House the following message from the President of the United States, which was read and referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union and ordered printed:

To the Congress of the United States:

Exploitation of our resources has created many problems, but none more pressing than in those areas of the United States where a basic resource has been mismanaged and the principal industry has moved or waned, leaving the working population stranded.

The cut-over region in the northern part of the States of Michigan, Minnesota, and Wisconsin was once the scene of a flourishing lumber industry. Today a large section of the population in that area depends for its very existence on public aids, work relief, and security payments. The large expenditures for these purposes in the area have enabled these people to survive, but could not provide a satisfactory permanent solution to their problem.

Members of Congress representing the region appealed some time ago for aid in developing a program to assist the people in the area to find a way of life that would provide opportunity and reasonable security. The problem is now to make the best use of the natural and human resources of the area.

Over a year ago the National Resources Committee began a study of the region, establishing large local committees in order to insure accurate representation and true understanding of the local point of view. Individual reports were prepared by groups representing the cut-over areas in the three States. From these individual reports a summarized version of what is thought to be a feasible program has been developed. This summary constitutes the most recent in the series of regional reports by the National Resources Committee and is entitled "Regional Planning, Part VIII—the Report of the Northern Lakes States Regional Committee."

I am asking that the National Resources Planning Board keep in touch with the regional committee, which sponsored this report, to assist the regional committee in promoting correlation of activities of Federal, State, and local agencies concerned with bringing about the accomplishments desired. I commend the report to your careful study for whatever action may be appropriate.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

CONTRIBUTIONS OF TENNESSEE VALLEY AUTHORITY IN LIEU OF TAXATION

Mr. SPARKMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. Sparkman]?

There was no objection.

Mr. SPARKMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks and to include certain tables, and so forth.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. SPARKMAN]?

There was no objection.

Mr. SPARKMAN. Mr. Speaker, some time ago when the T. V. A. bill was being considered, I stated that at the proper time I would introduce legislation to provide for the replacement of taxes lost in connection with the purchase of certain properties; that that matter was awaiting conference to be held by the T. V. A., the various States concerned, and groups representing those respective States. This conference has been held. A bill has been prepared that carries out generally the wishes of those closely connected with the problem. I have introduced that bill today. I am placing in the RECORD certain statements pertaining to that bill and may I say in this connection that I do not mean the bill suits me absolutely, but it does afford a basis upon which action may be started.

The joint statement, letters, etc., follows:

JOINT STATEMENT OF REPRESENTATIVE SPARKMAN, OF ALABAMA, SENATOR NORRIS, OF NEBRASKA, RELATING TO THE BILL INTRODUCED TO AMEND SECTION 13 OF THE TENNESSEE VALLEY AUTHORITY ACT OF 1933, WITH REFERENCE TO CONTRIBUTIONS OF THE TENNESSEE VALLEY AUTHORITY IN LIEU OF TAXATION

We have today introduced in the House and the Senate identical bills, the purpose of which is to amend section 13 of the Tennessee Valley Authority Act to provide for payments to the States by the Tennessee Valley Authority in lieu of taxation.

Tennessee Valley Authority in lieu of taxation.

The bill provides that a fund shall be created for this purpose by a levy upon the gross receipts from power sales in the fiscal year 1940 of 10 percent of such sales. This percentage shall gradually be reduced during succeeding fiscal years until the fiscal year 1948 and thereafter, when such percentage shall be 5 percent. It is estimated that on account of increased sales practically the same amount of money will be raised during each of these years.

This find as greated shell be divided emong the States where the estimated that on account of increased sales practically the same amount of money will be raised during each of these years.

This fund so created shall be divided among the States where the properties of the T. V. A. are located, as follows: One-half of said fund shall be apportioned by paying to each State the percentage thereof of which the gross proceeds of the power sales by the Corporation within such State during the preceding fiscal year bears to the total gross proceeds from all sales of power. The other one-half of said fund shall be apportioned by paying to each State the percentage thereof which the book value of the power property held by the Corporation within said State bears to the total book value of all property held by the T. V. A. on the same date. The book value of the power property includes that portion of the investment allocated to power. It is provided that the minimum annual payment to each State under this division shall not be less than the 2-year average of State and local ad valorem property taxes levied against said property purchased and operated by the T. V. A. in said State, plus that portion of reservoir lands related to dams constructed by the Government of the United States and allocated to power. The 2-year average is calculated for the last 2 years during which said property was privately owned and operated.

The bill we have introduced is tentative in its nature. We do not intend to attempt to secure the passage of the bill at this session. We introduce it now for the purpose of inviting criticism from all interested parties. We expect further studies to be made of the subject matter by the T. V. A. the tay representatives of the various States.

terested parties. We expect further studies to be made of the subject matter by the T. V. A., the tax representatives of the various States affected, and other experts representing the Government of the United States between now and the beginning of the next session of Congress, at which time it is also our expectation that such studies will be completed and that hearings shall be held upon the bill with a view of changing or correcting anything that appears to be wrong as a result of such studies, that Congress may be informed of all the facts relating to the subject, so that legislation can be had at the beginning of the next session of Congress.

We desire, also, to call attention to the fact that the money to be raised by the provisions of this bill is not the only contribution made in lieu of taxes. When the T. V. A. contracts with a municipality to sell power, it is provided in said contract there shall be paid out of revenues received from the sale of power a sum equal to what the distribution system would pay in taxes if such system were privately owned. The various sums thus raised should be added to the fund created by the bill in order to get a true picture as to what the entire T. V. A. system would pay in lieu of taxes if this is enacted into law.

We have also had printed in the Congressional Record a letter from the Chairman of the Board of the Tennessee Valley Authority, with accompanying tables and statistics, showing the study which has thus far been made by the T. V. A. and the various State representatives of this very perplexing question.

TENNESSEE VALLEY AUTHORITY, Knoxville, Tenn., July 28, 1939.

The Honorable John J. SPARKMAN,

House Office Building, Washington, D. C.

House Office Building, Washington, D. C.

Dear Mr. Sparkman: Some weeks ago during the course of public hearings before the Committee on Military Affairs on the bill to amend the bond-issuing powers of the Tennessee Valley Authority, you stated that you would introduce in this session of the Congress a bill revising section 13 of the T. V. A. Act which deals with payment in lieu of taxes by T. V. A. to the States. You urged that this subject should not be dealt with in the bond legislation because, among other things, it was advisable that conferences be held between the T. V. A. and the States concerned, and that further study be given to the matter. The conferences were proposed for the purpose of seeking agreement on the amount of tax losses that would arise from the transfer of private property to tax-exempt public ownership, and the fiscal effects to be anticipated from such transfers. It was proposed, in addition, that there be an exchange of views between the T. V. A. and the various States on the complicated problem of T. V. A. contributions to the cost of State and local government.

These conferences have proceeded with due diligence. In Ten-the T. V. A. and the various States on the complicated problem of T. V. A. contributions to the cost of State and local government. These conferences have proceeded with due diligence. In Tennessee Governor Cooper appointed a State committee consisting of Mr. George Fort Milton, publisher of the Chattanooga News; Mr. Lon McFarland, general counsel for the Tennessee Railroad and Public Utilities Commission; and Mr. Will Gerber, city attorney of the city of Memphis. A number of conferences were held between representatives of the T. V. A. and this State committee. In Alabama such conferences were had with Governor Dixon, Mr. John W. Lapsley, counsel for the State department of revenue, the Commissioner and representatives of the Department of Revenue, and also with an interim committee of the State legislature appointed for the purpose of considering this subject. In Georgia conferences were had with Governor Rivers and other State officials. In Kentucky the conferences included Governor Chandler and Acting Commissioner of Revenue Reeves. In Mississippi the meeting was with Governor White and Attorney General Rice; and in North Carolina with Governor Hoey.

After consideration of the findings growing out of studies made within the T. V. A. and the points of view of the States, and after extended discussion, the Board has agreed to send the enclosed material to you and to Senator Norris, who also indicated that he would offer a bill on the subject. Included are a draft of a recommended bill to replace section 13 of the T. V. A. statute and preliminary estimates of the payments under the proposed bill and their distribution among the several States during the fiscal years (beginning July 1) 1940-44. Although a reading of this draft will indicate clearly its content, some additional comments may be useful.

1. The in-lieu-payment problem involves fundamental policy ments may be useful.

1. The in-lieu-payment problem involves fundamental policy considerations as well as public-finance issues that are more technical in character. There was considerable difference of opinion on the issues involved within the T. V. A. staff itself and among the able tax consultants who considered the problem. Differing and conflicting interests were found among the States and between the Authority and the various States.

2. The draft of the recommended bill provides that the payment by the T. V. A. to the States as a contribution to the cost of State and local government be 10 percent of gross proceeds from the sale of power for the first year and that it be graduated downward over a period of years to 5 percent. Due to the expanding gross revenues of the T. V. A. from the same service area and without any expansion of its market area the declining percentages are estimated to yield substantially a constant amount until 1949. After that date the amount payable to the States under the constant 5 percent would increase in proportion to revenue expansions.

3. The enclosed statistical tables show that the total estimated annual payments to the States will be approximately $1,200,000. The percentages of gross proceeds from power sales provide about $1,100,000 of this annual payment. The remaining $100,000 is added because of a proviso that the minimum annual payment shall be equal to the former State and local ad valorem property taxes levied on property acquired from utility companies and on that share of the purchased reservoir lands properly allocated that share of the purchased reservoir lands properly allocated to power.

4. An important feature of this recommended bill is a formula for the allocation among the several States of the total payment set aside by T. V. A. for tax equivalents. This formula gives equal weight to (a) T. V. A. power property investment in the State and (b) T. V. A. power revenues derived in the State. Estimates of the percentage distribution by States of power sales and power property are given in the accompanying tables for the fiscal years (beginning July 1), 1940-44.

5. The minimum payment of $10,000 a year to each State means that prior to an allocation of properties in process of construction in North Carolina (Hiwassee) and Kentucky (Gilbertsville, now known as the Kentucky Dam) these States will receive some revenue in recognition of the tax problem which certain of their counties in the reservoirs will experience.

6. The payments to the States under the proposed bill are less

6. The payments to the States under the proposed bill are less than the total of State and local taxes formerly collected on the purchased property and operations of privately owned utilities and private landowners. We consider the 10-percent payment for the first year to be a fair State and local tax equivalent. Since the rower program of the Authority is conferring valuable benefits the first year to be a fair State and local tax equivalent. Since the power program of the Authority is conferring valuable benefits in the area and is producing and marketing a volume of power greatly in excess of the operations that could have been expected under private ownership, it appears equitable that a portion of this tax equivalent be retained by the Authority for the Federal Treasury. The report required on January 1, 1945, should indicate whether or not the allowance for such benefits conforms to sound and desirable fiscal policy.

The only subject dealt with in this recommended draft of bill is the Federal Government's contribution on property which it is the Federal Government's contribution on property which it owns; the contribution to the State and local subdivisions by municipalities and other public agencies owning their own electric facilities is, of course, not included in these computations nor covered by this proposed bill. We have reason to believe that the States—certainly the State of Tennessee, which is most extensively effected, will cover State localities provided as affected—will enact State legislation providing for such payments by municipalities to the State and other local agencies.

As you know, the T. V. A. Board has committed itself to indicate

As you know, the T. V. A. Board has committed itself to indicate to the States and other interested parties the results of its investigations of the facts and its recommendations respecting tax adjustment. Such a report, directed to the agencies with whom we have been conferring, will be made sometime next week.

Drafts of this letter and the proposed amendment to section 13 have been submitted to the Bureau of the Budget, which has advised that there would be no objection to their transmission with the understanding that no commitment would thereby be made with respect to the relationship of the proposed legislation to the program of the President.

Sincerely wours

Sincerely yours,

TENNESSEE VALLEY AUTHORITY. HARCOURT A. MORGAN, Chairman of the Board.

JULY 28 1939

RECOMMENDED DRAFT OF PROPOSED SUBSTITUTE FOR SECTION 13 OF THE T. V. A. STATUTE

T. V. A. STATUTE

In order to render financial assistance to those States and local governments in which the power operations of the Corporation are carried on and in which the Corporation has acquired properties previously subject to State and local taxation, the Board is authorized and directed to pay to the States, for each fiscal year, beginning July 1, 1940, the following percentages of the gross proceeds derived from the sale of power by the Corporation for the preceding fiscal year as hereinafter provided, together with such additional amounts as may be payable pursuant to the provisos in the paragraph next succeeding, said payments to be in lieu of taxes and to constitute a charge against the power operations of the Corporation for the fiscal year then beginning and to be made upon condition that no State, county, or local taxes shall be assessed or levied against the property, operations, or business of the Corporation: For the fiscal year (beginning July 1) 1940, 10 percent; 1941, 9 percent; 1942, 8 percent; 1943, 7½ percent; 1944, 7 percent; 1945, 6½ percent; 1946, 6 percent; 1947, 5½ percent; 1948 and each fiscal year thereafter, 5 percent. Gross proceeds, as used in this section, is defined as the total gross proceeds derived by the Corporation from the sale of power for the preceding fiscal year evaluating nower used by the Corporation or sold exclusive. by the Corporation from the sale of power for the preceding fiscal year, excluding power used by the Corporation or sold or delivered to any other department or agency of the Government of the United States

United States.

The payment for each year shall be apportioned among the several States in the following manner: One-half of said payment shall be apportioned by paying to each State the percentage thereof which the gross proceeds of the power sales by the Corporation within said State during the preceding fiscal year bears to the total gross proceeds from all power sales by the Corporation during the preceding fiscal year; the remaining one-half of said payment shall be apportioned by paying to each State the percentage thereof which the book value of power property held by the Corporation within said State at the end of the preceding fiscal year bears to the total book value of all book value of power property shall include that portion of the investment allocated or estimated to be allocable to power: Provided, That the minimum annual payment to each State shall not be less than the 2-year average of the China. Provided, That the minimum annual payment to each State shall not be less than the 2-year average of the State and local ad valorem property taxes levied against power property purchased and operated by the Corporation in said State plus that portion of reservoir lands related to dams constructed by or on behalf of the United States Government and allocated or estimated to be allocable to power. The said 2-year average shall be calculated for the last 2 tax years during which said property was privately owned and operated: Provided further, That the minimum annual payment to each State in which the Corporation owns and operates power property shall not be less than tion owns and operates power property shall not be less than $10,000 in any case. The determination of the board of the amounts due hereunder to the respective States shall be final.

The payments above provided shall in each case be made to the State not later than July 31 of each year, and it is the in-tention of the Congress that each State shall redistribute said payments or a portion thereof to counties and other local taxing districts affected by the program of the Corporation.

The Corporation shall, not later than January 1, 1945, submit to the Congress a report on the operation of the provisions of this section, including a statement of the distribution to the various States hereunder and the redistribution by the States of the apparts point to the provisions of the constant of the states of the constant of th the amounts paid to them; the effect of the operation of the provisions of this section on State and local finances; an appraisal of the benefits of the program of the Corporation to the States receiving payments hereunder and to the local subdivisions thereof, and the effect of such benefits in increasing taxable values within such States and local subdivisions; and such other data, information, and recommendations as may be pertinent to future legislation.

¹ In general, estimates are calculated on basis of tax levy for year preceding date of Tennessee Valley Authority acquisition of properties. Data are not available for computing tax losses on basis of a 3-year average.

² Minimum payment to States guaranteed under proposed amendment to sec. 13, Drafted July 13, 1839.
³ Includes $1,728 State and local property taxes estimated to have been lost through War Department land purchases for Wilson Dam, Reservoir, and a small amount of reservation located north of the Tennessee River.

⁴ Estimate based upon probable Tennessee Valley Authority land acquisition through fiscal year 1940. Preliminary data indicate that the ultimate tax-revenue loss as a result of Tennessee Valley Authority purchase of reservoir lands in Kentucky may approximate $15,000.

⁴ Includes total computed tax losses resulting from Pickwick, Guntersville, Chickamauga, and Norris Reservoirs, plus estimate of $10,000 for Gilbertsville and $5,000 for Watts Bar Reservoir. Preliminary data indicate that the ultimate tax-revenue loss as a result of Tennessee Valley Authority purchase of reservoir lands for the Gilbertsville project in Tennessee walley Authority purchase of reservoir lands for the Gilbertsville project in Tennessee may approximate $50,000, and for the Watts Bar project, $30,000.

THE LATE RALPH GILBERT, OF SHELBYVILLE, KY.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. Spence]?

There was no objection.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Speaker, his former colleagues from Kentucky have heard with sorrow of the death on yesterday morning at Louisville of Hon. Ralph Gilbert, of Shelbyville, Ky., former Member of the House of Representatives from the Eighth District, now the Fourth District, of Kentucky.

Ralph Gilbert was born in Spencer County, Ky., the son of G. G. Gilbert, who represented the same district in the Congress of the United States from 1899 to 1907.

He was a graduate of the public schools, University of Virginia, and at law from the University of Louisville.

He held the office of county judge of Shelby County, Ky., from 1910 to 1917.

He was elected to the Sixty-seventh, Sixty-eighth, Sixtyninth, Seventieth, and Seventy-second Congresses.

Since retirement from Congress he has been engaged in the practice of law at Shelbyville, and at the time of his death was a member of the State Senate of Kentucky and was the Democratic floor leader of that body.

He was a candidate for the nomination for Lieutenant Governor in the primary election to be held next Saturday, with splendid chances for success.

During his service in the House his legal attainments and his fine ability were generally recognized by his colleagues.

In his death the State and Nation have lost an able, conscientious, and faithful public servant.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks on the subject of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation and to include a brief letter from Mr. Fahey, its Director.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York [Mr. CELLER]?

Mr. CHURCH. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, is that in reply to inquiry from the gentleman from New York and with reference to an inquiry I made some time ago with reference to the H. O. L. C.?

Mr. CELLER. No; it is with reference to the number of loans made by that agency in New York City.

Mr. CHURCH. Mr. Speaker, I object. I understand the gentleman has not replied to a letter I addressed to him, and until I receive that reply I shall have to object for the present.

The SPEAKER. Objection is heard.

Mr. Casey of Massachusetts asked and was given permission to extend his own remarks in the RECORD.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include an article by W. F. Wiley, chairman, State Commission on Stream Pollution in the Ohio River Valley, which is of great interest to the people in my section of the country.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kentucky?

There was no objection.

Mr. RICHARDS asked and was given permission to extend his own remarks in the RECORD.

Mr. DIMOND. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend the remarks I make in the House today with reference to the bill H. R. 5919.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the Delegate from Alaska?

There was no objection.

Mr. GEYER of California. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include therein an address I made before the Washington Chapter of the Descendants of the American Revolution.

The SPEAKER. Is their objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

Mr. COFFEE of Washington. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the Record on two topics, in one to include a radio address delivered by myself, and in the other to insert a letter written by me to the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. Cole].

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Washington?

There was no objection.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

Mr. Voorhis of California asked and was given permission to revise and extend his own remarks in the RECORD.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Mr. Speaker, no one, however optimistic, who has studied the economic problem of the United States believes that under our present monetary system private industry can ever absorb the total volume of surplus savings which are currently being set aside out of the national income. The importance of housing legislation and the lending bill lies in the fact that in these pieces of legislation we are attempting to work out a way in which sound public investment can be made to supplement private investment when it fails.

There can be no question that America needs, above all things, an injection of additional blood into her economic body. That blood is money—real, honest money—circulating in the arteries and veins of trade and commerce.

The housing and lending bills are aimed to accomplish this, among other things. I shall vote and work for the passage of both these bills. Both of them are in line with the clear necessity for increased public investment in fields where private investment cannot be profitable, where the national wealth can be increased and through activity by which the standard of living of the people can be raised.

I must, however, say with as much emphasis as I can possibly say it that in one most important respect both these bills fall short of their objective. Neither bill in its present form proposes to add to the volume of debt-free money in circulation. Both propose further expansion of either public or private debt.

The time has come when one simple truth ought to be heralded throughout this country by every earnest, thoughtful Member of Congress and every citizen who is concerned about the future welfare of his country. It is this: Whenever the economic conditions of a nation require that an additional volume of money, either in the form of currency or of demand deposits, be placed in circulation, then that money should always be put into circulation by that nation's congress without any addition, direct or indirect, to the nation's debt. Nations should borrow money only when there is already a sufficient volume of real money in circulation and when for some reason it is desirable that the spending of this preexisting money be carried on by an agency of government rather than by those currently possessing it. And furthermore—again speaking generally—government should pay, not lend, money into circulation except in cases where it is loaned to local or State public bodies, or loaned for the deliberate purpose of effecting a reduction in the rate of interest generally or on a certain type of loan such as farm mortgage loans, for example. I confess freely that I have compromised this principle many times. I have done so because I was willing, as I still am willing to do the best I can under existing circumstances to improve the conditions of the people.

The existence of "excess reserves" in the banks today simply means that the banks have a capacity to loan demand deposits into circulation equal to five times the amount of these excess reserves. This is a very different thing from money or national credit put directly into circulation by an agency of Congress through the payment of old-age pensions or a retirement of national debt. In the first case we have an instance of private usurpation of the money-creating power. In the second case we would have an instance of the proper exercise of the constitutional power of a sovereign government. The time has come, I think, to speak plainly about some of these things.

WHAT IDLE MONEY MEANS

When people speak of "idle money in the banks" today they may mean deposits which are not being drawn against by depositors or they may refer to the synthetic "money" that could be created by the banks on the basis of their excess reserves, but which as a matter of fact is not now being so created.

AMERICA NEEDS CONSTITUTIONAL MONEY

What is really needed in the Nation is an observance of the Constitution with regard to money, an observance of the truth set forth in a previous paragraph in this speech. We need to start putting money into circulation, debt-free, by the action of the people's Government instead of paying the banks a premium for creating it for us.

Because I believe these things I shall offer amendments to both bills, which amendments are designed to make the United States Government the original source of money for these enterprises and to lift from the shoulders of the people generally the interest burden which otherwise will fall upon them if the bonds of the Housing Authority or of the R. F. C. are sold to private money creators who then, of course, will collect the interest thereon.

OBJECTIONS TO HOUSING BILL ANSWERED

Objections which have been raised to the housing bill are mostly upon the ground of the "great long-continued obligation" which will be incurred by the United States in connection with the annual subsidies. But suppose that instead of the bonds of the Housing Authority being sold to banks for privately created credit they were bought by the Treasury with an extension of national credit and the interest thereon paid to the Treasury. Then the payment of the annual subsidies would be counterbalanced by the receipt by the Treasury of the interest on the bonds of the Housing Authority and the "burden on future generations" would largely disappear. The bonds of the Housing Authority are secured, in turn, by obligations of local housing authorities; and, furthermore, the local housing authorities obtain a large part of the wherewithal to make payments to the United States Housing Authority out of appropriations of

In other words the United States Government not only directly guarantees the bonds of the United States Housing Authority, but also provides annual subsidies to the local housing authorities to enable them to discharge their obligations to the United States Housing Authority. Evidently there is no sense in paying banks a rate of interest to induce them to create deposits with which to buy the bonds of the United States Housing Authority in the first place. To do so is only to subsidize the bankers, because the security all the way through is the security of the Nation's credit. Yet unless my amendment is adopted we will be paying private money merchants for the use of credit which costs them nothing to create and which is doubly guaranteed by the United States Government. The Government can certainly guarantee its own credit quite as well as it can guarantee the credit of private banks.

My amendment to the Housing bill reads as follows:

Page 2, line 7, after "hereby", strike out the period and insert a colon and the following: "Provided, however, That all such additional obligations issued by the United States Housing Authority under the authorization contained in this section shall be sold to and purchased by the Secretary of the Treasury for the United States. The Secretary of the Treasury shall make payment for such obligations of the United States Housing Authority in the following manner: He shall deposit in the Federal Reserve banks non-interest-bearing obligations of the United States in a total amount equal to the total face value of the obligations of the United States Housing Authority which have been purchased; and in payment for such obligations of the United States, the Federal Reserve banks shall establish deposits in favor of the United States Housing Authority in an equivalent total amount."

In other words, under the amendment the Federal Reserve banks would be compelled for the first time in history to exercise their power of creating money in the interest of the Nation instead of in the interest of the private-banking system. This amendment is, in itself, no fundamental reform in our banking system. It is merely an assertion of sound basic principle in this one case. The non-interest-bearing obligations would, of course, be retired as the Housing Authority retired its bonds by repaying the Treasury. Any interest on those bonds would be net income, not to the private Federal Reserve banks, but to the Treasury itself.

To abbreviate all the bookkeeping and intermediaries what my amendment proposes is that: The United States Treasury lend national credit to the local housing authorities for the construction of the houses and that this national credit be paid off and retired by the local authorities, partly out of rents and partly out of subsidies supplied by Congress. Again I ask why pay interest to any private banker to obtain funds to make a loan that the Government is going to pay back to itself? My amendment would avoid that ridiculous situation.

AMENDMENT TO LENDING BILL

The amendment to the lending bill is in such form as to offer at least partial answer to the criticisms that have been made against the gold- and silver-purchase programs. I do not think a metallic base for national currency is at all necessary, and I would fight to the last ditch to prevent any attempt to return to the gold standard. But the American people have bought and paid for certain gold and silver bullion and I see no reason why that metal should not be used now for the people's benefit and to once again avoid the necessity of the sale of bonds by a Government agency—the R. F. C.

This amendment to H. R. 7120 reads as follows:

"(c) The Secretary of the Treasury shall purchase and shall hold and receive for the United States such interest as may be hold and receive for the United States such interest as may be paid upon a total amount of $1,800,000,000 of such notes, debentures, bonds, or other obligation of the Corporation and shall make payment as follows: (1) By the issue of silver certificates in the amount of $1,400,000,000 pursuant to section 5 of the Silver Purchase Act of 1934; (2) by the transfer to the Corporation of gold certificate credits in the amount of $400,000,000, representing part of the value of gold now held in the general fund of the Treasury."

Adoption of that amendment would mean, first, that we would have put $1,800,000,000 of now idle gold and silver to use. Second, that, once again, the principle of the United States Government creating its own money would have been asserted. Third, that a portion of the interest on the loans would accrue to the Treasury of the United States, as the R. F. C. paid interest on its bonds that would otherwise be privately held.

As I said in the beginning, I should prefer to see this needed "blood" injected directly into the economic body of the Nation instead of being loaned into circulation even by a Government agency. I should welcome the day when everyday lending and borrowing of real pre-existing money could and would be handled by private agencies instead of governmental ones-provided always that the rate of interest were kept low. But if we are to have a lending bill let us at least lend credit based on the idle gold and silver which belongs to the people-credit which will be the exact equivalent of national currency, except more convenient to handle. Let us not leave that gold and silver idle and have the R. F. C. go out and sell bonds and debentures—at however low a rate of interest-for privately created credit on the books of the banks.

My amendment is a very conservative one, I think. It proposes only that we use available silver seigniorage and so-called free gold, against which no claim of any sort whatsoever is now outstanding. It does not even propose to touch the stabilization fund which is, it seems to me, probably larger than we need for that purpose. It does not involve any of the gold against which gold certificates have been issued to the Federal Reserve banks. That problem must, I believe, be dealt with by the purchase of the stock of the Federal Reserve banks by the Government, as proposed in several bills now before the Congress.

PRESENT NECESSITY OF PUBLIC INVESTMENT TO COMPENSATE FOR FAILURE OF PRIVATE INVESTMENT

The principle of Government investment is, I believe, a sound and necessary one under present economic circumstances. Under our present money and banking system I do not believe it is even remotely possible for private investment to absorb the huge volume of surplus savings which are annually withdrawn from the stream of purchasing power. I think the only place expansion can take place on a large scale in this day is in the field of a higher standard of living for the people of America. And that in turn must mean many types of activity such as hospital construction, slum clearance, and the like where private investment cannot possibly be profitable. Furthermore, I believe most earneastly that we can wait no longer to make a frontal attack on the problem of preserving the family-sized farm in America. Therefore, I am greatly interested in the farm-loan section of the lending bill and hope it will provide not only for enabling tenants to become farm owners but for saving from foreclosure the farms now owned by those who work them and for a reduction in the rates of interest they now must pay.

These are the basic reasons I am for the housing and lending bills. But I am equally concerned that, in enacting them, we do not violate once again the principle that the sovereign Government of this Nation and it alone has a constitutional right to bring money or credit originally into circulation.

COMMITTEE ON BANKING AND CURRENCY-MINORITY VIEWS

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the minority on the Committee on Banking and Currency may have until midnight tonight to file minority views on the bill (H. R. 7120) to provide for the construction and financing of self-liquidating projects, and for other purposes, and that these minority views may be incorporated with the majority report.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

STOCKS OF STRATEGIC AND CRITICAL MATERIALS

Mr. STEAGALL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (S. 2697) to facilitate the execution of arrangements for the exchange of surplus agricultural commodities produced in the United States for reserve stocks of strategic and critical materials produced abroad, with a House amendment, insist on the House amendment, and consent to the conference asked by the Senate.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER, Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none and appoints the following conferees: Mr. STEAGALL, Mr. WILLIAMS of Missouri, Mr. SPENCE, Mr. WOL-COTT, and Mr. GIFFORD.

GRACE CAMPBELL

Mr. ALEXANDER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to return for immediate consideration to Private Calendar No. 496, the bill (H. R. 3962) for the relief of Grace Campbell.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Minnesota?

Mr. RICH. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, may I ask the gentleman if the Member who previously objected to the consideration of this bill has withdrawn his objection?

Mr. ALEXANDER. I have talked to both the objectors. The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Minnesota?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read as follows:

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to Grace Campbell, the sum of $95.73, in full settlement of all claims against the United States for reimbursement of damages paid by the claimant as a result of a collision of her automobile with United States mail truck No. X-17388 on October 30, 1934: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, on account of services rendered in connection with said claim. It shall be unlawful for any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, to exact, collect, withhold, or receive any sum of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof on account of services rendered in connection with said claim, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

With the following committee amendments:

With the following committee amendments:

Line 5, after the name "Campbell", insert "of Minneapolis, Minn."

Line 6, strike out the sign and figures "$95.73" and insert in lieu thereof "$47.86."

Line 10, after the date "1934", strike out the remaining language of the bill and insert in lieu thereof: "Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or attorney on account of services rendered in connection with this claim, and the same shall be unlawful, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000."

The committee amendments were agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the Record and include therein an editorial from a perfectly good Republican newspaper, the New York Herald Tribune, of today's date, on the subject of the antialien bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. Iglesias asked and was given permission to extend his own remarks in the Record.

COMMITTEE ON RULES

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Rules may have until 12 o'clock tonight to file a rule.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, and I shall not object, will the gentleman tell the House if we are going to call up the spending bill tomorrow?

Mr. RAYBURN. The lending bill.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Spending?

Mr. RAYBURN. Lending.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. I have no objection, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

ANNOUNCEMENT

The SPEAKER. Before adjournment, the Chair thinks it may be pertinent to call attention to the fact that on this day, after having complied with the earnest request of all Members of the House for the consideration of the Consent and Private Calendars, the House has passed more bills than have ever been passed before in 1 day in the House of Representatives, to the number of 244 bills.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker-

The SPEAKER. For what purpose does the gentleman from Pennsylvania rise?

Mr. RICH. I just want to make an inquiry.

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman submit a parliamentary inquiry?

Mr. RICH. I could not say it was a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

Mr. RICH. To ask the Speaker a question.

The SPEAKER. The Chair cannot recognize the gentleman to satisfy his curiosity.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, I want to speak for 1 minute. The SPEAKER. Without objection, so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. RICH. In that minute, Mr. Speaker, I would just like to know whether the taxpayers of the country will be able to withstand the shock when they find out what these 244 bills cost.

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, all these bills passed by unanimous consent. The gentleman from Pennsylvania happens to be a Member of the House with a voice, and he can say "I object" or not, as he chooses.

Mr. RICH. A point of order, Mr. Speaker. Has my time expired?

Mr. RAYBURN. Furthermore, Mr. Speaker, if you look through the Record of this and other sessions of Congress you will probably find that when the roll was called on bills that appropriated money—

Mr. RICH. Regular order, Mr. Speaker; regular order. Mr. RAYBURN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania voted for them.

[Here the gavel fell.]

FIVE YEARS OF THE TRADE-AGREEMENTS PROGRAM

Mr. COX. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Georgia?

There was no objection.

DEMOCRATIC TARIFF MAKING

Mr. COX. Mr. Speaker, recently I took occasion to set forth some of the reasons why it was necessary for the Nation to initiate some form of recriprocal-trade arrangements with foreign countries. The mere mention of the names Blaine, McKinley, Taft, Hughes, and Stimson is enough to dispel any idea that reciprocity as it has developed in the United States is alone a project of the Democratic Party.

For at least half a century the best efforts of the forward-looking leadership of both the Democratic and the Republican Parties have been devoted to the task of taking the tariff out of politics and politics out of the tariff—which is and of right ought to be a strictly economic and nonpartisan field. The culminating and, I believe, the most effective accomplishment in that direction during those 50 years has been the enactment by Congress of the Trade Agreements Act of 1934, the extension by Congress of that act in 1937, and the prosecution of the trade-agreements program under that act.

Examined under every fair and sound test that can be applied, I am convinced that the trade-agreements program has demonstrated itself to be an effective approach to a scientific, practical, and successful application of a sound national-tariff policy. We recognize that our tariff program must produce revenue, adequately protect American industry, labor, and agriculture, and conform to certain principles of international relations—friendship, equality of treatment, and encouragment of advantageous international commerce—which have been the basic principles of the foreign policy of this Government from its inception.

THE TARIFF IS A POLITICAL "NATURAL"

It has been proved in the past half century that taking politics out of the tariff is no small task. There are important reasons why the tariff is a political issue. Politicians discovered that fact far more than a century ago. The effects of the United States tariff touch one way or another every group and every individual in this country. The producer finds the tariff a factor in his business. The consumer finds the tariff influencing his standard of living. The tariff projects into the foreign relations of the United States some of the most complex and difficult problems in that field

Whatever touches so deeply the interests and the welfare of all the citizens of the country tends to be considered from an emotional viewpoint rather than from one of objective analysis. That emotional reaction has not been overlooked by partisan politicians or by others with special advantages to gain.

For still another reason, emotional public reaction to the tariff has dominated scientific consideration. Tariffs and their applications involve economic and industrial questions that are highly technical, questions whose answers depend upon information that can be obtained only through patient, long, and technical research. Faced with these questions, the average citizen is not to be blamed if his attitudes are determined by his emotions or by what may be told to him in convincing words, clothed in elegant rhetoric, and delivered with resounding oratorical effect.

A former Republican member of the United States Tariff Commission and a diplomatic representative of this country, William S. Culbertson, in a book published in 1937, says:

The tariff, however, as a campaign issue, has produced a mass of irrelevant and misleading ideas which are deeply embedded in the prejudices of the American people. Undue emphasis has been given to the noneconomic phases of the problem. Campaigners, party spokesmen, and the press have claimed for the tariff advantages, on the one hand, and evils, on the other, far from reality. Protagonists in political debates have followed the time-worn but not time-honored practice of presenting half-truths, ascribing to the tariff results arising primarily from other causes and inflaming uninformed citizens by an appeal to their prejudice against things foreign. The tariff issue has been, and still is, to a lessening extent, a favorite device for confusing and misleading the American voter. Conclusions are often reached quickly and on less evidence than is demanded by the citizens in probably any other field of policy (Reciprocity, William S. Culbertson, McGraw-Hill Book Co., New York, N. Y., 1937).

Under the old methods of administering the foreign-trade policy of the country primarily through the tariff, emotion and selfishness rather than scientific knowledge were the most powerful stimuli directing action on tariff matters. The United States tariff schedules contain literally thousands of items, each of which exerts its economic effect upon the citizens of the United States and upon their welfare. This is true regardless of the policy framework into which the tariff items may be fitted. To expect any large group to adjust and adapt, on a scientific basis, all these thousands of items, is to expect the impossible.

LOG ROLLING IN ITS MOST PERNICIOUS FORM

On this subject, a Republican Member of the other body made a most pertinent and accurate statement on the floor of the Senate in 1934, when the original Trade Agreements Act was being considered. This Member said, in part:

Mr. President, as I said before, the traditional way to rewrite the tariff laws is for Congress to revise the tariff schedules. But if reciprocal-trade agreements are to be negotiated it does not look as if Congress, from the practical viewpoint, is qualified, or even able, to undertake the task. These agreements will have to be negotiated by some agency of Government with certain bargaining power, and after canvassing the situation in my own mind, the executive branch of the Government seems to be the only logical agency.

As a matter of fact, if the job is only to revise the tariff schedules, if bargaining with other nations is left out of the picture, our experience in writing tariff legislation, particularly in the post-war era, has been discouraging. Trading between groups and sections is inevitable. Log rolling is inevitable, and in its most pernicious form. We do not write a national tariff law. We jam together, through various unholy alliances and combinations, a potpourri or hodgepodge, sectional, and local tariff rates which often add to our troubles and increase world misery. For myself, I see no reason to believe that another attempt would result in a more happy ending (Senator Capper, Congressional Record, June 4, 1934, pp. 10718–10720).

A STEP IN THE RIGHT DIRECTION

At least as far back as 1890 the Congress recognized the impossibility of moving quickly and scientifically to meet developments in the field of foreign commerce wholly by legislative enactment. It made this recognition when, in passing the McKinley tariff bill of that year, it authorized the President, under certain stipulated conditions and limitations, to suspend from the free list the imports of certain specified commodities from countries which might discriminate against the trade of this country. The McKinley Act provided that under such conditions the President by proclamation should cause to be applied to these imports certain tariff rates that were also specified in the act.

In itself this was not a great change from the traditional process of tariff making by legislation, but it signalized a most significant recognition by Congress of the necessity of flexibility in making tariff adjustments to meet certain new conditions as they developed, and the party responsible for this step deserves due credit.

The next step, which followed in 1897, was the Dingley bill, which authorized the President to make tariff reductions on the products of nations which granted to this country concessions on its exports. As it turned out the part of the legislation which called for ratification of certain of the arrangements was unwise because nothing definite was accomplished under the act. This lack of accomplishment was a disappointment to President McKinley, who in his last public utterance strongly expressed himself in favor of reciprocity which would accomplish something. The Dingley Act also unwisely embodied the so-called conditional most-favored-nation principle, under which the benefits of tariff reductions by the United States were restricted to the products of foreign countries which made direct concessions on their imports of the products of this country.

THE COST-OF-PRODUCTION FORMULA

As early as 1904 Republican platforms stated that the measure of tariff protection should be the equalization of costs at home and abroad. Little, however, was said of this new principle during the political campaign of that year. But in 1908 the same formula was characterized as the "true principle of tariff protection." This so-called true principle was to be the definitive solution to the whole tariff question; the tariff was to be taken out of politics through the cost formula. Carried to anything like its logical conclusion, in spite of its engaging appearance, this principle would mean a stoppage of foreign trade. Could not sugarcane be raised under glass in Maine if the tariff were high enough to offset nature of the Tropics? This step, however, was possibly worth while as an experiment, particularly from a constitutional standpoint. I shall have something more to say regarding the results of the so-called true principle shortly.

During the campaign of 1908 the Democrats spoke of a competitive tariff, which on its face would seem to be about the same as the Republican true principle. The true principle was, of course, to include reasonable profits for American producers in addition to the costs. The Democrats recognized that monopolies had grown up in part as a result of high tariffs and believed in something more competitive than costs plus a profits guaranty.

Up to 1909 the Congress made tariff rates primarily on the basis of the information and data gathered for itself and furnished by interested parties. In that year the Taft Tariff Board was established for the purpose of compiling data and information for the guidance of Congress in tariff legislation. In 1917 President Wilson established the Tariff Commission, and for about the first 5 years of its existence it likewise had the function of compiling information largely for the use of Congress itself in tariff making.

THE RECIPROCITY ARRANGEMENT OF 1911 WITH CANADA

A discussion of the subject of reciprocity in relation to tariff making would be incomplete without at least mention of the reciprocity arrangement of 1911 with Canada, which was rejected by that country. It will be recalled that President Taft was willing to stake his political future on this farreaching tariff treaty. He had promised a downward tariff revision in 1908, and apparently placed great store in this arrangement. This treaty, made under a Republican administration, went much further in reducing duties than the present agreement with that country.

As a matter of fact, in that arrangement most agricultural products and raw materials were placed on the free list in both countries. This is quite a contrast to the present position now taken by many members of Mr. Taft's party on tariff matters. Under that agreement milk, potatoes, catle, cheese, wheat, and many other products were placed on the free list. Think of it. Free cheese, potatoes, milk, cattle, products whose duties have been reduced in the recent agreement and from the results of which one might gather that the country has been ruined several times over by the importations, if one is to believe all he reads in the Congressional Record. It is not a sufficient answer to say that the former treaty with Canada was based upon the conditional most-favored-nation clause. The chief complaint has been against the imports of these products from Canada, the chief supplier. In the 1911 arrangement, duties were reduced on many manufactured and semimanufactured products, in addition to the long free lists between the two countries. Although this treaty was rejected by Canada, I think we may well consider the arrangement a step in the direction of reciprocity and in taking the tariff out of politics, and we can thank the Republican Party for this contribution.

In 1922 there were important further steps toward scientific tariff making. In the so-called "flexible tariff" provisions of the Tariff Act of 1922, the President was authorized to make changes in the tariffs, either upward or downward, in order to conform to differences in the costs of production of certain commodities in this country and in foreign countries. The so-called "true principle" in a modified form was given a trial. The changes in rates were limited to not more than 50 percent of the existing rates and were made only after the Tariff Commission had determined what the cost differences were and had specifically recommended the changes to the President. The President did not have to act upon the recommendations of the Commission. As a matter of fact, President Coolidge pigeonholed some reports calling for decreases in tariff rates under this act. Such action, or inaction was a prime reason for criticism of the "true principle." Some of those advocating the "true principle" were untrue to it when it called for reductions in duty.

The most important development in 1922 was the adoption by the United States of the "unconditional most-favorednation policy." Under that policy foreign countries were not required to make any concessions to this country in order to obtain the benefit of tariff reductions; they automatically received those benefits; they gave us no concessions for the few and inconsequential reductions made under the act of 1922.

HAWLEY-SMOOT ACT A SET-BACK

The slow but steady movement toward nonpartisan, scientific methods of making tariffs was, from some points of view, continued in the act of 1930, because that act continued in effect the flexible tariff provisions of the act of 1922, still based upon the "true principle" of cost of production. It also continued the unconditional most-favored-nation policy which had been adopted in 1922, but it largely nullified and offset the advantages and possibilities of these features with an unprecedented raising of the level of tariff rates themselves. The consequence of so drastic a step backward in the rate structure was that the act turned out to be, in some respects, a reverse in the movement for taking the tariff out of politics. The United States turned its back on the elementary principles of commerce and business, in direct defiance of the solemn and clear-cut warning of more than 1,000 of the country's economists. The act of 1930 perpetrated by legislative action and with a complete disregard of scientific consideration and guidance the most disastrous piece of tariff making that we have seen in recent decades. Disregarding the fact that this country had changed from a debtor to a creditor nation as a result of the World War, the philosophy behind the Hawley-Smoot bill was to keep out of this country by excessive tariffs the goods and products with which, and only with which, foreign nations could pay their debts to us. Under the guise of "protecting" American producers, Hawley-Smootism destroyed the foreign markets of American producers and thereby cut the employment and the buying power of American consumers until the domestic market was a fraction of what it had been.

LOGROLLING AGAINST THE FARMER IN THE HAWLEY-SMOOT TARIFF

Nor was the fundamental philosophy of the Hawley-Smoot Tariff the only deplorable aspect of that unfortunate act. In the upsurge of enthusiasm for suicide by the tariff route, there was plenty of "selling down the river" of various groups at the expense of other groups. Probably the most wholesale betrayal was that of the agricultural interest of this country. It will be recalled that it started out to be a limited tariff revision for the benefit of agricultural interests. The trap for the farmers was baited crudely and clumsily, with promises of upward revision of the tariff on farm products and renewals of the old cry about giving the American market to the American farmer. In the Hawley-Smoot Act, tariff rates on farm products were raised, especially on such products as pork, cotton, and tobacco, which are some of the major exports of the American farmer and which he must export if he wants to make a living. The only effect of such tariff increases was to make it all the more difficult, if not impossible, for foreign countries, by selling some of their own goods in this country, to buy the American farmers' crops.

But the "pledge to agriculture" had been fulfilled-the farmer had been given a series of wholly ineffective harmful paper tariff increases; other interests got their share. Group after group, industry after industry put on the pressure. Scientific consideration of tariff changes was abandoned; logrolling, trading, and an indiscriminate riot of tariff boosts that applied to a large proportion of the imports into the United States was the order of the day. The increases had little relationship to the so-called true principle. Cost data from the Tariff Commission on various products was completely ignored; increases exceeded the differences in costs at home and abroad as found by the Tariff Commission—examples, flaxseed, straw hats. The high-tariff philosophy was put into effect by methods which were deliberately made the opposite of the scientific method; the act was a flat violation of the recommendation of trained and expert men. The true principle went overboard.

WHERE UNSCIENTIFIC TARIFF MAKING LED

The story is all too fresh in our memories of the consequences that followed the Hawley-Smoot tariff-boosting orgy of 1930. The foreign markets closed against our exports, the surpluses piled up in this country, the prices went down and down, the lines of unemployed lengthened and lengthened again. The effects of this wholly unscientific tariff-making adventure were by no means limited to agriculture. Total American exports dropped more than one-half from 1929 to 1932. Total national income, which is the key index of the American standard of living, went down from about $80,000,-000,000 in 1929 to about $40,000,000,000 in 1932.

OPPOSITION TO SCIENTIFIC TARIFF MAKING

To every one of the advancing steps which I have enumerated there was opposition—opposition by groups with special interests, political or commercial. These groups found it vastly easier to obtain special advantages for themselves, more often than not at the direct expense of other groups in this country; they wanted tariff rates to be made by the old emotional, logrolling process, under which pressure, secret or open, could be brought to bear, and under which sound, fury, and oratory could be used to stir up prejudices and to becloud purely economic issues. Inequitable, unsound tariffs, special-privilege tariffs, are always easier to obtain in the heat of partisan debate and excitement than in the cold, clear light of informed and scientific investigation. That is why the leaders of both parties, the genuinely outstanding statesmen of the country, have waged this 50-yearlong fight to take the tariff out of politics.

THE RETURN TOWARD SANITY

It will be recalled that tariff reform was called for by the Democratic Party during the campaign of 1932. It should not be forgotten that what is now taking place through trade agreements is a careful and cautious adjustment of the Hawley-Smoot Act; call it reform, repeal, or any other name you wish.

The country was sick of the tariff situation that had been brought about by political medicine dances and by deals with special interests. Congress was ready to turn, and did turn again in 1934 toward more intelligent, realistic, and scientific methods of dealing with one of the most complex and technical economic problems—tariff adjustment. The tariff, in spite of the advance steps already indicated, was still deep in politics. The resultant collapse of our markets, our living standards, and our whole economy was a most convincing argument for another effort to separate politics and the tariff.

To put Americans back to work, to reopen foreign markets for American crops and manufactures, to restore the buying power of American citizens, and to reestablish the American standard of living which had deteriorated so sadly, Congress passed the Trade Agreements Act of 1934.

No such outlandish claims were made then or are made now for that act as were made for that astounding conglomeration, the Hawley-Smoot Act. The Trade Agreements Act was not guaranteed to heal all our economic ills in 30 days, 60 days, or even 6 months. But it was conceived and designed to remove some of the inequitable and unrealistic stumbling blocks and obstacles which were choking our foreign as well as domestic commerce.

In 5 years of operation the trade-agreements program has proved itself remarkably effective in making gains toward its objectives. But this success has not prevented the renewal of special-interest and partisan political attacks on the program. It has largely been subjected to the same type of opposition as were the earlier attempts to break away from political domination in a purely economic field. During this session of Congress we have more than once heard the program attacked with the same half-truths and misleading statements that Mr. Culbertson referred to in his book from which I quoted. We have heard, and we read in the daily press, statements calculated to inflame public prejudice and emotion. The tariff is still what Mr. Culbertson called "a favorite device for confusing and misleading the American voter."

TRADE-AGREEMENTS PROGRAM MEETS TWO TESTS

Any method of putting into effect a sound national tariff policy must conform to the requirements of the American philosophy of democracy in government and must pass the practical test—does it work?

I maintain that the Trade Agreements Act of 1934 and the trade-agreements program that has been based upon that act are in the best American tradition of democratic principles in the conduct of public affairs.

In the first place, Congress, as the legislative branch of the Government, initiates, regulates, and controls the program in its essential aspects. This is in accord with the constitutional provision that Congress shall control matters of interestate and foreign trade and our commercial relations with foreign countries. Congress examined this phase of the Trade Agreements Act most thoroughly in 1934 when the original act was passed, and reexamined it again in 1937 when the act was extended. By the provisions of the resolution extending the life of the act, Congress provided that the legislation should again come before it for review after 3 more years. Aside from the fact that under the Constitution the Congress has the power at any moment to modify or repeal any legislation which it has enacted, the original passage of the Trade Agreements Act and its extension demonstrate the conviction in the minds of Congress that this legislation is in line with the principles of the American way of Government.

CONGRESS MAKES ALL THE RULES

Congress, the legislative body elected by the people, went much further than merely assuring to itself the power of periodical review. Congress set the limits within which changes in United States tariffs may be made under an agreement, restricting those changes to not more than 50 percent of the tariff rates established in existing laws. This principle had already been passed upon by the Supreme Court (Hampton & Co. v. United States, 276 U. S. 394, 409) At the same time Congress provided that no commodity should be transferred from the free to the dutiable list or from the dutiable to the free list, under a trade agreement.

In view of the relatively high level of the tariff rates established under the Tariff Act of 1930, this provision alone would seem to be an adequate safeguard against any unwise impulse toward too sharp a reduction in United States tariffs. Judged from the technical and economic facts, there are few tariffs on the 1930 schedules which could not be reduced from one-fourth to one-half and still give entirely adequate protection to any efficient American productive enterprises which they may affect.

PUBLIC VIEWS AND OPINIONS REQUIRED

Congress in passing the Trade Agreements Act has gone further than merely retaining in its own hands the power to lay down the framework and write the rules.

Under the law public hearings must be held before any agreement is concluded and the views of any persons concerned who care to testify can be heard. In practice, the trade-agreement procedure goes even further than the law requires. The Committee for Reciprocity Information, made up of representatives of the Government agencies that are charged with carrying on the program, not only holds the required public hearings but continuously receives, studies, and analyzes letters, statements, and briefs from the public and from interests affected by proposed trade agreements. The information derived from this material is utilized by the interdepartmental committee of experts who work on the trade agreements.

UNWARRANTED CRITICISM OF HEARINGS

There has been a great deal of irresponsible talk about the alleged inadequacy of the public hearings under the Trade Agreements Act. A comparison of the provision for hearings under this act parallels rather closely the provisions for hearings under the Republican acts of 1922 and 1930 relative to the so-called true principle or flexible provisions. The late Thomas Walker Page, who served for a about a decade on the Tariff Commission, and who was appointed both under a Republican and Democratic administration, said of the hearings under reciprocity:

In the preparation of these trade agreements there has been less secrecy and there has been more opportunity for interested parties to present their views than there has been in any tariff revision for more than a hundred years.

The criticism relative to hearings has been along the lines that the industries involved do not know what is going to happen to the rates of duty on their products until the agreements are signed. It must not have occurred to the critics that this followed the exact methods of the cost-of-production hearings and the announcement of results of the findings by the Tariff Commission by the President. After the public hearings under the acts of 1922 and 1930, the presumption was that the industry affected did not know whether the rates of duty would be increased or decreased until the President signed his proclamation. The Republicans should be flattered that so much of the trade-agreements program has been borrowed from them.

The Committee for Reciprocity Information publishes announcements, well in advance, of any intention to negotiate with a foreign country for a trade agreement, and then publishes a list of all the commodities on which the United States might consider making tariff or other concessions under the agreement when it is concluded. The right of a proper hearing is denied no one.

TECHNICAL ADVICE ON TECHNICAL QUESTIONS

In other ways, the act itself, as drawn by Congress, has guaranteed the democratic nature of the administration of the program. The act does not delegate authority to one man, or even to one governmental agency, to carry out the technical details that are to be fitted into the framework which has been drawn up by Congress itself. Under the statute, Government departments that are primarily concerned with the commercial policy of the United States and with the economic welfare of its citizens must be consulted on the agreements. The law requires that before any agreement is concluded the advice of the United States Tariff Commission, of the Departments of State, Agriculture, and Commerce, and of such other sources as the President may deem appropriate, must be obtained.

The effect of this provision in the law is far more important than might appear at a casual reading of the statute. It means that there are called into consultation, on each agreement, the best experts in the employ of the Government, with the various viewpoints of the agencies from which they are drawn. It means that every economic group in the United States has representation and understanding in the process of framing an agreement, instead of only those groups able to exert pressure. It means that the provisions of the agreements are considered by men unswayed by political bias, relatively free from the pressure of special interests, able to see beyond the horizon of any single district or region; they examine and evaluate the significance to the whole national economy of any approval that may be made in connection with an agreement. This provision itself, perhaps more than any other feature of the entire program, tends to take politics out of the tariff and to establish that sound, expert, scientific method which has been the objective of both political parties for the past half century.

BASIC PRINCIPLES OF OUR FOREIGN RELATIONS

Fundamental to the foreign policy of this Government from its inception have been three principles—friendship with all nations, equal treatment of all nations, and cultivation of mutually profitable commerce with all nations. The trade-agreements program conforms to all three of these principles.

FRIENDSHIP

The trade-agreements program cultivates and furthers friendships by following the method of friendly, across-thetable discussion in the establishment of trade relations with foreign nations. It relies on no threats; it invokes no penalty tariffs and retaliatory restrictions; it involves no economic domination by strong-arm tactics in its dealings with foreign countries. The history of the past 5 years of negotiation for trade agreements is a history of friendly, fair, and straightforward bargaining around peaceful council tables. In its procedure of negotiation the trade-agreements program has been a definite demonstration of the very basic belief of the United States that international differences and international problems can best be settled by friendly arbitration and mutual concession.

It stands out clearly as a demonstration in contrast to the opposite tactics of some nations which have relied on economic force, backed by military might, to gain their ends in international commerce. It is in itself proof that international relations can be established and maintained on a friendly basis.

EQUAL TREATMENT FOR ALL NATIONS

The Trade Agreements Act not only writes into law the unconditional most-favored-nation policy which had been adopted in 1922, but extends that principle to practically all of our commercial relations. As before indicated, the administration that first embraced the principle of unconditional most-favored-nation treatment was a Republican administration. The Congress that wrote that policy into law so that it became more effective was a Democratic Congress. Both parties should have part of the credit for these progressive steps.

In spite of this the unconditional most-favored-nation treatment has been subjected to a considerable amount of partisan criticism. In principle, I repeat, the application of the most-favored-nation treatment under trade agreements does not differ from the Tariff Acts of 1922 and 1930. It will be remembered that these laws required that the United States determine the cost of production in the chief competing countries. Such costs were compared with the domestic costs and the changes in the rates of duty made on this difference. It so happened that practically all the changes under the Tariff Act of 1922 were increases. But all countries were treated exactly alike. Once the costs in the chief supplying country were determined the increased or decreased rates applied to all countries, just as do the changesdecreases-under the most-favored-nation clause under the Trade Agreements Act.

There is this main difference: In the reductions made under the trade agreements, the foreign countries give concessions on American products coming into their markets; under the cost-of-production formula such was not the case; the reductions made were granted to all countries without any specific benefits to our export trade.

This unconditional most-favored-nation policy embodies a positive and active principle for protecting our own exports from unfair treatment in the markets of all other countries. The benefits which we grant to one country through a trade agreement, and automatically extend to other countries through the most-favored-nation clause, may be withheld from the products of a third country, as has been done in the case of Germany, when that country is found to be discriminating against the exports from the United States. This gives every country in the world an incentive—and a strong incentive—to treat our trade fairly. It gives the United States a leverage on every country in the world, whether or not that country has entered into a trade agreement with us. Its effect has been to safeguard our export trade in many markets of the world.

FOR MORE AND BETTER INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Third among the principles of foreign-trade policy that I have enumerated as basic to the American philosophy in this field is the cultivation and stimulation of mutually profitable trade and commerce between the United States and other countries. No foreign-trade program which limits, obstructs, or diminishes that trade is in harmony with American principles. That is why American ideals were outraged by the narrow, restrictive, bilateral balancing trade policies which have been adopted by the dictatorships and which have held down their foreign trade to low levels, rather than expanding it.

The trade-agreements policy is the diametric opposite of such programs. Inherent in the method of making trade agreements is the necessity that through them trade opportunities for both parties shall be expanded. Neither the United States nor the other nation across the table is going to seek a concession, in negotiation, which does not give promise of expanding its trade opportunities. Neither the United States nor the other party is going to grant a concession which restricts or hampers its trade opportunities unless, in return, it obtains a concession which will, in the long run, more than offset any temporary check in the flow of its commerce.

The primary objective of the trade-agreements program, set down in the act itself, and effectively achieved in the carrying out of the program, is to break down the wall of arbitrary, uneconomic, and excessive barriers to trade among nations. The period immediately after 1929 saw a swift and world-wide unspringing of such barriers, with our own Hawley-Smoot tariff law making a notable contribution. Those barriers were designed to cripple, throttle, and kill world commerce, and were remarkably effective in doing so. Such choking of the channels of world trade, such iron-bound halting of international commerce, is the direct antithesis of the traditional and basic American philosophy of foreign commercial relations.

A COMMON SENSE CONCLUSION

Through the trade agreements that have been negotiated under our trade-agreements program, literally hundreds of these barriers have been lowered or removed entirely, through friendly discussion and careful negotiation, not through politics and logrolling. The very obvious common-sense conclusion-in fact, the only conclusion that can be reached through common sense-is that with these barriers out of the way there has been more foreign trade than there would have been had the barriers remained against the stream of commerce. The conclusion is just as sound as ever when it is freely admitted that there have been many other factors, and powerful factors, beside the trade agreements to cause the volume of world trade to move up, or to move down. Some of these factors have been so potent as to offset the net effect of the trade agreements, but that does not mean that the trade agreements have exerted no influence.

Heretofore I have shown how the foreign trade dropped from 1929 to 1933. I now want to indicate the increases in our foreign trade since 1932.

It is seen that the exports in 1938, though not as large as 1937, were 192 percent of the 1932 level. The imports for 1938 were 148 percent of 1932.

I claim that the volume of our exports and our imports has responded to the removal of artificial and excessive barriers to such trade through trade agreements negotiated with 20 countries, encompassing more than half of our total trade, and including some of the biggest trading countries of the world. I intend in the near future to show in a very definite way that the removal of those barriers has unquestionably exerted a steady upward influence on the volume of our foreign trade, in conformity with the American principle of more and better trade with foreign countries.

SENATE

TUESDAY, AUGUST 1, 1939

The Reverend Duncan Fraser, assistant rector, Church of the Epiphany, Washington, D. C., offered the following prayer:

Accept, O God, our memories, our understanding, and our wills. All that we are and all that we possess Thou has bestowed upon us. Grant us only the love of Thee, together with Thy grace, to know and do what is right in Thine eyes, and we are rich enough; nor do we ask for aught besides. Through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.
